

No Jobs, Much Welfare, Future Grim

By Lynn Mulvaney
KINGSTON — Beautiful Ulster County: heavenly landscape, historical heritage. But can you afford to live here? With a persistent 12 per cent unemployment rate, 7,800 without jobs and 11,000 on the welfare rolls, there seems to be no relief in sight for the beleaguered taxpayer.

While federal economic reports contain a vein of optimism and economic indicators continue their upward trend across the country, Ulster County and unemployment remain synonymous.

Not only do we have a back-breaking welfare load, but more than 6,000 persons also receive medical assistance and aid to dependent children has jumped by more than 200 cases in the past year. Ulster's welfare tab is $22.7 million this year.

Worst of all there seems to be no light at the end of the tunnel for, ironically, it is Ulster County's physical attractiveness that seems to be compounding the problem.

New people are reportedly coming into the county daily, attracted by "beautiful" Ulster County, but knowing little of its jobless economy. Out-of-staters hear of the welfare riches in New York State, flock here and naturally look for the more attractive places to live. Also, many an urban dweller who longs for the country and what he feels will be an unhurried simplistic existence, lands on the scene here in Ulster County and finds everything he wants except a job.

Both welfare and unemployment officials report that the influx is taking its toll on the taxpayer and the job market.

The picture becomes bleaker by the day with no more jobs available here than there were a year ago, and unemployment benefits being exhausted hourly.

"If it keeps going this way, no one will be able to collect unemployment benefits anymore. They'll be used up," according to Robert Olmstead of the State Employment Office in Kingston.

With 5,359 persons collecting benefits recently, the office reports that 46 exhausted benefits, 15 exhausted extended benefits, 40 ran out of federal benefits and five ran out of special unemployment.

While there are just so many jobs to go around because of continued indications of widespread resistance to economic expansion, the payroll increases that do occur are in response to immediate need with little or no gearing up to anticipated upward trends. State officials maintain that it has become apparent that manufacturers presently no longer react to forecasts. In-house guaranteed orders which produce immediate return on payroll costs seem to be the only currently acceptable expansion pressure in the manufacturing community.

Efforts to secure more jobs in the area have been made on the county and federal levels. The county's high unemployment figures qualify it for federal aid in the form of grants and loans for public works redevelopment. But the two-year plan, to be submitted for approval, isn't expected to be completed for another month or so. Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago, R-Dist. 8, sees it as a means of attracting economic development and assisting in the creating of long-term employment.

But, Ulster was dealt a stunning blow recently when the federal $6.2 billion jobs bill failed to go through. The county was scheduled to receive about $575,000 for police, fire and government workers plus untold thousands which were earmarked for Ulster—considered for "special treatment" because of its staggering unemployment rate.

With the double burden of unemployment and welfare, county leaders have also been clamouring for welfare reform. Although Welfare Commissioner Bernhard S. Kramer reports that he is within his budget so far this year, he said that like last year, he fully anticipates going to the well again before the year ends.

It was in September of 1975 that the money began to run out and Kramer predicts the same thing will happen again. "It'll be tougher this summer, when a lot of people won't be working," he predicted.

Does Kramer foresee any let up in the swelling welfare rolls? "Not as long as certain legislators in Albany take the view they do," he said, bemoaning the fact that all attempts to initiate welfare reform have fallen on deaf ears.

State Sen. Richard E. Schermerhorn, R-40th Dist., has introduced welfare reform measures which have the support of Sen. Edwyn E. Mason, R-48th Dist., but there seems little likelihood that they will come to fruition.

Meanwhile, Republican-dominated Senate has passed and sent to nearly certain death in the Democratic Assembly a bill trimming basic welfare grants by 10 per cent. The proposal would cut $25 from the basic monthly grant of $258 for a family of four. The measure would save $40.8 million for New York City and $18.2 million for upstate counties.

County leaders were in Albany last week conferring with Gov. Hugh L. Carey but came home disappointed, envisioning no improvement in the welfare situation. Assemblyman George W. Miller, D-71st Dist., chairman of the Assembly Social Services Committee, who represents upper New York City, said "no bills currently filed with his committee would be allowed out of committee by him." Savago said he gave little or no reason for his stand.

In the meantime, rebellions, and there are many throughout the state, continue to claim headlines. Ulster County's own Town of Woodstock has refused to pay welfare bills to the Ulster County Welfare Department and 11 counties in the state have decided to freeze welfare appropriations saying increased expenditures will lead to bankruptcy.

Savago said Ulster would join in the freeze if all 62 counties did the same.

The body of an unidentified man was found Saturday by two persons walking along the shoreline of the Hudson River just south of the Port Ewen Cemetery. The Ulster County Sheriff's Department, which is investigating, said the body appeared to have been in the water for several months. A post mortem is being conducted at the Kingston City Laboratory to determine the cause of death. (Freeman photo)

Can You Penalize Non-Workers When Nobody Offers Them Work?

KINGSTON — How can Ulster County Welfare Department declare anyone ineligible for funds for refusing to work if there are no jobs being offered to the unemployed?

That is the dilemma the department finds itself in today, after having sent 415 persons to the local State Employment Office in Kingston for jobs and having had only eight of them referred for positions and four for job training.

"I hate statistics, they don't mean a thing unless it's what you want them to mean," replied Mrs. Sally Dodge of the Job Placement Division of the Employment Office.

Mrs. Dodge received word of the county's concern in a letter Friday morning from Mrs. Evelyn Weiner, director of public assistance, who wanted to know if perhaps there was some inaccuracy in the reporting or recording of the job statistics.

Mrs. Weiner noted however that in the past the ratio of employable persons to the number of job referrals has been consistent with the latest figures. She said she is not looking to attack another agency but would like the two offices to "work together" to get as many people on payrolls as possible.

Mrs. Dodge agrees but points out that there are no more jobs openings this year than last and that the list of the unemployed continues to grow. She also argues that not all the persons sent to her office for jobs are employable.

"Sometimes we get people whose doctors say they can't work," she explained.

There are other problems as well. She points to the fact that competition is getting stronger all the time with young people finding it tough to compete with older, experienced workers. Employers, too, are demanding more and have found ways of eliminating jobs. For instance, in the past it was common practice to hire a clerk, a secretary and a bookkeeper. Today's employer is apt to seek a secretary with bookkeeping skills and pay her a little more money and save the salary of another worker. Increased job requirements are becoming commonplace on the market.

Mrs. Weiner emphasized that all welfare recipients who are employable are obligated to pick up their checks at the Employment Office and at the same time be interviewed for employment or referrals. Then, if a job is offered and they don't apply, they become ineligible for welfare benefits.

Although the job situation fails to improve, some help has been made available through work relief programs. Only recently Kingston Consolidated Schools and Kingston Water Board joined in the program.

Senate Report Details FBI Abuses

WASHINGTON — FBI domestic intelligence abuses were born 40 years ago in the grim days of the Great Depression, continued through World War II and the cold war years and hit a peak during the civil disturbances of the past decade, a Senate report said Saturday.

The 183-page report, latest in a series by the Senate Intelligence Committee, traced the development of FBI domestic spying activities from 1936 when the executive branch established the bureau's intelligence structure with J. Edgar Hoover in charge.

... And FBI Director Kelley Apologizes

FULTON, Mo. — Saying "we are truly sorry," FBI Director Clarence Kelley apologized to the American public Saturday for abuses of FBI investigative power in "the twilight" of J. Edgar Hoover's career.

"We are truly sorry we were responsible for instances which now are subject to such criticism," Kelley said in his first public apology for Hoover's once-secret effort to watch, harass and discredit thousands of Americans whose politics he opposed.

"Some of those activities were clearly wrong and quite indefensible," Kelley said. "We most certainly must never allow them to be repeated."

Aftershocks Shake Italian Quake Site

UDINE, Italy — New aftershocks jolted northeastern Italy Saturday, as international relief efforts mounted to avert epidemics in the wake of the nation's deadliest earthquake in 61 years.

The United States made available army helicopters, medics and a team of Italian-speaking experts on disease prevention to help avert epidemics caused by decomposing bodies, open sewers and summer-like heat.

Udine official Abramo Barillari said the death toll was likely to reach 1,000 in the Thursday night quake that shattered 50 Alpine foothill towns and was felt in eight European countries.

Ford Against 3Ds for Foreign Policy

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. — President Ford said Saturday at the unveiling of the nation's first life-like statue of Harry S. Truman that foreign policy must not be "demagogued, damaged or derailed" by election year politics.

Tears filled Ford's eyes during an address in Truman's memory before 10,000 persons jammed into Independence Square in the 33rd president's hometown. He said Truman had a bipartisan foreign policy even at election time.

Two Stikes Down, Many to Go

SAN FRANCISCO — A 39-day-old San Francisco city workers strike came to an end early Saturday and agreement was reached on a proposal to end a 5-week technicians' strike against the National Broadcasting Company.

Labor disputes involving the United Rubber Workers walked against four major tire producers; Anheuser-Busch beer bottlers; Teamsters against the United Parcel Service in 13 midwestern and western states, and apartment house workers in New York City, dragged on.

Brave Lebanese Parliament Picks Chief

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Parliament members braved the bullets and mortar bombs of frustrated leftists Saturday and elected conservative Christian banker Elias Sarkis as the new president of Lebanon.

Leftists, answering a call to use "all kinds of methods" to prevent the election, failed to stop 69 members—three more than a quorum—of the 98-man parliament from attending the special session in a no-man's land between the warring Christian and Moslem sides.

The result was a blow to the leftist alliance of socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt, who had supported Raymond Edde to succeed President Suleiman Franjich and had launched a campaign of fighting to block the parliament session.

No Faith in Water Pledges at Boiceville

BOICEVILLE — Would it be just another broken promise in the long history of New York City's "callousness" toward the Catskills? Many who came to testify at the public hearing here Friday night thought so and took an "I'm from Missouri" attitude about the city's announced intention to adopt a new Catskill Mountains reservoir water release program.

Taken by surprise by the appearance of Robert Low, the city's Environmental Protection Administrator and the man many feel is responsible for their problems, most speakers at the hearing minimized his efforts at reconciliation.

Said Low, "We want to be better neighbors in the Catskills. We want to cooperate and do a better and more responsible job. We want to work constructively together in the future."

To that end, he said, "We intend to start a new pattern of water releases from our Delaware River Basin reservoirs (Peapack, Neversink, Cannonsville) to increase and improve fishing waters and recreational conditions in the streams running from them. And to begin another voluntary release program from the Schoharie to the Ashokan Reservoir via the Shandaken Tunnel and Esopus Creek to maintain water temperatures in the Esopus."

Low said the new releases would begin June 15 and would be co-monitored by the State Department of Environmental Conservation. He said the program would be jointly evaluated at the end of the summer season.

If Low's appearance proved a surprise encounter with the lions in their own den, the residents, sportsmen and local officials in large numbers who had come to the hearing loaded for bear refused to be mollified.

John Hoeko of Catskill Waters, an organization of sportsmen, drew cheers of "Go get 'em, baby!" when he took the floor. Suggested Hoeko, "City water officials do not know the meaning of the words, 'good faith.' Low's statement is just another gentleman's agreement—the same old hollow promises; a smokescreen."

He accused the city of long years of "despicable, political boondoggling" in the management of its water resources here, and of "giving no consideration to what happens to the ecosystems below" in the rivers and creeks. Said Hoeko, "We cannot continue to condone this environmental genocide any longer!"

Cheers of "Bravo!" accompanied the reading into the record of a statement of Rep. Matthew F. McHugh, D-27th Dist., by Gabe Kajeckas of his Monticello office.

"The fragile key to the environmental health of our region is our water resources," the statement said. Yet, suggested McHugh, "It has been well established that enormous waste has been occurring for years. Some of the Catskill reservoirs have been spilling for years and, on some days, the spill from a single reservoir is three times the amount of water New York City uses in a single day."

Continued the McHugh statement, "Without a properly orchestrated flow at proper temperatures, the insect life will die, the fish will die, the rivers will die and the region's greatest natural resource will have perished. If this comes to pass, it will not be because it is the inevitable course of nature. On the contrary, it will be a manmade act, ordained by a disease of attitude on the part of those who have the power to rectify past abuses before it is too late."

Although Low had assured the audience the city thought it had "an obligation" in the matter, another statement read by Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, D-101st Dist., in behalf of Frank Mele of Catskill Waters, called New York's management of Catskill rivers "one of the greatest crimes ever committed against an environment."

Mele's statement accused the city of "robber baron disdain;" said proper releases "can be made without depriving New York of a single drop of water." It suggested "negotiation is useless since there has been no evidence of good faith." Calling for legislation by the state to end the city's "dictatorial rule in this matter," the Mele statement said, "Our Catskill rivers are no less national treasures than the Hudson River."

Chuck Schwartz of the Phoenicia Fish and Game Association also drew applause when he suggested, "The reason we're getting cooperation from New York tonight is that they have something else they want to 'give' us." That gift, which will be of no value, he said, is a proposed pumped storage generating facility near Prattsville on the Schoharie Reservoir. He said its construction would muddy the water, disturb the silt and contribute to fish kills.

Many other speakers testified, including members of Trout Unlimited Inc., who expressed "outrage over the abuses rendered Catskill rivers due to New York City's reservoirs mismanagement and lack of concern for the environment and local economy."

And, finally, Donald F. Warren of Shokan apparently spoke for all when he suggested, "All we ever hear from New York City is gentlemen's promises, and I think that's all we've heard tonight. Low is here tonight and gone tomorrow."

Indeed, Low was already gone as Warren, a fifth generation area native who has fished the Esopus for 55 years, spoke. He had left the hearing long before its conclusion, a fact duly noted by the dozens more who testified.

Most who spoke, however, had gone on record as favoring a recent report of the Department of Environmental Conservation suggesting better minimum flows from reservoirs in terms of millions of gallons per day allowable. And in favor, too, of an act introduced in the State Assembly by Hinchey and others that would amend the environmental conservation law in relation to reservoir releases and regulate the volume and rate of change of volume of releases of water from reservoirs.

The Boiceville hearing was co-chaired by Hinchey and Assemblyman G. Oliver Koppell, D, L-84th Dist and chairman of the Assembly Standing Committee on Environmental Conservation. Both Hinchey and Koppell assured the audience they were "committed to bringing the matter to a just resolution, and would be looking to see that some of the promises made will indeed be fulfilled."

Hinchey (r) draws a laugh from Low, one of Low's few during the evening.

Girl Dies in Connelly Accident

CONNELLY — Her foot caught on the bicycle tire while riding double Friday night along Connelly Road, and 14-year-old Dawn Lopez of Kingston tumbled to the pavement into the path of an oncoming car.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Benedictine Hospital after being struck by the swerving vehicle, driven by Catellino Viviani, 21, who was trying to avoid collision.

According to the Ulster County Sheriff's Department, the young resident of 89 Hone Street was riding with a 15-year-old friend (identified as Timothy Ellsworth of 50 Post Street) along the road from Connelly to Route 9W when the accident took place and the two fell from the bicycle. Ellsworth was treated at the hospital for minor injuries and released. Viviani was also admitted to Benedictine Hospital for observation. No charges have been pressed.

The accident was investigated by uniformed deputies of the sheriff's department under the supervision of Sheriff Thomas Mayone.

In another fatal auto accident, this one on Saturday, a Red Hook man has been charged with driving while intoxicated, unreasonable speeding, and unsafe tires.

State police said that Thomas Mabie, 23, of Linden Avenue, Red Hook was driving the southbound car on the Taconic State Parkway in southern Dutchess County when it struck a center barrier and overturned.

Killed was Thomas Kittrick, 19, a passenger, of the Putnam County town of Mahopac.

Mabie was issued summonses by state police for the violations and was treated for minor injuries at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

And yet another Dutchess County accident Saturday claimed the life of Gary L. Emkler, 21, of Poughkeepsie who died when his car ran off Route 82 in the Northern Dutchess Town of Stanford, hitting a utility pole and a tree, said state police.

Yet, suggested McHugh, "It has been well established that enormous waste has been occurring for years. Some of the Catskill reservoirs have been spilling for years and, on some days, the spill from a single reservoir is three times the amount of water New York City uses in a single day."

Continued the McHugh statement, "Without a properly orchestrated flow at proper temperatures, the insect life will die, the fish will die, the rivers will die and the region's greatest natural resource will have perished. If this comes to pass, it will not be because it is the inevitable course of nature. On the contrary, it will be a manmade act, ordained by a disease of attitude on the part of those who have the power to rectify past abuses before it is too late."

Although Low had assured the audience the city thought it had "an obligation" in the matter, another statement read by Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, D-101st Dist., in behalf of Frank Mele of Catskill Waters, called New York's management of Catskill rivers "one of the greatest crimes ever committed against an environment."

Mele's statement accused the city of "robber baron disdain," said proper releases "can be made without depriving New York of a single drop of water." It suggested "negotiation is useless since there has been no evidence of good faith." Calling for legislation by the state to end the city's "dictatorial rule in this matter," the Mele statement said, "Our Catskill rivers are no less national treasures than the Hudson River."

Chuck Schwartz of the Phoenicia Fish and Game Association also drew applause when he suggested, "The reason we're getting cooperation from New York tonight is that they have something else they want to 'give' us." That gift, which will be of no value, he said, is a proposed pumped storage generating facility near Prattsville on the Schoharie Reservoir. He said its construction would muddy the water, disturb the silt and contribute to fish kills.

Many other speakers testified, including members of Trout Unlimited Inc., who expressed "outrage over the abuses rendered Catskill rivers due to New York City's reservoirs mismanagement and lack of concern for the environment and local economy."

who has fished the Esopus for 55 years, spoke. He had left the hearing long before its conclusion, a fact duly noted by the dozens more who testified.

Most who spoke, however, had gone on record as favoring a recent report of the Department of Environmental Conservation suggesting better minimum flows from reservoirs in terms of millions of gallons per day allowable. And in favor, too, of an act introduced in the State Assembly by Hinchey and others that would amend the environmental conservation law in relation to reservoir releases and regulate the volume and rate of change of volume of releases of water from reservoirs.

The Boiceville hearing was co-chaired by Hinchey and Assemblyman G. Oliver Koppell, D, L-84th Dist. and chairman of the Assembly Standing Committee on Environmental Conservation. Both Hinchey and Koppell assured the audience they were "committed to bringing the matter to a just resolution, and would be looking to see that some of the promises made will indeed be fulfilled."

Hinchey (r) draws a laugh from Low, one of Low's few during the evening.

Girl Dies in Connelly Accident

CONNELLY—Her foot caught on the bicycle tire while riding double Friday night along Connelly Road, and 14-year-old Dawn Lopez of Kingston tumbled to the pavement into the path of an oncoming car.

She was pronounced dead on arrival at Benedictine Hospital after being struck by the swerving vehicle, driven by Catellino Viviani, 21, who was trying to avoid collision.

According to the Ulster County Sheriff's Department, the young resident of 89 Hone Street was riding with a 15-year-old friend (identified as Timothy Ellsworth of 50 Post Street) along the road from Connelly to Route 9W when the accident took place and the two fell from the bicycle. Ellsworth was treated at the hospital for minor injuries and released. Viviani was also admitted to Benedictine Hospital for observation. No charges have been pressed.

The accident was investigated by uniformed deputies of the sheriff's department under the supervision of Sheriff Thomas Mayone.

In another fatal auto accident, this one on Saturday, a Red Hook man has been charged with driving while intoxicated, unreasonable speeding, and unsafe tires.

State police said that Thomas Mabie, 23, of Linden Avenue, Red Hook was driving the southbound car on the Taconic State Parkway in southern Dutchess County when it struck a center barrier and overturned.

Killed was Thomas Kittrick, 19, a passenger, of the Putnam County town of Mahopac.

Mabie was issued summonses by state police for the violations and was treated for minor injuries at Vassar Brothers Hospital in Poughkeepsie.

And yet another Dutchess County accident Saturday claimed the life of Gary L. Emkier, 21, of Poughkeepsie who died when his car ran off Route 82 in the Northern Dutchess Town of Stanford, hitting a utility pole and a tree, said state police.

Trout Populace Up in Streams

KINGSTON — The annual stream stocking odyssey of the Federated Sportsmen's Clubs of Ulster County was completed last week, and now 2,300 new rainbow and brook trout are swimming the streams in Ulster County in search of (some fishermen hope) an enticing lure.

The stream stocking program was funded by the Federation and the Ulster County Legislature, through its Conservation Committee. The necessary permits — stipulating the number of fish that could be released in any given stream — were obtained from the Region III office of the Department of Environmental Conservation in New Paltz.

The fish — 1,750 10-12 inch rainbows and 650 similar sized hybrid brook trout — were purchased from a fish hatchery in Saratoga and transported to Saugerties in a large tank truck.

Led by a caravan of Federation members, including president Frederick G. Faerber III and second vice-president Steve Schwartz, the fish-laden tank truck followed a 300-mile route through the county, stopping at some 30 locations to deposit the fish.

By 9:30 p.m., the last trout had found its way from tank truck to stream. Fish were stocked in streams from the Plattekill in Saugerties to the Sanburg Creek in Ellenville, and from the Silver Hollow in Phoenicia to the Black Creek in Highland.

In all, more than 2,300 fish were stocked during the daylong project, even though the federation had purchased only 2,000. The hatchery threw in the extras to compensate for any losses during the day, but the cool rainy weather cut substantially into the fatalities.

The federation stream stocking project was aimed specifically at accessible public waters most often frequented by children. The Department of Environmental Conservation conducts its own stocking program of the more heavily fished streams in Ulster County.

The federation was assisted during the day by legislator C. Freeman Lasher, chairman of the Conservation Committee, a long time proponent of the stocking program.

Another Bid Chance For Davi at Dietz

KINGSTON — Fred Davi and the Kingston Community Baseball Association will, it appears, get another chance to win the summer concession rights at Dietz Stadium.

When the two bids were opened last week, Davi came out second best to Michael Andrews, who operates Uncle George's Hot Weiners on Broadway. But the Building Repair and Supply Committee, after reviewing the bids, decided to readvertise.

According to City Clerk Louis DeCicco, the committee found several deficiencies in the bid specifications and documents. DeCicco explained that city had been "using the same specs for years" and never bothered to insure that they were kept up to date.

DeCicco said the specifications would be "revamped," and that the concession bid would be readvertised at a later date. It is believed that the Dietz concession stand will be more lucrative than ever this year because of the scheduled opening of the new city swimming pool at the stadium.

Davi, the general manager of the Kingston Community Baseball Association, has operated the concession stand for the past 25 years. The bid submitted last week by Andrews represented the first major challenge to Davi's reign as concession king at Dietz Stadium.

DePew reacted quickly Friday when called to the scene of an agitated man in a third floor apartment at 61 Main Street, Rosendale. The man, stating, "You guys aren't doctors," reportedly turned and attempted to leap out the window, smashing the plate glass and cutting himself badly.

DePew grabbed the distraught man (later described by an Ulster County Sheriff's Department as "an attempted suicide") and wrestled him back into the room, then notified the police after subduing the man.

A sheriff's department spokesman said the subject appeared to be "strung out and incoherent" and had to be restrained with handcuffs. No criminal charges against him are contemplated, he said. The man was reported to be in Benedictine Hospital's intensive care unit late Saturday.

Richard Reno, of Saugerties escaped serious injury early Saturday when the car he was driving along Sawkill Road crossed the left lane into a ditch, rolled over, struck a utility pole, and continued another 15 feet before coming to rest on a steep embankment, said Ulster County Sheriff's deputies.

The 19-year-old youth, of 19 Simmons Drive, told police he had fallen asleep prior to the 12:35 a.m. accident. He was ticketed for failure to keep right and treated for facial lacerations at Kingston Hospital.

Arrested at the Towne Tavern was William Kidd, 30, who reportedly resisted his exit from that establishment and later broke a telephone apart in the police station, said police. He was placed in jail in lieu of $500 bail by Village Justice Ronald W. Elias, with a reappearance in court scheduled for Tuesday.

Landfill Restraining Order Continued

KINGSTON — The attorney for Dutchess Sanitation, Inc. argued in Ulster County Supreme Court Friday that the temporary restraining order prohibiting the disposal of garbage at the Plattekill landfill jeopardizes refuse collection throughout the Mid-Hudson region and threatens the existence of a $1.5 million enterprise.

But it didn't do any good. Supreme Court Justice Edward Conway refused to lift the restraining order, and marked the case for trial beginning May 17.

The hearing in Supreme Court Friday was scheduled for Dutchess Sanitation to show cause why a permanent injunction should not be issued banning future dumping at the Plattekill site.

After hearing arguments from both sides, Justice Conway declined to issue a ruling. Instead, he ordered that the question of both a permanent injunction and a temporary injunction be further argued in trial next week.

At issue in the case is whether an ordinance enacted by the Town of Plattekill banning the importation of solid wastes is applicable to Dutchess Sanitation.

It is the contention of Dutchess Sanitation that the original town ordinance prohibited only the dumping of out-of-town garbage at the town-owned landfill; that even though the ordinance was later amended to include a ban on the dumping of out-of-town garbage at private landfills as well, Dutchess Sanitation had established a prior non-conforming use that could not be superseded by the amended ordinance.

Attorney Harold L. Mangold, representing Dutchess Sanitation, said the original landfill site had been used by other local carting firms since 1965; that, in effect, a precedent had been established for continued dumping at the site by Dutchess Sanitation.

But attorney Michael Forrester, representing the Town of Plattekill, pointed out in court Friday that the original landfill site, where the prior non-conforming use had been established, consisted of only 74 acres; that Dutchess Sanitation has purchased an additional 279 acres in the past year, and is negotiating for the purchase of 150 acres more.

"A huge dumping area is envisioned here," said Forrester, "the Town of Plattekill is becoming the garbage dump of Ulster County."

Forrester also argued that the expanded landfill area has led to an invasion of rodents and packs of wild dogs, has caused increased noise pollution and has disrupted the natural wetlands of that area.

Mangold, in his statement before the court, suggested that a more universal view of the issue be considered. He pointed out that the actions on behalf of 4,000 Plattekill residents has caused not only "irreparable harm" to Dutchess Sanitation, but to others — such as the City of Kingston and Ulster County — as well.

"This business provides a definite municipal service," said Mangold, "it serves the City of Kingston, Ulster County, the Kingston City Schools, and others. Since the restraining order went into effect, all our services with those customers have stopped."

Mangold also noted that the firm has not been able to properly maintain the landfill site or the equipment located there because company employees may be subject to arrest if they enter the site.

Justice Conway, in continuing the restraining order, stipulated that company personnel be allowed to enter the property to make necessary repairs to the equipment and to maintain the premises. But he emphasized that Dutchess Sanitation will not be allowed to dump garbage at the site until a ruling is made following the May 17 trial.

Another Big Year For Direct Sales

ITHACA—If consumers follow their intentions, 1976 should be another big year for fruit and vegetable growers who sell their produce directly to housewives.

A Cornell University survey in five western New York counties found that consumers intend to buy as much or more local produce for table use and freezing and canning this season as was bought last year.

Prof. R. Brian How, agricultural economist at the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Cornell, and Kenneth W. Stone, regional Cooperative Extension specialist at Batavia, report that consumers show no sign of slowing their rush to farmers' stands and pick-your-own fields. The trend for direct grower-to-consumer sales has accelerated in recent years.

Direct sales of fruits and vegetables are estimated at more than $60 million in New York State, where there are about 1,000 commercial roadside markets, some 350 pick-your-own operations, and about 70 farmers' markets.

In the mail survey of consumers in Erie, Monroe, Niagara, Onondaga and Ontario Counties, How and Stone found that about half of the 3,200 respondents bought from "U-Pick" operators or farmers' markets, and two-thirds of them patronized roadside markets in 1975.

Despite some expected unhappiness over prices of fruits and vegetables, most customers were generally satisfied with produce bought from growers last year.

"With some increases and decreases noted, most consumers plan to buy at least as much produce from growers as was bought last year," say How and Stone.

Pick-Your-Own operations seem to be in for the greatest increase in business, and farmers' markets and roadside stands to a lesser degree, according to survey results.

U-pick sales were most popular in Niagara County but less so in Monroe County where roadside markets are the best liked direct sales outlets. The highest proportion of respondents patronizing farmers' markets was in Onondaga County, reflecting the success of the Syracuse city project.

Pick-your-own buyers seem more attracted to fruits such as apples, strawberries and cherries, and sometimes tomatoes. For vegetables, they prefer to buy at growers' roadside outlets or from farmers' market stalls.

The Cornell study showed county to county differences in consumer buying patterns, reflecting the availability of various crops and the extent of grower outlet development.

Start Beekeeping With Facts Handy

Kingston—The best time to start beekeeping in New York State is between mid-April and mid-May. The best way is to purchase a three-pound package of bees and a queen from a supplier in one of the southern states.

Packaged bees are advertised in the monthly beekeeping trade journals. Additional information may be found in Cornell Information Bulletin No. 7, "Package Bees: Their Installation and Immediate Care." It is available from Ulster County Cooperative Extension at 74 John Street, Kingston, or from the Mail Room, Bldg. 7, Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850. The cost is 25 cents.

A second method of starting is to buy an established colony of honey bees from a beekeeper. Colonies of bees are selling for $40 to $80 each, depending on the strength of the colony and condition of the equipment.

Colonies of honey bees which are sold or moved must be accompanied by a certificate of inspection issued by the state apiary inspector, Gerald Stevens, Division of Plant Industry, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, N. Y. 12226.

A bacterial disease, American foulbrood, causes the loss of one per cent of the colonies of honey bees in New York State annually. Without an inspection certificate, one runs a risk of buying diseased bees. The disease has no effect on man but usually results in the death of the colony.

It is possible to remove bees from the side of a building or to take them from a bee tree. However, considerable experience is required to do it and it is recommended that persons interested in starting in beekeeping in this manner seek the advice of an experienced beekeeper.

Swarming in honey bees takes place between May 15 and July 15 in most of New York State. A swarm may contain as few as 3,000 bees and a queen or as many as 30,000 worker bees with their queen. If the weather is favorable and the swarm has been able to forage normally, the bees are relatively gentle and can be shaken into a hive with ease. During cool or rainy weather, swarms of honey bees may exhaust the supply of food which they carry and the swarm may become excessively protective and sting badly. Again, the first time one captures a swarm it is best to be accompanied by an experienced beekeeper.

Palmer Details CE's History

By William H. Palmer

As administrator of the Ulster County Cooperative Extension Association, I am pleased to announce that we will be reporting every other week with news and information from Cooperative Extension.

One of the questions often asked is "What is cooperative extension, what is its history, and what are its goals and objectives?" We hope to answer some of these questions in our reporting on activities, information articles and program opportunities for helping people help themselves.

Cooperative Extension was organized in Ulster County on Dec. 19, 1913. Judge A.T. Clearwater of Kingston was first president of the association, known as the Ulster County Farm Bureau in those days. Harold VanDeuser of Kingston was secretary and David Burgin of Kingston was treasurer. Sponsors of the organization were the County Pomona Grange and the Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

Finances were obtained from an appropriation from the Ulster County Board of Supervisors and contributions from businessmen from Kingston and farmers throughout the county. The businessmen reported the need for information and assistance to the rural community was of prime importance to them as well.

Agriculture and related industries, natural resources, consumer information, stability of the family, environmental quality, effects of technology on food, clothing and the home, as well as community development CE programs serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

CE provides an organized delivery system to disseminate research-based information to farm, rural non-farm, and urban citizens. Knowledge disseminated by CE is generated primarily through the research and information gathering resources of the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, State College of Human Ecology, Cornell University Agricultural Experiment stations at Ithaca and Geneva (with a regional laboratory at Highland), and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Although widely recognized as a provider of factual information for solutions to practical problems, CE also serves the public in a larger context through its adult education and youth-oriented programs' distributing information through newspapers, radio, television, newsletters, result demonstrations, test plots, bulletins, tours, training schools, short courses, seminars and many other kinds of educational meetings and activities.

Local Help

The magnitude and scope of programs offered would not be possible without the aid of hundreds of unpaid local volunteer leaders who give their time, energy and talent to help plan and carry out a variety of community programs.

To pass on the findings of research and new technology

from the College of Agriculture and USDA it was necessary to have a professor in the county directing the program—"A prosperous agriculture and rural community means everyone benefits, businessmen and consumers as well," reasoned the early city supporters of the Farm Bureau.

In 1956 the name was changed to the Ulster County Cooperative Extension Service Association. Since its inception, association programs have been aimed at meeting the needs of people in areas that they can do best and not duplicate programs of other agencies.

The Big Picture

Cooperative Extension is part of a nationwide system of educational agencies involving a financial and administrative arrangement among three levels of government, federal, state and county. This national system encompasses 69 land grant universities and staffs in nearly all counties. Cornell University is the New York State land grant university.

As a grassroots organization, Cooperative Extension programs are carried out by professional and volunteer leaders at the county level. It serves the county by working directly with those concerned with human development.

We are most fortunate in being a part of this national system in Ulster County. Thanks to continued financial support by county government and the assistance of local leaders, CE has been a viable part of total county programs since 1914. The three divisions of CE, agriculture, home economics and 4-H youth, located at 74 John Street, Kingston, may be contacted for more information on programs offered.

HIGH FALLS—Biting into a crisp, juicy apple used to be a now-and-then thing. "Now" was fall and early winter. "Then" was the rest of the year.

That has all been changed, thanks to a storage system that allows apples to "breathe" and remain fresh for extended periods of time.

"We have extended the season for apples just like they did for bananas," says Martin Russak of High Falls, better known to his farm market customers as "Mr. Apples."

The storage system that makes it all possible is known as Crisp-Aire, a registered trade mark of the New York and New England Apple Institute in Westfield, Mass.

A blast of chilly 34-degree air hits the visitor when "Mr. Apples" opens the door of his large walk-in cooler. A bright yellow Golden Delicious apple stored in the cooler is fresh and juicy, cold enough to numb the teeth and as firm as it was the day it came from the tree.

"People come here and ask us if we have any leftover apples at this time of year," the owner said. "These aren't leftovers—they are as fresh and flavorful as they were when they were picked last fall."

The Crisp-Aire process was born more than 30 years ago when Dr. Robert Smock, professor of pomology at Cornell University, discovered that apples breathe and that they can be put to sleep in a scientifically controlled atmosphere to remain crisp and fresh long after ordinary cold storage apples have shriveled and lost their flavor. Dr. Smock, now retired, proved that no additives were needed to keep apples fresh longer if the proper atmosphere is provided.

Translating research into reality is one of the many functions of the Ulster County Cooperative Extension. William Palmer, at that time the fruit specialist with UCCE, worked closely with local apple growers, testing the new techniques devised by the Cornell scientists and translating their findings into commercial techniques.

"The cooperation we had from the growers was outstanding," said Palmer, now the cooperative extension agent and coordinator of Ulster County programs of UCCE's three divisions. "Their participation and willingness to experiment at a time when we weren't sure of the results were a big help."

Ulster County's leadership is shown by statistics. More than half of the controlled atmosphere storage in the state was in Ulster County for more than 10 years, and the county now has a storage capacity of 2,500,000 bushels.

When "Mr. Apples" went into the fruit business on a major scale, Palmer worked closely with him, advising him on planting, fertilizing, spraying and the million-and-one other things a modern fruit grower must know.

The heart of his storage system, designed by Paul Sturges of Stone Ridge, is a large fan in the roof of the cooler, which together with vents in the four corners can completely change the atmosphere in less than two minutes. The air is washed in brine to reduce the oxygen content, retarding breathing of the apples and literally "putting them to sleep."

New apples from the first pick of the new crop are stored for at least 90 days in a sealed cooler under a process supervised and licensed by the New York Department of Agriculture and Markets, before becoming available for sale.

How long can apples be kept with the Crisp-Aire process? The Apple Institute is still trying to find out. Apples that have been stored for 10 years are tested periodically and are still in good shape. Officials say that a layman would have difficulty in telling the difference between a stored apple and one fresh from the tree.

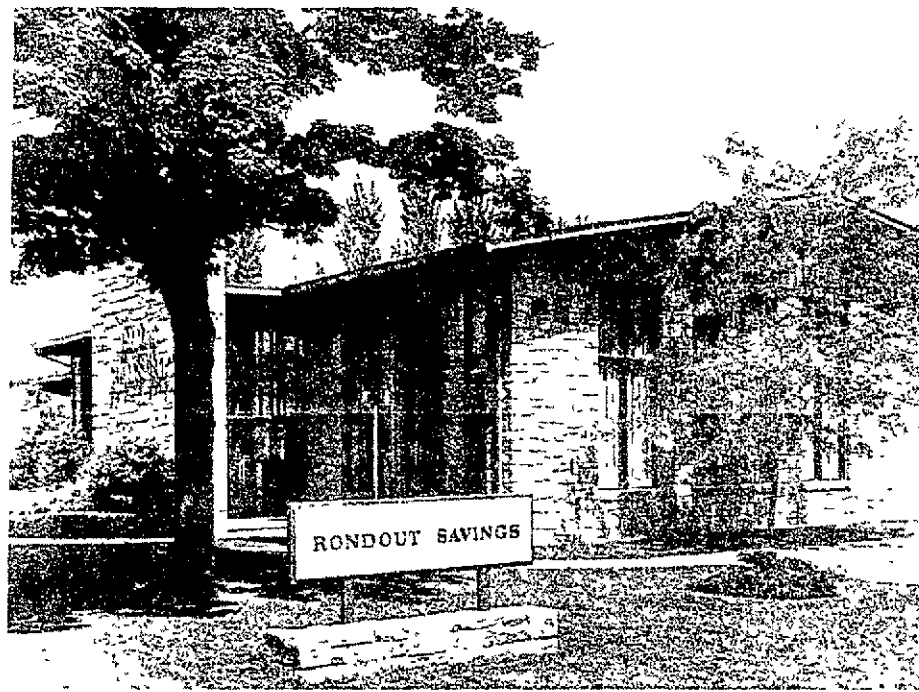

"Mr. Apples" attributes the distinctive flavor of his apples not only to the Crisp-Aire storage but to the fine fruit soil at the falls of the Rondout and to the organic management of his farm where no chemical fertilizers are used. Those who prefer organic foods will be interested to know that there are no chemicals involved in the storage process, either.

It's working

A somewhat different bank

Many people think that all banks are pretty much the same . . . but they're really not. There are big, impersonal banks in which nobody ever gets to know anybody. Rondout Savings is a somewhat different bank. We're a small bank, but we pay the same rates of interest, grant mortgages and loans at the same rates — and you soon get to know everybody here.

We also do a lot of things for the community. Like our Kingston High School Art Show in March, and our Valley Forge Diorama right now, and our Fourth Annual Little Gardens Club of Kingston Flower Show in June. And a special Bicentennial Display in July. The general public is always invited to these events — nothing to buy, no deposit necessary, you don't even have to be a Rondout customer. Just come — and enjoy!

Plan Ahead to Learn for Life

Kingston—"Plan ahead, take advantage of these educational opportunities," advises Mrs. Wayland Eppard, chairman of the home economics division.

"Program emphasis this year is aimed at helping the consumer," she noted. "Inflation and recession have combined to put many families behind the eight ball."

The home economics division philosophy and main goal is illustrated by an old Chinese proverb: "Give a hungry man a fish and you help him for today. Teach him to fish and you help him help himself forever."

Spring 1977 will see such topics taught as Pattern Alteration, Egg Cookery, Vegetable Gardens, Living With Teenagers, Making Pressing Equipment, Wine Cookery, Canning and Freezing.

Drying Fruits and Vegetables. Pre-registration is required for all these classes.

In addition, there will be Lunch and Learn sessions on the first Wednesday of the month. Topics for this series change with the season and current problems.

Also new this year is a nutrition workshop scheduled for the third Friday of the month from 10 a.m. to noon. For these two activities no pre-registration is required. Come to one or attend all.

Keep in touch with the Home Economics Extension for further developments.

Another Big Year For Direct Sales

ITHACA—If consumers follow their intentions, 1976 should be another big year for fruit and vegetable growers who sell their produce directly to housewives.

A Cornell University survey in five western New York counties found that consumers intend to buy as much or more local produce for table use and freezing and canning this season as was bought last year.

Prof. R. Brian How, agricultural economist at the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, Cornell, and Kenneth W. Stone, regional Cooperative Extension specialist at Batavia, report that consumers show no sign of slowing their rush to farmers' stands and pick-your-own fields. The trend for direct grower-to-consumer sales has accelerated in recent years.

Direct sales of fruits and vegetables are estimated at more than $50 million in New York State, where there are about 1,000 commercial roadside markets, some 350 pick-your-own operations, and about 70 farmers' markets.

In the mail survey of consumers in Erie, Monroe, Niagara, Onondaga and Ontario Counties, How and Stone found that about half of the 3,200 respondents bought from "U-Pick" operators or farmers' markets, and two-thirds of them patronized roadside markets in 1975.

Despite some expected unhappiness over prices of fruits and vegetables, most customers were generally satisfied with produce bought from growers last year.

"With some increases and decreases noted, most consumers plan to buy at least as much produce from growers as was bought last year," say How and Stone.

Pick-Your-Own operations seem to be in for the greatest increase in business, and farmers' markets and roadside stands to a lesser degree, according to survey results.

U-pick sales were most popular in Niagara County but less so in Monroe County where roadside markets are the best liked direct sales outlets. The highest proportion of respondents patronizing farmers' markets was in Onondaga County, reflecting the success of the Syracuse city project.

Pick-your-own buyers seem more attracted to fruits such as apples, strawberries and cherries, and sometimes tomatoes. For vegetables, they prefer to buy at growers' roadside outlets or from farmers' market stalls.

The Cornell study showed county to county differences in consumer buying patterns, reflecting the availability of various crops and the extent of grower outlet development.

Start Beekeeping With Facts Handy

Kingston—The best time to start beekeeping in New York State is between mid-April and mid-May. The best way is to purchase a three-pound package of bees and a queen from a supplier in one of the southern states.

Packaged bees are advertised in the monthly beekeeping trade journals. Additional information may be found in Cornell Information Bulletin No. 7, "Package Bees: Their Installation and Immediate Care." It is available from Ulster County Cooperative Extension at 74 John Street, Kingston, or from the Mail Room, Bldg. 7, Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y. 14850. The cost is 25 cents.

A second method of starting is to buy an established colony of honey bees from a beekeeper. Colonies of bees are selling for $40 to $80 each, depending on the strength of the colony and condition of the equipment.

Colonies of honey bees which are sold or moved must be accompanied by a certificate of inspection issued by the state apiary inspector, Gerald Stevens, Division of Plant Industry, New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, N.Y. 12226. A bacterial disease, American foulbrood, causes the loss of one per cent of the colonies of honey bees in New York State annually. Without an inspection certificate, one runs a risk of buying diseased bees. The disease has no effect on man but usually results in the death of the colony.

It is possible to remove bees from the side of a building or to take them from a bee tree. However, considerable experience is required to do it and it is recommended that persons interested in starting in beekeeping in this manner seek the advice of an experienced beekeeper.

Swarming in honey bees takes place between May 15 and July 15 in most of New York State. A swarm may contain as few as 3,000 bees and a queen or as many as 30,000 worker bees with their queen. If the weather is favorable and the swarm has been able to forage normally, the bees are relatively gentle and can be shaken into a hive with ease. During cool or rainy weather, swarms of honey bees may exhaust the supply of food which they carry and the swarm may become excessively protective and sting badly. Again, the first time one captures a swarm it is best to be accompanied by an experienced beekeeper.

Plan Ahead to Learn for Life

Kingston—"Plan ahead, take advantage of these educational opportunities," advises Mrs. Wayland Eppard, chairman of the home economics division.

"Program emphasis this year is aimed at helping the consumer," she noted. "Inflation and recession have combined to put many families behind the eight ball."

'Sleeping' Apples Wake Up as Good as New

Some of the crisp, juicy apples from last year's crop are displayed by "Mr. Apples" in the cooler of his farm market in High Falls. Apples are kept firm and flavorful through the novel "Crisp-Aire" process.

Palmer Details CE's History

By William H. Palmer

As administrator of the Ulster County Cooperative Extension Association, I am pleased to announce that we will be reporting every other week with news and information from Cooperative Extension.

One of the questions often asked is "What is cooperative extension, what is its history, and what are its goals and objectives?" We hope to answer some of these questions in our reporting on activities, information articles and program opportunities for helping people help themselves.

Cooperative Extension was organized in Ulster County on Dec. 19, 1913. JUDGE A.T. Clearwater of Kingston was first president of the association, known as the Ulster County Farm Bureau in those days. Harold VanDeuser of Kingston was secretary and David Burgin of Kingston was treasurer. Sponsors of the organization were the County Pomona Grange and the Kingston Chamber of Commerce.

Finances were obtained from an appropriation from the Ulster County Board of Supervisors and contributions from businessmen from Kingston and farmers throughout the county. The businessmen reported the need for information and assistance to the rural community was of prime importance to them as well.

Agriculture and related industries, natural resources, consumer information, stability of the family, environmental quality, effects of technology on food, clothing and the home, as well as community development. CE programs serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion or national origin.

CE provides an organized delivery system to disseminate research-based information to farm, rural non-farm, and urban citizens. Knowledge disseminated by CE is generated primarily through the research and information gathering resources of the State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, State College of Human Ecology, Cornell University Agricultural Experiment stations at Ithaca and Geneva (with a regional laboratory at Highland), and the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Although widely recognized as a provider of factual information for solutions to practical problems, CE also serves the public in a larger context through its adult education and youth-oriented programs' distributing information through newspapers, radio, television, newsletters, result demonstrations, test plots, bulletins, tours, training schools, short courses, seminars and many other kinds of educational meetings and activities.

Local Help

The magnitude and scope of programs offered would not be possible without the aid of hundreds of unpaid local volunteer leaders who give their time, energy and talent to help plan and carry out a variety of community programs.

To pass on the findings of research and new technology

from the College of Agriculture and USDA it was necessary to have a professor in the county directing the program—"A prosperous agriculture and rural community means everyone benefits, businessmen and consumers as well," reasoned the early city supporters of the Farm Bureau.

In 1956 the name was changed to the Ulster County Cooperative Extension Service Association. Since its inception, association programs have been aimed at meeting the needs of people in areas that they can do best and not duplicate programs of other agencies.

The Big Picture

Cooperative Extension is part of a nationwide system of educational agencies involving a financial and administrative arrangement among three levels of government, federal, state and county. This national system encompasses 69 land grant universities and staffs in nearly all counties. Cornell University is the New York State land grant university.

As a grassroots organization, Cooperative Extension programs are carried out by professional and volunteer leaders at the county level. It serves the county by working directly with those concerned with human development.

We are most fortunate in being a part of this national system in Ulster County. Thanks to continued financial support by county government and the assistance of local leaders, CE has been a viable part of total county programs since 1914. The three divisions of CE, agriculture, home economics and 4-H youth, located at 74 John Street, Kingston, may be contacted for more information on programs offered.

HIGH FALLS—Biting into a crisp, juicy apple used to be a now-and-then thing. "Now" was fall and early winter. "Then" was the rest of the year.

That has all been changed, thanks to a storage system that allows apples to "breathe" and remain fresh for extended periods of time.

"We have extended the season for apples just like they did for bananas," says Martin Russak of High Falls, better known to his farm market customers as "Mr. Apples."

The storage system that makes it all possible is known as Crisp-Aire, a registered trade mark of the New York and New England Apple Institute in Westfield, Mass.

A blast of chilly 34-degree air hits the visitor when "Mr. Apples" opens the door of his large walk-in cooler. A bright yellow Golden Delicious apple stored in the cooler is fresh and juicy, cold enough to numb the teeth and as firm as it was the day it came from the tree.

"People come here and ask us if we have any leftover apples at this time of year," the owner said. "These aren't leftovers—they are as fresh and flavorful as they were when they were picked last fall."

The Crisp-Aire process was born more than 30 years ago when Dr. Robert Smock, professor of pomology at Cornell University, discovered that apples breathe and that they can be put to sleep in a scientifically controlled atmosphere to remain crisp and fresh long after ordinary cold storage apples have shriveled and lost their flavor. Dr. Smock, now retired, proved that no additives were needed to keep apples fresh longer if the proper atmosphere is provided.

Translating research into reality is one of the many functions of the Ulster County Cooperative Extension. William Palmer, at that time the fruit specialist with UCE, worked closely with local apple growers, testing the new techniques devised by the Cornell scientists and translating their findings into commercial techniques.

"The cooperation we had from the growers was outstanding," said Palmer, now the cooperative extension agent and coordinator of Ulster County programs of UCCE's three divisions. "Their participation and willingness to experiment at a time when we weren't sure of the results were a big help."

Ulster County's leadership is shown by statistics. More than half of the controlled atmosphere storage in the state was in Ulster County for more than 10 years, and the county now has a storage capacity of 2,500,000 bushels.

When "Mr. Apples" went into the fruit business on a major scale, Palmer worked closely with him, advising him on planting, fertilizing, spraying and the million-and-one other things a modern fruit grower must know.

The heart of his storage system, designed by Paul Sturges of Stone Ridge, is a large fan in the roof of the cooler, which together with vents in the four corners can completely change the atmosphere in less than two minutes. The air is washed in brine to reduce the oxygen content, retarding breathing of the apples and literally "putting them to sleep."

New apples from the first pick of the new crop are stored for at least 90 days in a sealed cooler under a process supervised and licensed by the New York Department of Agriculture and Markets, before becoming available for sale.

How long can apples be kept with the Crisp-Aire process? The Apple Institute is still trying to find out. Apples that have been stored for 10 years are tested periodically and are still in good shape. Officials say that a layman would have difficulty in telling the difference between a stored apple and one fresh from the tree.

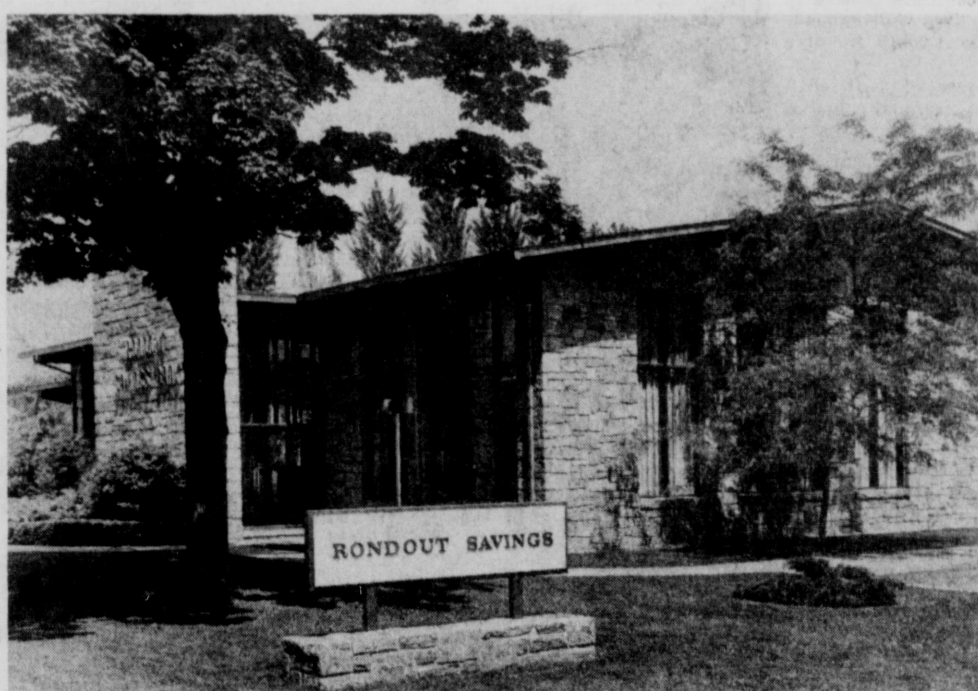

"Mr. Apples" attributes the distinctive flavor of his apples not only to the Crisp-Aire storage but to the fine fruit soil at the falls of the Rondout and to the organic management of his farm where no chemical fertilizers are used. Those who prefer organic foods will be interested to know that there are no chemicals involved in the storage process, either.

It's working

Thanks to you

A somewhat different bank

Many people think that all banks are pretty much the same . . . but they're really not. There are big, impersonal banks in which nobody ever gets to know anybody. Rondout Savings is a somewhat different bank. We're a small bank, but we pay the same rates of interest, grant mortgages and loans at the same rates — and you soon get to know everybody here.

We also do a lot of things for the community. Like our Kingston High School Art Show in March, and our Valley Forge Diorama right now, and our Fourth Annual Little Gardens Club of Kingston Flower Show in June. And a special Bicentennial Display in July. The general public is always invited to these events — nothing to buy, no deposit necessary, you don't even have to be a Rondout customer. Just come — and enjoy!

Freeman Readers Write

Unselfish Efforts

Editor's note: The Freeman did not leave the untiring efforts of the volunteer fire service out of the story on purpose. Police agencies who gave us the story didn't mention the volunteer firemen. Until these letters arrived, we weren't aware of their heroic efforts. We laud these volunteers for their efforts.

Dear Editor:

I wish to comment on the report in your paper of Thursday April 22, 1976 - Page 32 headed "Recover body of creek victim."

This sad event eventually involved seventy-five people - two of them in acts of heroism, the rest in acts of dedicated service, all for people they did not know. All of these people dropped whatever they were doing at the moment, came out, and stayed until the job was done. They did not do it for pay. They did not do it for applause. They did it because it needed to be done.

In your report, the only mention was of one of the heroes. Period.

The Ulster County Sheriff's Dept. was not on the scene Wednesday night. They were there on Thursday morning, only because a car on patrol stopped to see what the activity was all about.

According to your meager report, none of the other people involved exist.

Before any calls went out, a man living nearby answered the cries for help, dove into the creek, caught hold of the victim, but was unable to hang on to him. By this time, the first rescuer was in trouble himself. A second neighbor dove into the creek, and brought the first rescuer to shore. Hero number one and hero number two!

In the meantime, the Marletown Rescue Squad, having been called, arrived on the scene, treated rescuer number one, and called the High Falls Volunteer Fire Company for search and recovery.

Chief Peter Zegel of High Falls called the Bloomingtown, Binnewater, Stone Ridge and Rosendale Volunteers. These companies responded with boats, rope, life preservers, grappling hooks, lights and generators and men. A call was put in to County Fire Control Center for divers. Responding to this call were four divers from the Ulster County Divers Association and two divers from the Mt. Marion Fire Co. As word of the incident spread, volunteers from many other County fire companies came to the scene, on their own initiative, bringing equipment, and joining in the search. Many private citizens did the same.

The fast and varying current combined with a bottom composed of huge sharp-edged rocks and overhanging ledges made systematic grappling impossible. It was done as thoroughly as possible for some time, until the divers arrived, and took up the search.

The stream conditions made the divers job extremely difficult. They had to explore not only open bottom, but also the underside of overhanging ledges and the spaces under the large irregular rocks on the bottom.

Two ropes were rigged across the stream, each rope being pulled tight by a group of men on each bank of the stream. The divers' life lines were looped over the ropes, to keep them from being swept down stream. Even with this help, it was difficult for the divers to conduct a thorough examination of the bottom. This work was all being done in the dark, except for the areas covered by portable flood lights, which blind as much as they illuminate. Under water, the only light was the divers hand lights.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the High Falls and Rosendale Fire Companies brought sandwiches and coffee to the scene, as most of the people involved had left home before supper.

The operation was suspended at about 11:30 p.m. by Chief Zegel. The pickup was difficult. As the generators were shut down, the cables and lights had to be picked up with the aid of flashlights, the parties of men ferried from the opposite shore in the dark, and all the scattered gear collected.

The search was resumed at first light the next morning, with many of the same people back again, and was continued until the divers found the victim's body.

The divers deserve a great deal of credit. Thursday night, they were in the water for almost three hours, except for time to change air tanks. Without them, recovery would not have been possible.

I find it very strange that on your front page of Thursday's Freeman appeared a very detailed report on the activities and arrest of a few people involved in what I can only label as an evil business, while buried on the back page is a report that totally ignored this tremendous force for good, projected by a large number of people, a cross section of the community, none of whom had to be there at all, but came together to help people they did not know, because help was needed.

Sincerely,

JAMES H. JOHNSON

Assistant Chief

Dear Editor:

I am confused about the information written in the article "Recover Body of Creek Victim", page 32, April 22, 1976 of the Daily Freeman. As chief of the High Falls Fire Department, I must inform you of the volunteer community service that came to the aid of the drowning victim and his family.

Prior to the call for the High Falls Fire Department and the Marletown First Aid Squad two men went into the water to save the victim. The victim was swimming with two other people, one of whom was pulled to shore and saved by one of the two men. The distance across the water was considerable and the men had to swim a swift current to reach both men swimming, one who was trying to save the other.

The wife of Mr. Van Hoorn, one of the gentlemen who was trying to save the drowning man, made the calls for both the Marletown First Aid Squad and the High Falls Fire Department. Help from both organizations came immediately.

The fire company under my direction set-up the pre-plan organization for retrieving a drowning victim.

The Township of Rosendale Firemen's Association of which the High Falls Fire Department is a member has a boat mounted on a trailer with such accessories as life jackets, lights, rope and four sets of grappling hooks and can be manned on a minutes notice when such an alarm is sounded. Other private and fire company boats were pressed into service within an half hour of our initial call to search for the victim.

Through the fire service and the State Police four volunteer divers were on the scene that evening working under adverse conditions, under flood lights, and working for better than three hours trying to find the victim.

It was the fire company which called the parents, who met the parents, then the first aid squad had to spend great energy to console the parents at the scene. A doctor had to be called to administer his professional help, a clergyman was called and he spent the remaining time with the family, including the next day when the last rites were given.

Search operations were suspended at about 11 p.m., a decision that was made between the State Police and the fire service. At 11 P.M. fire boats were still in the water grappling, four divers were searching the depth of water and five fire companies with approximately 75 men were still working. The Ladies Auxiliary of the High Falls Fire Company had made coffee and sandwiches for all who came to the canteen.

The Ulster County Bureau of Fires were requested by me to send a representative from their department to the scene to assist in the search operations. Mr. Duncan Wilson, Deputy coordinator spent the better part of the evening with us. The next day, Mr. Wesley Clark, County Fire Coordinator, was on the scene to assist.

The decision was unanimous to return at 6 A.M. the following morning to continue the search for the victim. At this time another fire company entered the search with a boat and grappling equipment. The Ulster County Sheriff's department patrol car was in the area and stopped by to see if they could assist. They offered their grappling equipment which we accepted by our department. The same four divers returned and through their untiring efforts found the body of John Hayes. I feel strongly that the fire service should have been recognized for their untiring efforts in this search. I estimate a good nine hours were spent by about 75 firemen who assisted in the search for young John Hayes. If the person writing this article had called the Ulster County Fire Control Center or I as Chief of the High Falls Fire Department could have given this writer information by phone then the volunteer community service would have been recognized.

The community volunteer service gives many hours to the improving and protection of their communities. We ask that you please support our volunteer efforts when writing such articles to the general public. I am sure they would like to know what we are doing.

If I can be of any further service to you please call me. Thank you again for the time in reading my long concerned letter.

Cordially,

PETER W. ZEGEL

Chief High Falls Fire Department

Says 'Go' to Hall

Dear Editor:

To Gus Hall, Communist - I would like to tell you, Mr. Hall, that all patriotic Americans are not members of the John Birch or any so called Society. We love America and know that our stupid politicians are being lulled to sleep with talk of detente with Russia.

It is a fact that every Communist has one goal in life - to bring America to its knees and under the Red rule. I sincerely hope that any place you speak, people are not stupid enough to be taken in by you. As for me I'd still rather be dead than Red.

By the way, Comrade Hall, why aren't you living in the country you admire so much? It sure isn't America.

"Bedfellows"

William F. Buckley Jr.

Goldwater and Reagan

When, late in the evening of primary day, it became clear that Ronald Reagan was going to win in Indiana, John Chancellor of NBC zoomed in on him and asked how he could account for the strange unity of criticism coming at him from Nelson Rockefeller, representing (at least, traditionally) the left end of the Republican spectrum, and Barry Goldwater representing the right spectrum?

There was as much fatigue written over Reagan's face as there was glee over Chancellor's, who rightly calculated that there was very little Reagan could answer under the circumstances that would dispose of the diplomatic ambush. The author of the Eleventh Commandment managed a smile, and said; "I've never believed in divisiveness within the Republican Party, as you know, John. I think everybody would agree that I did my very best to knit the party together in California in 1966, after the chaos of 1964."

Churchill could not have done better, and, as a professional, I have to admire the smoothest fido of the season. But O my lords, O my lieges, what on earth are we doing? Put together everything said against the Republicans by Humphrey, Carter, Jackson, Udall, and Bella Abzug, and you cannot match the destructiveness of the criticism being leveled against Republicans by Republicans.

Both Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan are in part responsible for this. I am required to say, because my affection for Goldwater would not permit me to dissimulate, that I think he has been the principal aggressor this time around, and for reasons I cannot fathom.

Most conspicuously played up by the press is the position taken by Reagan about Panama. This was used by James Reston as the handle for the cockiest piece of political vaticination (Reagan "won't last for long") since Mr. Reston reassured his readers, in the winter of 1963, that Nelson Rockefeller had as much of a chance losing the Republican nomination in 1964 as he had of going broke. They are loving it. They are quoting Goldwater, whose remarks are never noticed by the liberal press except when they serve their purposes, endlessly. It was Goldwater who said about Reagan that he did not understand the issues of the Panama Canal, that if he did he would side with Gerald Ford; and that if we didn't negotiate a new treaty with Panama, we'd find ourselves engaged in "guerrilla warfare."

Now the following quotation is not adduced out of any spirit of meanness by Barry Goldwater. Quite the contrary, I proceed to prove that Senator Goldwater was exactly correct when he wrote in 1963 (Why Not Victory, McFadden, page 34) "Does anyone seriously suppose...that our generous decision to permit the Panamanian flag to fly over American territory in the Canal Zone will placate the Panamanian nationalists? The gesture is bound simply to whet the mob's appetite and transfer its sights to bigger targets." Guerrilla warfare?

Conceivably. Under certain circumstances, the United States would have to fight guerrilla warfare, urban warfare, tank warfare, nuclear warfare. They tell us that we must revise our treaty in Panama because it is, in the fashionable phrase, the "last vestige of American colonialism in Latin America." If it is the last vestige of American colonialism, pray what is our base in Guantanamo? Are we supposed to give it up too? Castro, in 1964, decided to try a little attrition on Guantanamo, and he turned off the water supply. Candidate Goldwater said that Castro should be told to "turn it (the water) on or the Marines are going to turn it on." And Senator Goldwater was not categorically against guerrilla warfare. In fact, he said that if he were President, he would train and equip refugees to fight a guerrilla war in Cuba, supply them by air drop and give them air support if necessary. Of course, that was only two years after a Democratic President had launched an amphibious operation against Castro. But even so, there was talk about using guerrillas to fight on foreign soil. Whatever you call Panama (concerning which, please see my next dispatch — on it, and Mr. Reston), it is hardly foreign soil. It is an American responsibility secured by treaty. The notion that it is reckless to be prepared to defend it suggests a failure of nerve. Nobody who knows Mr. Goldwater can believe that of him, but it is hard to believe that he is helping his party.

A Welfare Case

WASHINGTON—"Please sit down Mr. er, er Mr. Tompkins."

"Yes, ma'am."

"Now, Mr. Tompkins, I am the social worker assigned to your case. Have you ever applied for welfare before?"

"No, ma'am, and I never thought I'd ever see the day when I would."

"Well, let's review your case. It says here that you were a congressman for four terms, a governor for two terms, and a senator for one term."

"Yes ma'am." "Now, Mr. Tompkins, I am the social worker assigned to your case. Have you ever applied for welfare before?"

"No ma'am, and I never thought I'd ever see the day when I would." "Well, let's review your case. It says here that you were a congressman for four terms, a governor for two terms, and a senator for one term."

"Yes ma'am, I have references here that indicate everyone thought I did a good job."

"I see. Please don't cry, Mr. Tompkins, I'm here to help you."

"I'm sorry, it's just that ... well, it's not easy for me to one day be a presidential candidate and the next day to be asking for welfare." "You were a presidential candidate?" "Yes, ma'am. I was until last week. Here is some of my campaign literature. You see here it says 'Tompkins for President'— and that's a picture of my wife and my family, and that's me holding up my fingers in a 'V for Victory' sign." "You have a nice family, Mr. Tompkins. I hope you don't think I'm prying, but I do have to have this information for my records. What happened between the time you ran for President and today when you came here?" "It didn't happen all at once. I started out with a fairly good-size campaign fund; maybe $500,000. Then we went into New Hampshire and spent half of it. I didn't do too well in New Hampshire so my campaign manager said we'd have to make an all-out effort in Florida. "He assured me we could afford it because we would be getting funds from the government to match what we raised. We blew a pot of money on TV commercials in Florida and ran fourth. I was highly encouraged because I had predicted I would come in fifth; so coming in fourth could be interpreted as a victory. "Un-

U.S. Aiding Junta

WASHINGTON — In defiance of both Congress and the United Nations, the Ford Administration has gone behind the barn to bolster the military dictatorship of Chile.

The UN, following up our own reports of repression and torture inside Chile, has condemned the junta for violating human rights. And only last week, the respected Inter-American Human Rights Commission denounced the junta for its torturous tactics.

Congress reacted by imposing a $90 million limit on economic aid for Chile this fiscal year. It was the intent of Congress, clearly, that the aid should go directly to needy people. Other nations have also refused to extend credit to the beleaguered dictatorship.

Nevertheless, the Administration has shaken loose hidden money to bail out the junta. Here are the hush-hush developments:

— The Overseas Private Investment Corporation, a quasi-official U.S. institution, has quietly agreed to begin insuring companies that invest in Chile. The State Department, according to our sources, twisted OPIC arms. This should stimulate a flood of investment capital into the country.

— Both the State and Treasury departments have also encouraged 14 U.S. and Canadian banks to loan the military dictatorship $100 million to $125 million. The loan is needed to pay off short-term obligations to other countries. Britain and Italy have refused to reschedule Chilean debt payments because of the regime's human rights violations. New York's First National City Bank will put up most of the money for the junta, with the financial support of the Bank of America, several New York banks and two Canadian banks.

— U.S. advisers have also brought pressure upon the Inter-American Development Bank's President Antonio Ortiz Mena, who has promised that the bank will loan up to $125 million to Chile. The first $20 million already has been approved.

—The State Department gave Chile a $55 million housing guarantee that a House subcommittee believes exceeded the $90 million congressional ceiling. "The Administration clearly has sought to evade the spirit, if not the letter, of the congressional aid ceilings to Chile," declared Chairman Don Fraser, D-Calif.

We have been chronicling the Chilean saga since we reported on March 21, 1972, that the Central Intelligence Agency and International Telephone and Telegraph were conspiring together to undermine the Chilean economy. Their objective was to oust President Salvador Allende, an elected Marxist, from power.

The CIA at first denied participating in economic sabotage against the Allende regime but, three years later, was forced to confess our story was true after the Senate Intelligence Committee published the proof.

The former Nixon Administration, meanwhile, phased out economic aid to the Allende Regime on the grounds that the Chilean economy was unstable. Under Allende, the inflation rate shot up from 22 per cent in 1971 to 163 per cent in 1972, with a 4.4 per cent unemployment rate. Since the military junta seized power, the inflation rate has soared to a stratospheric 340 per cent, with a 16.6 per cent unemployment rate.

We have taken pains to point out, by the way, that the military rulers have oppressed not only the Marxists but the Christian Democrats.

Footnote: A spokesman for First National City Bank confirmed that the bank was studying the Chilean loan. A Bank of America spokesman refused to comment on our story. At the State Department, a spokesman acknowledged only that discussions had been held with OPIC. A Treasury official said the department was careful not to tell banks who should get loans but acknowledged: "They may have been encouraged by what our desk people tell them."

OPERATION MUDHEN: The Central Intelligence Agency, in violation of the law, kept us under physical, photographic and electronic surveillance in 1972. Twenty men were assigned full time to the project, which was known inside the agency as "Project Mudhen."

Nevertheless, we continued to jolt the CIA with a series of stories right out of their files. We reported, for example, that corrupt government officials around the world profited from heroin sales to the U.S. Our story touched off a renewed investigation, since the information had come from classified CIA documents.

The cloak-and-dagger crowd, according to documents intended for their eyes only, suspected a federal narcotics employee had leaked the story. CIA Deputy Director Edward Proctor urged Richard Helms, then the CIA director, to speak with federal narcotics chief John Ingersoll.

"Offer technical assistance in determining who is responsible for passing the classified material to Jack Anderson," Proctor urged. Inside the CIA, "technical assistance" is a polite way of referring to bugging devices, lie detectors and even break-ins.

Proctor now assures us that he had in mind only lie detectors in this case, not the naughtier forms of "technical assistance." Of course any CIA assistance in a domestic investigation is a violation of law. So no matter how it is interpreted, Proctor proposed a crime.

Footnote: Reached in Paris, Ingersoll said he couldn't recall any offer from Helms. But if Helms had suggested wiretapping agents, growled Ingersoll, "I would have thrown him out of my office."

Unselfish Efforts

Editor's note: The Freeman did not leave the untiring efforts of the volunteer fire service out of the story on purpose. Police agencies who gave us the story didn't mention the volunteer firemen. Until these letters arrived, we weren't aware of their heroic efforts. We laud these volunteers for their efforts.

Dear Editor:

I wish to comment on the report in your paper of Thursday April 22, 1976 - Page 32 headed "Recover body of creek victim."

This sad event eventually involved seventy to seventy-five people - two of them in acts of heroism, the rest in acts of dedicated service, all for people they did not know. All of these people dropped whatever they were doing at the moment, came out, and stayed until the job was done. They did not do it for pay. They did not do it for applause. They did it because it needed to be done.

In your report, the only mention was of one of the heroes. Period.

The Ulster County Sheriff's Dept. was not on the scene Wednesday night. They were there on Thursday morning, only because a car on patrol stopped to see what the activity was all about.

According to your meager report, none of the other people involved exist.

Before any calls went out, a man living nearby answered the cries for help, dove into the creek, caught hold of the victim, but was unable to hang on to him. By this time, the first rescuer was in trouble himself. A second neighbor dove into the creek, and brought the first rescuer to shore. Hero number one and hero number two!

In the meantime, the Marletown Rescue Squad, having been called, arrived on the scene, treated rescuer number one, and called the High Falls Volunteer Fire Company for search and recovery.

Chief Peter Zegel of High Falls called the Bloomington, Binnewater, Stone Ridge and Rosendale Volunteers. These companies responded with boats, rope, life preservers, grappling hooks, lights and generators and men. A call was put in to County Fire Control Center for divers. Responding to this call were four divers from the Ulster County Divers Association and two divers from the Mt. Marion Fire Co. As word of the incident spread, volunteers from many other County fire companies came to the scene, on their own initiative, bringing equipment, and joining in the search. Many private citizens did the same.

The fast and varying current combined with a bottom composed of huge sharp-edged rocks and overhanging ledges made systematic grappling impossible. It was done as thoroughly as possible for some time, until the divers arrived, and took up the search.

The stream conditions made the divers job extremely difficult. They had to explore not only open bottom, but also the underside of overhanging ledges and the spaces under the large irregular rocks on the bottom.

Two ropes were rigged across the stream, each rope being pulled tight by a group of men on each bank of the stream. The divers' life lines were looped over the ropes, to keep them from being swept down stream. Even with this help, it was difficult for the divers to conduct a thorough examination of the bottom. This work was all being done in the dark, except for the areas covered by portable flood lights, which blind as much as they illuminate. Under water, the only light was the divers hand lights.

The Ladies Auxiliary of the High Falls and Rosendale Fire Companies brought sandwiches and coffee to the scene, as most of the people involved had left home before supper.

The operation was suspended at about 11:30 p.m. by Chief Zegel. The pickup was difficult. As the generators were shut down, the cables and lights had to be picked up with the aid of flashlights, the parties of men ferried from the opposite shore in the dark, and all the scattered gear collected.

The search was resumed at first light the next morning, with many of the same people back again, and was continued until the divers found the victim's body.

The divers deserve a great deal of credit. Thursday night, they were in the water for almost three hours, except for time to change air tanks. Without them, recovery would not have been possible.

I find it very strange that on your front page of Thursday's Freeman appeared a very detailed report on the activities and arrest of a few people involved in what I can only label as an evil business, while buried on the back page is a report that totally ignored this tremendous force for good, projected by a large number of people, a cross section of the community, none of whom had to be there at all, but came together to help people they did not know, because help was needed.

Sincerely,

JAMES H. JOHNSON
Assistant Chief
Binnewater Vol. Fire Co. Inc.

Dear Editor:

I am confused about the information written in the article "Recover Body of Creek Victim", page 32, April 22, 1976 of the Daily Freeman. As chief of the High Falls Fire Department, I must inform you of the volunteer community service that came to the aid of the drowning victim and his family.

Prior to the call for the High Falls Fire Department and the Marletown First Aid Squad two men went into the water to save the victim. The victim was swimming with two other people, one of whom was pulled to shore and saved by one of the two men. The distance across the water was considerable and the men had to swim a swift current to reach both men swimming, one who was trying to save the other.

The wife of Mr. Van Hoorn, one of the gentlemen who was trying to save the drowning man, made the calls for both the Marletown First Aid Squad and the High Falls Fire Department. Help from both organizations came immediately.

The fire company under my direction set-up the pre-plan organization for retrieving a drowning victim.

The Township of Rosendale Firemen's Association of which the High Falls Fire Department is a member has a boat mounted on a trailer with such accessories as life jackets, lights, rope and four sets of grappling hooks and can be manned on a minutes notice when such an alarm is sounded. Other private and fire company boats were pressed into service within an half hour of our initial call to search for the victim.

Through the fire service and the State Police four volunteer divers were on the scene that evening working under adverse conditions, under flood lights, and working for better than three hours trying to find the victim.

It was the fire company which called the parents, who met the parents, then the first aid squad had to spend great energy to console the parents at the scene. A doctor had to be called to administer his professional help, a clergyman was called and he spent the remaining time with the family, including the next day when the last rites were given.

Search operations were suspended at about 11 p.m., a decision that was made between the State Police and the fire service. At 11 P.M. fire boats were still in the water grappling, four divers were searching the depth of water and five fire companies with approximately 75 men were still working. The Ladies Auxiliary of the High Falls Fire Company had made coffee and sandwiches for all who came to the canteen.

The Ulster County Bureau of Fires were requested by me to send a representative from their department to the scene to assist in the search operations. Mr. Duncan Wilson, Deputy coordinator spent the better part of the evening with us. The next day, Mr. Wesley Clark, County Fire Coordinator, was on the scene to assist.

The decision was unanimous to return at 6 A.M. the following morning to continue the search for the victim. At this time another fire company entered the search with a boat and grappling equipment. The Ulster County Sheriff's department patrol car was in the area and stopped by to see if they could assist. They offered their grappling equipment which we accepted by our department. The same four divers returned and through their untiring efforts found the body of John Hayes. I feel strongly that the fire service should have been recognized for their untiring efforts in this search. I estimate a good nine hours were spent by about 75 firemen who assisted in the search for young John Hayes. If the person writing this article had called the Ulster County Fire Control Center or I as Chief of the High Falls Fire Department could have given this writer information by phone then the volunteer community service would have been recognized.

The community volunteer service gives many hours to the improving and protection of their communities. We ask that you please support our volunteer efforts when writing such articles to the general public. I am sure they would like to know what we are doing.

If I can be of any further service to you please call me. Thank you again for the time in reading my long concerned letter.

Cordially,

PETER W. ZEGEL

Says 'Go' to Hall

Dear Editor:

To Gus Hall, Communist - I would like to tell you, Mr. Hall, that all patriotic Americans are not members of the John Birch or any so called Society. We love America and know that our stupid politicians are being lulled to sleep with talk of detente with Russia.

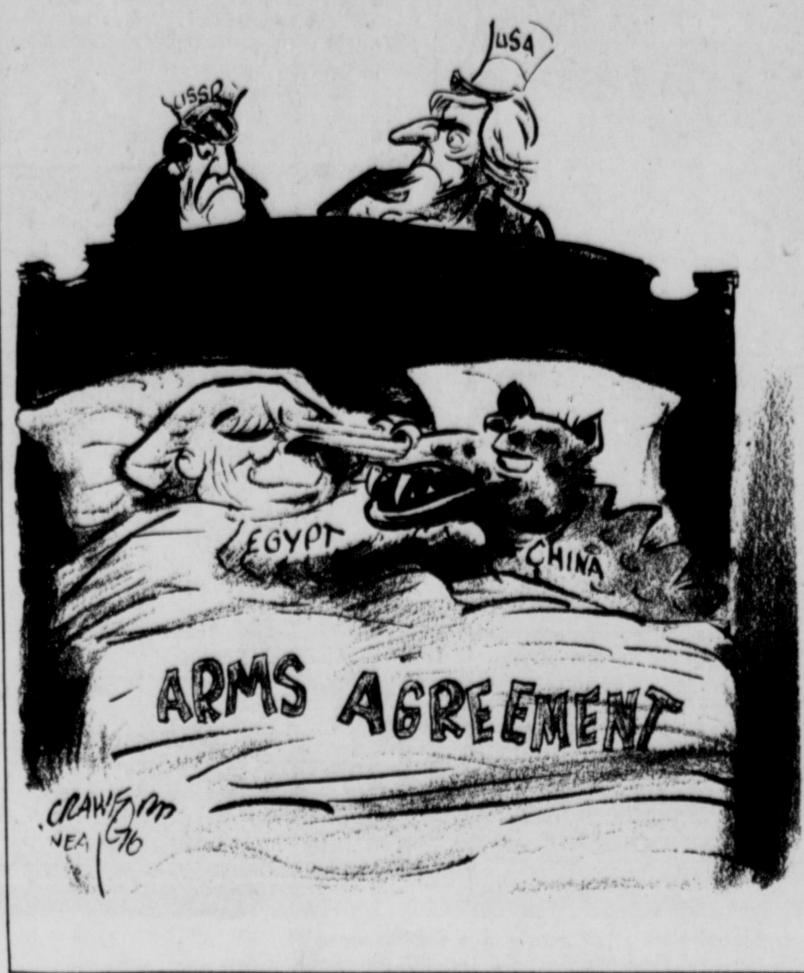

It is a fact that every Communist has one goal in life - to bring America to its knees and under the Red rule. I sincerely hope that any place you speak, people are not stupid enough to be taken in by you. As for me I'd still rather be dead than Red.

By the way, Comrade Hall, why aren't you living in the country you admire so much? It sure isn't America.

"Bedfellows"

William F. Buckley Jr.

Goldwater and Reagan

When, late in the evening of primary day, it became clear that Ronald Reagan was going to win in Indiana, John Chancellor of NBC zoomed in on him and asked how he could account for the strange unity of criticism coming at him from Nelson Rockefeller, representing (at least, traditionally) the left end of the Republican spectrum, and Barry Goldwater representing the right spectrum?

There was as much fatigue written over Reagan's face as there was glee over Chancellor's, who rightly calculated that there was very little Reagan could answer under the circumstances that would dispose of the diplomatic ambush. The author of the Eleventh Commandment managed a smile, and said: "I've never believed in divisiveness within the Republican Party, as you know, John. I think everybody would agree that I did my very best to knit the party together in California in 1966, after the chaos of 1964."

Churchill could not have done better, and, as a professional, I have to admire the smoothest fido of the season. But O my lords, O my lieges, what on earth are we doing? Put together everything said against the Republicans by Humphrey, Carter, Jackson, Udall, and Bella Abzug, and you cannot match the destructiveness of the criticism being leveled against Republicans by Republicans.

Both Barry Goldwater and Ronald Reagan are in part responsible for this. I am required to say, because my affection for Goldwater would not permit me to dissimulate, that I think he has been the principal aggressor this time around, and for reasons I cannot fathom.

Most conspicuously played up by the press is the position taken by Reagan about Panama. This was used by James Reston as the handle for the cockiest piece of political vaticination (Reagan "won't last for long") since Mr. Reston reassured his readers, in the winter of 1963, that Nelson Rockefeller had as much of a chance losing the Republican nomination in 1964 as he had of going broke. They are loving it. They are quoting Goldwater, whose remarks are never noticed by the liberal press except when they serve their purposes, endlessly. It was Goldwater who said about Reagan that he did not understand the issues of the Panama Canal, that if he did he would side with Gerald Ford; and that if we didn't negotiate a new treaty with Panama, we'd find ourselves engaged in "guerrilla warfare."

Now the following quotation is not adduced out of any spirit of meanness by Barry Goldwater. Quite the contrary, I proceed to prove that Senator Goldwater was exactly correct when he wrote in 1963 (Why Not Victory, McFadden, page 34) "Does anyone seriously suppose...that our generous decision to permit the Panamanian flag to fly over American territory in the Canal Zone will placate the Panamanian nationalists? The gesture is bound simply to whet the mob's appetite and transfer its sights to bigger targets." Guerrilla warfare?

Conceivably. Under certain circumstances, the United States would have to fight guerrilla warfare, urban warfare, tank warfare, nuclear warfare. They tell us that we must revise our treaty in Panama because it is, in the fashionable phrase, the "last vestige of American colonialism in Latin America." If it is the last vestige of American colonialism, pray what is our base in Guantanamo? Are we supposed to give it up too? Castro, in 1964, decided to try a little attrition on Guantanamo, and he turned off the water supply. Candidate Goldwater said that Castro should be to "turn it (the water) on or the Marines are going to turn it on." And Senator Goldwater was not categorically against guerrilla warfare. In fact, he said that if he were President, he would train and equip refugees to fight a guerrilla war in Cuba, supply them by air drop and give them air support if necessary. Of course, that was only two years after a Democratic President had launched an amphibious operation against Castro. But even so, there was talk about using guerrillas to fight on foreign soil. Whatever you call Panama (concerning which, please see my next dispatch - on it, and Mr. Reston), it is hardly foreign soil. It is an American responsibility secured by treaty. The notion that it is reckless to be prepared to defend it suggests a failure of nerve. Nobody who knows Mr. Goldwater can believe that of him, but it is hard to believe that he is helping his party.

"Now, Mr. Tompkins, I am the social worker assigned to your case. Have you ever applied for welfare before?"

"No, ma'am, and I never thought I'd ever see the day when I would."

"Yes ma'am." "Now, Mr. Tompkins, I am the social worker assigned to your case. Have you ever applied for welfare before?"

"No ma'am, and I never thought I'd ever see the day when I would." "Well, let's review your case. It says here that you were a congressman for four terms, a governor for two terms, and a senator for one term."

"Yes ma'am, I have references here that indicate everyone thought I did a good job."

"I see. Please don't cry, Mr. Tompkins. I'm here to help you."

"I'm sorry, it's just that...well, it's not easy for me to one day be a presidential candidate and the next day to be asking for welfare." "You were a presidential candidate?" "Yes, ma'am. I was until last week. Here is some of my campaign literature. You see here it says 'Tompkins for President'—and that's a picture of my wife and my family, and that's me holding up my fingers in a 'V for Victory' sign." "You have a nice family, Mr. Tompkins. I hope you don't think I'm prying, but I do have to have this information for my records. What happened between the time you ran for President and today when you came here?" "It didn't happen all at once. I started out with a fairly good-size campaign fund; maybe $500,000. Then we went into New Hampshire and spent half of it. I didn't do too well in New Hampshire so my campaign manager said we'd have to make an all-out effort in Florida. "He assured me we could afford it because we would be getting funds from the government to match what we raised. We blew a pot of money on TV commercials in Florida and ran fourth. I was highly discouraged because I had predicted I would come in fifth; so coming in fourth could be interpreted as a victory. "Un-

U.S. Aiding Junta

WASHINGTON — In defiance of both Congress and the United Nations, the Ford Administration has gone behind the barn to bolster the military dictatorship of Chile.

The UN, following up our own reports of repression and torture inside Chile, has condemned the junta for violating human rights. And only last week, the respected Inter-American Human Rights Commission denounced the junta for its torture tactics.

Congress reacted by imposing a $90 million limit on economic aid for Chile this fiscal year. It was the intent of Congress, clearly, that the aid should go directly to needy people. Other nations have also refused to extend credit to the beleaguered dictatorship.

Nevertheless, the Administration has shaken loose hidden money to bail out the junta. Here are the hush-hush developments:

— The Overseas Private Investment Corporation, a quasi-official U.S. institution, has quietly agreed to begin insuring companies that invest in Chile. The State Department, according to our sources, twisted OPIC arms. This should stimulate a flood of investment capital into the country.

— Both the State and Treasury departments have also encouraged 14 U.S. and Canadian banks to loan the military dictatorship $100 million to $125 million. The loan is needed to pay off short-term obligations to other countries. Britain and Italy have refused to reschedule Chilean debt payments because of the regime's human rights violations. New York's First National City Bank will put up most of the money for the junta, with the financial support of the Bank of America, several New York banks and two Canadian banks.

— U.S. advisers have also brought pressure upon the Inter-American Development Bank's President Antonio Ortiz Mena, who has promised that the bank will loan up to $125 million to Chile. The first $20 million already has been approved.

—The State Department gave Chile a $55 million housing guarantee that a House subcommittee believes exceeded the $90 million congressional ceiling. "The Administration clearly has sought to evade the spirit, if not the letter, of the congressional aid ceilings to Chile," declared Chairman Don Fraser, D-Calif. We have been chronicling the Chilean saga since we reported on March 21, 1972, that the Central Intelligence Agency and International Telephone and Telegraph were conspiring together to undermine the Chilean economy. Their objective was to oust President Salvador Allende, an elected Marxist, from power.

The CIA at first denied participating in economic sabotage against the Allende regime but, three years later, was forced to confess our story was true after the Senate Intelligence Committee published the proof.

The former Nixon Administration, meanwhile, phased out economic aid to the Allende Regime on the grounds that the Chilean economy was unstable. Under Allende, the inflation rate shot up from 22 per cent in 1971 to 163 per cent in 1972, with a 4.4 per cent unemployment rate. Since the military junta seized power, the inflation rate has soared to a stratospheric 340 per cent, with a 16.6 per cent unemployment rate.

We have taken pains to point out, by the way, that the military rulers have oppressed not only the Marxists but the Christian Democrats.

Footnote: A spokesman for First National City Bank confirmed that the bank was studying the Chilean loan. A Bank of America spokesman refused to comment on our story. At the State Department, a spokesman acknowledged only that discussions had been held with OPIC. A Treasury official said the department was careful not to tell banks who should get loans but acknowledged: "They may have been encouraged by what our desk people tell them."

OPERATION MUDHEN: The Central Intelligence Agency, in violation of the law, kept us under physical, photographic and electronic surveillance in 1972. Twenty men were assigned full time to the project, which was known inside the agency as "Project Mudhen."

Nevertheless, we continued to jolt the CIA with a series of stories right out of their files. We reported, for example, that corrupt government officials around the world profited from heroin sales to the U.S. Our story touched off a renewed investigation, since the information had come from classified CIA documents.

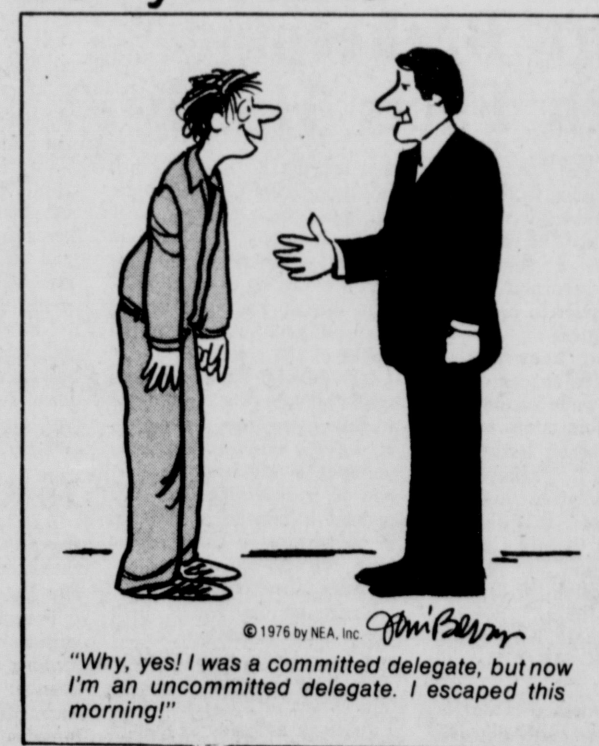

The cloak-and-dagger crowd, according to documents intended for their eyes only, suspected a federal narcotics employee had leaked the story. CIA Deputy Director Edward Proctor urged Richard Helms, then the CIA director, to speak with federal narcotics chief John Ingersoll.

"Offer technical assistance in determining who is responsible for passing the classified material to Jack Anderson," Proctor urged. Inside the CIA, "technical assistance" is a polite way of referring to bugging devices, lie detectors and even break-ins.

Proctor now assures us that he had in mind only lie detectors in this case, not the naughtier forms of "technical assistance." Of course any CIA assistance in a domestic investigation is a violation of law. So no matter how it is interpreted, Proctor proposed a crime.

Footnote: Reached in Paris, Ingersoll said he couldn't recall any offer from Helms. But if Helms had suggested wire-tapping agents, growled Ingersoll, "I would have thrown him out of my office."

A Welfare Case

fortunately, we found it harder and harder to raise funds and the government wasn't coming through with the money it promised us. We had the choice of going into Wisconsin or New York. The motels in Wisconsin were cheaper so we decided to campaign there. I came in sixth which made fools out of ABC, NBC and CBS, who all predicted I would come in eighth. "But despite the optimism in my camp, money was still the main problem. I borrowed on my life insurance to campaign in North Carolina, and my wife sold all her jewelry so I could hold a rally in South Bend, Ind. The polls indicated I was getting delegates in New Mexico and there was talk I might even sweep Newport, R.I. "Just as I was picking up momentum we had to close all our campaign headquarters and sell our furniture to pay the printer. But I knew if I could have one big victory in a Northern industrial state the money would start rolling in again. "I decided I would go to die in Pennsylvania. I sold my car and bought a 30-second radio spot in Philadelphia. Then I mortgaged the house for three one-minute TV spots in Pittsburgh. My wife sold her hair so we could take out an advertisement in a Harrisburg newspaper. And I hooked my son's guitar for billboard space in Scranton. "But it wasn't enough. We came in 10th and the media started to write I wouldn't make it. I guess they were right because here I am applying for welfare." "Mr. Tompkins, your case is very interesting, but I would like to ask you what made you think you could run for President in the first place?" "When I was a little boy my father told me anyone in the United States could run for President of the United States." "Did he tell you how much money you would need to run in the primaries?" "No ma'am, He didn't say anything about money." "Well, your father was a very foolish man to encourage you to run for an office that costs millions of dollars." "Yes, ma'am." "You're the twelfth presidential candidate to come in this week and apply for welfare, and I don't mind telling you that you people are becoming a burden to our department. How can I be sure if I give you a welfare check you won't use it to enter the primary in California?" "Don't worry, ma'am. I'll never touch a primary again. That stuff can ruin a man for life."

Ed Brown and the Nuclear Plants Proposition

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The bitter battle between a labor-business coalition and crusading upper-class ecologists over whether nuclear power plants shall be built in California or anywhere else reveals the limits of the politics of lowered expectations as practiced by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Under this state's egregious system of public initiatives spawned by the Hiram Johnson progressive era, California voters on June 8 will vote for or against Proposition 15 which would clearly bar future nuclear power and probably close down existing plants. Approval here would spread the anti nuclear movement eastward and endanger the nation's nuclear option for energy production.

Vital though that nuclear option is, much more is involved. The same well heeled ecological reformers fighting nuclear power resist off shore oil, coal gasification and other energy options. In sum, they demand that the lower classes of humanity scale down their energy needs and, therefore, their standard of living to conform to an austere new regimen.

That does not differ greatly from the call for lowered expectations in a less abundant economy sounded with puritan vigor by Jerry Brown, considered the most popular politician in California history. It is significant, therefore, that

Brown, a cagey political tactician eyeing the national scene, is backing away from Proposition 15. He has not endorsed it and probably never will.

The reason Brown's rhetoric for a less abundant life, when translated into a ballot initiative, means fewer jobs and general economic belt-tightening. Industry's multi-million dollar campaign against Proposition 15 has been joined by the governor's allies in or ganized labor — and increasing numbers of ordinary citizens. Polls show a widening edge by opponents.

But nobody is pronouncing Proposition 15 dead, if only because of the intensity of its advocates. "These are well-meaning people," former Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown Sr., who bears slight ideological resemblance to his son, told us. "But they're like the Spanish inquisition. They want to get you on the rack."

There is indeed a fanatical aura to the anti-nuclear movement, particularly the Creative Initiative Foundation, a religious-oriented organization providing platoons of chic suburban matrons adamant against nuclear power. To enemies of Proposition 15, the foundation's members are "upper-class Moonies" (a reference to the Rev. Moon's clamorous movement). Their zeal excludes either surrender or compromise.

Even if Proposition 15 fails, they will enter court to fight nuclear power with endless litigation. They are not satisfied by three bills in the legislature (at this writing, expected to be endorsed by Gov. Brown) imposing tougher nuclear safety standards — strict enough to be opposed by utilities, electric manufacturers and building trades unions. But because it neither closes down existing plants nor guarantees a moratorium on new ones, this legislation is insufficient for the anti nuclear movement.

What ecological reformers want is shown by one tough old veteran of liberal crusades. Leonard Levy, Los Angeles-based international vice president of the amalgamated Clothing Workers who is bucking the rest of the labor movement (save for the long shoredmen) in supporting Proposition 15. Levy told as candidly he opposes any nuclear power plants ever being built in earthquake-prone California no matter what the precautions.

David Pesonen, San Francisco lawyer and environmentalist who heads the campaign, told us he basically agrees with Levy. That means a California forever kept from nuclear power and required to maintain a lowered economy, life style and — of course — expectations. This cost may be unacceptable when it is considered that nobody on planet Earth has yet died in a nuclear power accident.

This political reality has emboldened some of Brown's rivals who have unhappily watched his astounding ascent — especially Bob Moretti, former Assembly speaker who was beaten by Brown in the 1974 Democratic primary for governor. Though appointed by Brown to the new state energy commission, Moretti has not hesitated to attack Proposition 15 as a horrid example of Brown's politics of lowered expectations.

A year before running for governor, Brown expressed doubt about new nuclear power plant construction, now he says nothing. Nor does his former political aide, energy board chairman Richard Maulin, who abstained from last week's Moretti led 3 to 1 vote by the board against Proposition 15. Nor does air resources board chairman Jon Quinn. Brown's former campaign manager, Quinn said nothing even after Moretti called his silence "a signal example of lack of courage."

Had his campaign survived long-enough, Sen. Henry M. Jackson would have roared into California attacking Prop osition 15. Jimmy Carter has been characteristically ambivalent. But an outright endorsement of the anti nuclear position is just not politically feasible. The politics of lowered expectations are un-palatable when translated from lofty upper-class theory to working-class economic austerity, and that may well keep California from beginning a nationwide stampede against needed nuclear technology.

No Rx for the Mess

WASHINGTON—We know what they're against. But what are they for?

After the most recent presidential primaries, in Indiana, Alabama, Georgia, Texas and Pennsylvania, there's no question but that they're all against Washington. In November of this 200th anniversary of the founding of our government, we will elect as our national leader the candidate—Republican or Democratic, it makes no difference—who has run hardest against government.

The best qualifications for being President in 1976 are experience either as a peanut farmer or movie actor. Anything but experience in Washington.

Among the Democrats, Jimmy Carter's anti-Washington bandwagon has smashed the best Washington can offer. Rep. Morris Udall stopped calling himself a liberal, but not soon enough to stop Carter. Sen. Henry Jackson ran with organized labor's support, but labor couldn't stop Carter. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who has been in Washington nearly 30 years and who has excellent New Deal qualifications, never really was in the running against Carter.

Among the Republicans, President Ford has promised to "get the government out of your hair," but poor, old Gerry Ford also has been in Washington nearly 30 years whereas Ronald Reagan has been in Hollywood.

Things are so bad in Washington that, in last week's primary here, District of Columbia blacks voted for "ethnic purity" Carter over "I am not a liberal" Udall.

Now, I can understand why everybody is against Washington. After Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam and Richard Nixon's Watergate, it's surprising the town hasn't been sacked and burned. Nixon said it all when he said, "I am not a crook."

Or almost all. The immorality of politicians is not unrelated to the mess in Washington.

The government has 228 health programs, 156 income security and social service programs, 83 housing programs, and so forth. Washington has spent billions on health and has failed to provide hospital and medical care at prices people can afford. Washington has spent billions on education and many high school students really can't read or write. Washington has spent billions on the cities and urban wastelands breed rats and crime.

We know what they're against. But what are they for?

They're against the mess in Washington and that's easy. They're for cleaning up the mess and that's not easy. Politicians for 200 years have stood on a platform of promises and programs for farmers, businessmen, labor, blacks and any other identifiable bloc of voters. If the old platform is wrecked, where shall politicians stand?

For instance, the 1972 Democratic platform was the culmination of 200 years of hard work. Sen. Edmund Muskie has observed that it "reads like the catalogue of virtually every problem that we liberals think bothers the American people." And Muskie, one of the few politicians who worries about such things, notes the dilemma of the 1972 platform: "The results of the election showed that the platform was irrelevant."

Therefore, Ford, Carter and the rest are standing on platforms of promises to reform government, to "get the government out of your hair." But the new platforms are shaky because every old program is some voter bloc's pork barrel.

Consider Carter's "ethnic purity." Carter thinks that government programs should not destroy the purity of ethnic urban neighborhoods. That suits the Irish of South Boston just fine and white ethnics in many neighborhoods will vote for Carter. But the government's civil rights programs belong to blacks and, therefore, Carter told blacks he really didn't mean what he said about "ethnic purity."

Carter is against wage and price control programs, as are business and labor. He's also against inflation, so he's for "standby" wage and price controls.

Or consider Ford's progress in getting government out of your hair. He promised reform of government airline and television regulation, but retreated when airlines and television networks objected. Afraid of losing labor votes, he shelved a reform that would have denied welfare benefits to strikers.

In Birmingham last week, Ford said Carter "slip flops." Carter says Ford has "weak knees."

How Our Legislators Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. —

Although Congress rejected a move to reduce defense spending by $2 billion, Rep. Matthew McHugh, D-27th Dist., voted for the reduction while Ulster County's two other congressmen, Hamilton Fish Jr., R-25th Dist., and Benjamin A. Gilman, R-26th Dist., voted against it.

The amendment, which would reduce the defense spending budget from $112 to $110 billion, was rejected 145 to 255 against. The ceiling will guide the Congress in its later authorization and appropriation processes.

One supporter of lowering defense outlays, Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md., said the Gallup and other polls have shown that the majority of the American people believe that we are still spending too much on defense.

Roll Call

Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, an opponent, said, "I do not pay too much attention to the Gallup Poll or any of the other polls when it comes to national defense, but I know what the people out my way are saying that we had better start looking into the needs of our defense department in greater detail as they read what the Communists are doing throughout the world."

The three Ulster County House representatives all agreed on an increase in spending for veterans benefits however. The measure passed 218 for to 188 against.

About $12 billion of the increment would fund cost-of-living increases under various veterans' programs.

The remaining $600 million would fund possible extension by Congress of the 10-year period in which discharged veterans must utilize educational benefits or lose them.

In the Senate, a proposal to eliminate a requirement that federal inspectors take over inspection of foreign-bound grain at major inland terminals, was rejected 36 for to 38 against with Sen. Jacob Javits voting against it and Sen. James L. Buckley, not voting.

The amendment was proposed to a bill to correct abuses in the grain inspection system. The bill later passed and was sent to conference with the House.

Defeat of the amendment left intact a provision establishing a federal grain inspection system to replace private and state inspectors at all major U.S. ports and interior terminals. The bill was prompted by revelations last year that grain inspectors at some ports had accepted bribes to approve substandard grain for export.

Sen. Javits also voted for a bill extending the major housing programs of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Sen. Buckley did not vote.

The bill anticipates expenditures of $421 million in fiscal 1977 and $271 billion over the next couple of decades or longer. The bill was sent to the House.

Ed Brown and the Nuclear Plants Proposition

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The bitter battle between a labor-business coalition and crusading upper-class ecologists over whether nuclear power plants shall be built in California or anywhere else reveals the limits of the politics of lowered expectations as practiced by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Under this state's egregious system of public initiatives spawned by the Hiram Johnson progressive era, California voters on June 8 will vote for or against Proposition 15 which would clearly bar future nuclear power and probably close down existing plants. Approval here would spread the anti-nuclear movement eastward and endanger the nation's nuclear option for energy production.

Vital though that nuclear option is, much more is involved. The same well-heeled ecological reformers fighting nuclear power resist off-shore oil, coal gasification and other energy options. In sum, they demand that the lower classes of humanity scale down their energy needs and, therefore, their standard of living to conform to an austere new regimen.

That does not differ greatly from the call for lowered expectations in a less abundant economy sounded with puritan vigor by Jerry Brown, considered the most popular politician in California history. It is significant, therefore, that

Brown, a cagey political tactician eyeing the national scene, is backing away from Proposition 15. He has not endorsed it and probably never will.

The reason: Brown's rhetoric for a less abundant life, when translated into a ballot initiative, means fewer jobs and general economic belt-tightening. Industry's multi-million-dollar campaign against Proposition 15 has been joined by the governor's allies in organized labor — and increasing numbers of ordinary citizens. Polls show a widening edge by opponents.

But nobody is pronouncing Proposition 15 dead, if only because of the intensity of its advocates. "These are well-meaning people," former Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown Sr., who bears slight ideological resemblance to his son, told us. "But they're like the Spanish inquisition. They want to get you on the rack."

There is indeed a fanatical aura to the anti-nuclear movement, particularly the Creative Initiative Foundation, a religious-oriented organization providing platoons of chic suburban matrons adamant against nuclear power. To enemies of Proposition 15, the foundation's members are "upper-class Moonies" (a reference to the Rev. Moon's clamorous movement). Their zeal excludes either surrender or compromise.

Even if Proposition 15 fails,

they will enter court to fight nuclear power with endless litigation. They are not satisfied by three bills in the legislature (at this writing, expected to be endorsed by Gov. Brown) imposing tougher nuclear safety standards — strict enough to be opposed by utilities, electric manufacturers and building trades unions. But because it neither closes down existing plants nor guarantees a moratorium on new ones, this legislation is insufficient for the anti-nuclear movement.

What ecological reformers want is shown by one tough old veteran of liberal crusades: Leonard Levy, Los Angeles-based international vice president of the amalgamated Clothing Workers who is bucking the rest of the labor movement (save for the longshoremen) in supporting Proposition 15. Levy told as candidly he opposes any nuclear power plants) ever being built in earthquake-prone California no matter what the precautions.

David Pesonen, San Francisco lawyer and environmentalist who heads the campaign, told us he basically agrees with Levy. That means a California forever kept from nuclear power and required to maintain a lowered economy, life-style and — of course — expectations. This cost may be unacceptable when it is considered that nobody on planet Earth has yet died in a nuclear power accident.

This political reality has emboldened some of Brown's rivals who have unhappily watched his astounding ascent — especially Bob Moretti, former Assembly speaker who was beaten by Brown in the 1974 Democratic primary for governor. Though appointed by Brown to the new state energy commission, Moretti has not hesitated to attack Proposition 15 as a horrid example of Brown's politics of lowered expectations.

A year before running for governor, Brown expressed doubt about new nuclear power plant construction; now he says nothing. Nor does his former political aide, energy board chairman Richard Maullin, who abstained from last week's Moretti-led 3 to 1 vote by the board against Proposition 15. Nor does air resources board chairman Ion Quinn, Brown's former campaign manager; Quinn said nothing even after Moretti called his silence "a signal example of lack of courage."

Had his campaign survived long enough, Sen. Henry M. Jackson would have roared into California attacking Proposition 15. Jimmy Carter has been characteristically ambivalent. But an outright endorsement of the anti-nuclear position is just not politically feasible. The politics of lowered expectations are un-palatable when translated from lofty upper-class theory to working-class economic austerity, and chat may well keep California from beginning a nationwide stampede against needed nuclear technology.

No Rx for the Mess

WASHINGTON—We know what they're against. But what are they for?

After the most recent presidential primaries, in Indiana, Alabama, Georgia, Texas and Pennsylvania, there's no question but that they're all against Washington. In November of this 200th anniversary of the founding of our government, we will elect as our national leader the candidate—Republican or Democratic, it makes no difference—who has run hardest against government.

The best qualifications for being President in 1976 are experience either as a peanut farmer or movie actor. Anything but experience in Washington.

Among the Democrats, Jimmy Carter's anti-Washington bandwagon has smashed the best Washington can offer. Rep. Morris Udall stopped calling himself a liberal, but not soon enough to stop Carter. Sen. Henry Jackson ran with organized labor's support, but labor couldn't stop Carter. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who has been in Washington nearly 30 years and who has excellent New Deal qualifications, never really was in the running against Carter.

Among the Republicans, President Ford has promised to "get the government out of your hair," but poor, old Gerry Ford also has been in Washington nearly 30 years whereas Ronald Reagan has been in Hollywood.

Things are so bad in Washington that, in last week's primary here, District of Columbia blacks voted for "ethnic purity" Carter over "I am not a liberal" Udall.

Now, I can understand why everybody is against Washington. After Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam and Richard Nixon's Watergate, it's surprising the town hasn't been sacked and burned. Nixon said it all when he said, "I am not a crook."

Or almost all. The immorality of politicians is not unrelated to the mess in Washington.

The government has 228 health programs, 156 income security and social service programs, 83 housing programs, and so forth. Washington has spent billions on health and has failed to provide hospital and medical care at prices people can afford. Washington has spent billions on education and many high school students really can't read or write. Washington has spent billions on the cities and urban wastelands breed rats and crime.

We know what they're against. But what are they for?

They're against the mess in Washington and that's easy. They're for cleaning up the mess and that's not easy. Politicians for 200 years have stood on a platform of promises and programs for farmers, businessmen, labor, blacks and any other identifiable bloc of voters. If the old platform is wrecked, where shall politicians stand?

For instance, the 1972 Democratic platform was the culmination of 200 years of hard work. Sen. Edmund Muskie has observed that it "reads like the catalogue of virtually every problem that we liberals think bothers the American people." And Muskie, one of the few politicians who worries about such things, notes the dilemma of the 1972 platform. "The results of the election showed that the platform was irrelevant."

Therefore, Ford, Carter and the rest are standing on platforms of promises to reform government, to "get the government out of your hair." But the new platforms are shaky because every old program is some voter bloc's pork barrel.

Consider Carter's "ethnic purity." Carter thinks that government programs should not destroy the purity of ethnic urban neighborhoods. That suits the Irish of South Boston just fine and white ethnics in many neighborhoods will vote for Carter. But the government's civil rights programs belong to blacks and, therefore, Carter told blacks he really didn't mean what he said about "ethnic purity."

Carter is against wage and price control programs, as are business and labor. He's also against inflation, so he's for "standby" wage and price controls.

Or consider Ford's progress in getting government out of your hair. He promised reform of government airline and television regulation, but retreated when airlines and television networks objected. Afraid of losing labor votes, he shelved a reform that would have denied welfare benefits to strikers.

In Birmingham last week, Ford said Carter "flip-flops." Carter says Ford has "weak knees."

Puerto Rican Issue . . . Independence or Statehood

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Puerto Ricans, like other U.S. citizens, vote next November, but in most other respects island politics are a world apart from those on the mainland.

Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, Jimmy Carter, and Henry Jackson are not issues in the forthcoming election because Puerto Ricans are not eligible to vote for the President.

A semiautonomous U.S. territory, congressional law governs Puerto Rico although the island is allowed a certain amount of self-government.

Just how much longer the island should continue its ambiguous relationship with the powerful continent is a major issue in Puerto Rican elections.

A related issue is how to pull the island out of its worst recession since the great crash of the 1930s.

The closest thing Puerto Rico has to the Democratic party is the Popular Democratic party, whose followers are known as "Populares."

Its symbol is not the donkey but a red and white flag with a silhouette of the "jibaro," a Puerto Rican farmer with a straw hat.

Its slogan, "bread, land, and liberty!" has a revolutionary ring but the "Populares" represent the status quo, not revolution.

The party was founded by Luis Munoz Marin, 78 and ailing, and it has dominated Puerto Rican politics since 1940.

The party gave Puerto Rico a kind of homegrown New Deal, with land reform and public ownership of utilities.

Industry was attracted by a formula called "Operation Bootstrap," which gave mainland firms tax incentives to settle on the island.

Relations with the United States were characterized by a "compact" that Congress approved in 1952. It labeled the island a "commonwealth" and gave it more tax and government autonomy than it ever had before.

The Operation Bootstrap formula now has faded, and the dream that the island will always be an industrial haven has been shattered.

Wages have risen to such levels that U.S. firms no longer find Puerto Rico as profitable a place to do business. Last year 148 factories closed.

Unemployment is 20 per cent and the economy had a negative growth rate of minus 2 per cent in 1975.

Nearly half the island buys its food with federally subsidized food stamps.

Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon is running for re-election in November as the heir to the Operation Bootstrap tradition.

He has warned, however, that the island must produce 42,000 jobs a year to bring unemployment down to 12 per cent — still high by U.S. standards — by 1980.

Hernandez Colon is offering a new program, called "parallel economy," a kind of job corps modeled from the Civilian Conservation Corps of the New Deal era.

"The parallel economy is a broader concept than the CCC," said the governor, sipping a milkshake during an interview at a hamburger stand in Ponce.

"They will be self-sustaining economic activities. They will produce their own food, shelter, and clothing."

The governor also has proposed creation of small family farms and cooperatives and new welfare programs to aid the poor, provide jobs and pull Puerto Rico out of the recession.

He has proposed a new "compact" with the United States, but two of its key provisions — exempting Puerto Rico from the minimum wage and environmental controls — already have been turned down by Congress.

Under the compact, Puerto Rico essentially would keep its present status as a semi-autonomous territory.

The biggest threat to the Populares' hold on the Fortaleza, the colonial governor's mansion, comes from the New Progressive party, led by San Juan Mayor Carlos Romero Barcelo.

The Progressives commonly are known as "republicanos," and they have loose connections with the Republican party on the U.S. mainland. Its main platform is full statehood for Puerto Rico.

In his beachfront apartment in San Juan, the mayor said statehood was the key to Puerto Rico's salvation because it would bring the island $3 billion more federal aid than the $2 billion it now gets.

"We would get so much more federal funds than we get now that it wouldn't be funny," he said.

"We will get more social security benefits," the mayor said. "We would get $150 million more in health and medical. More welfare payments."

How will Congress react to giving more aid to Puerto Rico?

"We're talking about the rights of three million American citizens who are being discriminated against," he replied.

"We are not willing any longer to give up our rights. Any congressman who denies political rights to Puerto Rico is against democracy."

Also running for governor are Ruben Berrios Martinez of the Independence party, and Juan Mari Bras of the pro-Cuban Socialist party.

Neither of those candidates has much of a chance to win, but politicians will pay close attention to their voting strength in evaluating popular sentiment.

In an interview, Berrios said "80 to 90 per cent of the voters are potentially pro-independence," but in the last elections his party got only 5 per cent of the vote.

Berrios is campaigning for what he calls "socialism with a humane face" and favors greater economic self-sufficiency for the island.

"We need to start producing agricultural products and manufactured goods for the inside," he said.

Puerto Rican political parties are similar to their continental counterparts in one respect: each party's polls inevitably show themselves ahead and the voters agreeing wholeheartedly with their platforms.

Gov. Hernandez Colon said

polls showed the Independence party getting 4 per cent of the vote and the Socialists 1 per cent.

"The Puerto Rican people intuitively realize they need union with the United States," he said.

This Chess Ace A Teen Prodigy

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — When Andrea Eisenberg was a curly-haired 5-year-old she learned to play chess in half an hour.

Now 16 and an attractive 5-foot-5 blonde, she is a teen-age prodigy.

She has won three national chess titles and just captured the Minnesota women's chess championship for the fifth straight year.

"There's no reason, in my opinion, why she shouldn't be the national women's champion," says her father, Dr. Michael M. Eisenberg, surgery professor at the University of Minnesota.

Andrea would like to enter adult national tournaments if any are held nearby. She also would enjoy playing world champion Bobby Fischer, although she said, "I don't have any visions of beating him."

A few years ago she declined an invitation to train in New York for world competition.

"I love chess," she said, "but for me it's a game, not a career."

Andrea is modest about her chess success and seems more interested in entering Harvard next fall to study languages and English literature and then law.

Dr. Eisenberg said he was at home sick one day 11 years ago playing chess with Andrea's two older sisters, Elyse, now 21, and Ellen, now 19. Andrea wanted to play, too.

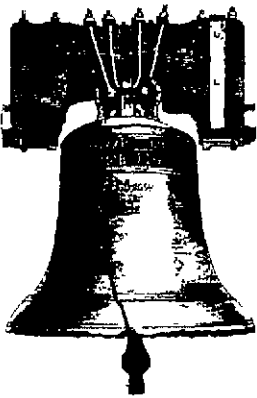

"I asked my wife, 'How am I going to teach a 5-year-old to play chess?' and she said, 'Well, go through the motions.' To my amazement she learned the moves and was playing within half an hour."

"By the time she was 8 she was beating me regularly," he said. "When she was 10 she was winning local tournaments. She won the U.S. junior women's championship at age 12 and again at 13 and was the U.S. pre-teen champion for boys and girls at age 12."

She has held the Minnesota women's title since 1972. "She's an instinctive player," her father said. "She outstripped me so early. I sought out a young man named Nels Truelson, one of the best in Minnesota, to coach her for a year."

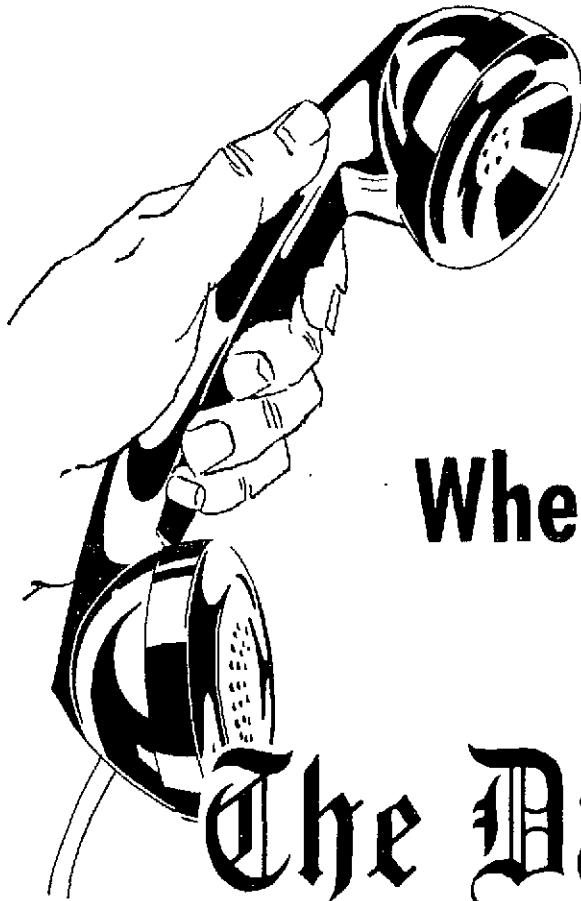

But chess is just one of many interests for Andrea. She's an excellent swimmer, president of her graduating class at Blake School, and a Sunday School teacher. She likes bicycling and drama.

She also has strong views on women's lib and prison reforms. "Also, she's discovered boys," her father said.

"They will be self-sustaining economic activities. They will produce their own food, shelter, and clothing."

The governor also has proposed creation of small family farms and cooperatives and new welfare programs to aid the poor, provide jobs and pull Puerto Rico out of the recession.

He has proposed a new "compact" with the United States, but two of its key provisions — exempting Puerto Rico from the minimum wage and environmental controls — already have been turned down by Congress.

Under the compact, Puerto Rico essentially would keep its present status as a semi-autonomous territory.

The biggest threat to the Populares' hold on the Fortaleza, the colonial governor's mansion, comes from the New Progressive party, led by San Juan Mayor Carlos Romero Barcelo.

The Progressives commonly are known as "republicanos," and they have loose connections with the Republican party on the U.S. mainland. Its main platform is full statehood for Puerto Rico.

In his beachfront apartment in San Juan, the mayor said statehood was the key to Puerto Rico's salvation because it would bring the island $3 billion more federal aid than the $2 billion it now gets.

"We would get so much more federal funds than we get now that it wouldn't be funny," he said.

"We will get more social security benefits," the mayor said. "We would get $150 million more in health and Medicaid. More welfare payments."

How will Congress react to giving more aid to Puerto Rico?

"We're talking about the rights of three million American citizens who are being discriminated against," he replied.

"We are not willing any longer to give up our rights. Any congressman who denies political rights to Puerto Rico is against democracy."

Also running for governor are Ruben Berrios Martinez of the Independence party, and Juan Mari Bras of the pro-Cuban Socialist party.

Neither of those candidates has much of a chance to win, but politicians will pay close attention to their voting strength in evaluating popular sentiment.

In an interview, Berrios said "80 to 90 per cent of the voters are potentially pro-independence," but in the last elections his party got only 5 per cent of the vote.

Berrios is campaigning for what he calls "socialism with a humane face" and favors greater economic self-sufficiency for the island.

"We need to start producing agricultural products and manufactured goods for the island," he said.

Puerto Rican political parties are similar to their continental counterparts in one respect: each party's polls inevitably show themselves ahead and the voters agreeing wholeheartedly with their platforms.

Gov. Hernandez Colon said

polls showed the Independence party getting 4 per cent of the vote and the Socialists 1 per cent.

"The Puerto Rican people intuitively realize they need union with the United States," he said.

Sue Dumps It for Raw Stuff

This Chess Ace A Teen Prodigy

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — When Andrea Eisenberg was a curly-haired 5-year-old she learned to play chess in half an hour.

Now 16 and an attractive 5-foot-5 blonde, she is a teen-age prodigy.

She has won three national chess titles and just captured the Minnesota women's chess championship for the fifth straight year.

"There's no reason, in my opinion, why she shouldn't be the national women's champion," says her father, Dr. Michael M. Eisenberg, surgery professor at the University of Minnesota.

Andrea would like to enter adult national tournaments if any are held nearby. She also would enjoy playing world champion Bobby Fischer, although she said, "I don't have any visions of beating him."

A few years ago she declined an invitation to train in New York for world competition.

"I love chess," she said, "but for me it's a game, not a career."

Andrea is modest about her chess success and seems more interested in entering Harvard next fall to study languages and English literature and then law.

Dr. Eisenberg said he was at home sick one day 11 years ago playing chess with Andrea's two older sisters, Elyse, now 21, and Ellen, now 19. Andrea wanted to play, too.

"I asked my wife, 'How am I going to teach a 5-year-old to play chess?' and she said, 'Well, go through the motions.' To my amazement she learned the moves and was playing within half an hour.

"By the time she was 8 she was beating me regularly," he said. "When she was 10 she was winning local tournaments. She won the U.S. junior women's championship at age 12 and again at 13 and was the U.S. pre-teen champion for boys and girls at age 12."

She has held the Minnesota women's title since 1972.

"She's an instinctive player," her father said. "She outstripped me so early, I sought out a young man named Nels Truelson, one of the best in Minnesota, to coach her for a year."

But chess is just one of many interests for Andrea. She's an excellent swimmer, president of her graduating class at Blake School, and a Sunday School teacher. She likes bicycling and drama.

She also has strong views on women's lib and prison reforms. "Also, she's discovered boys," her father said.

Energy Conference Slated

STONE RIDGE — An Energy Conference covering the many aspects of the nation's multifaceted energy problems will be held at Ulster County Community College on Saturday, May 22. The Conference has been called by Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, D-101 Dist., who has brought together over twenty (20) distinguished experts to make presentations at the various study panels which occupy the morning sessions of the all-day affair.

There will be panels on a wide range of energy related subjects: Energy and the Economy; Conserving Energy; New Sources of Energy; Nuclear Energy; The Role of the Consumer; and Improving Utilities.

Included among the speakers making presentations at the panel discussions will be scientists, economists, consumer advocates, solar energy experts and representatives from the Public Service Commission and industry.

"I have found a tremendous interest in the energy problem among my constituents in the 101st Assembly District", said Hinchey. "For those who want to become more knowledgeable about this fascinating and extremely important subject, this conference will provide an excellent opportunity to acquaint themselves with some of the best thinking available. Hinchey pointed out that although many people do not have the same sense of urgency that existed during the days of gasoline shortages, when motorists had to wait on line, the long range problem facing the country is just as serious as it was then.

"We need an informed public so that the proper pressures can be maintained to ensure that government makes the right decisions with regard to energy," said Hinchey. "The Energy Conference has been called to help provide the kind of information that is needed."

The Conference is open to the general public and begins at 9:45 a.m. on Saturday, May 22, at Ulster County Community College. Panel discussions will comprise the morning session which will end at 12:15. After a break for lunch, the Conference will resume at 1:30 p.m. with a general meeting in the Quimby Auditorium of the Vanderlyn Building.

Auditorium of the Vanderlyn Building.

Assemblyman Hinchey will introduce Assemblyman Dan Haley, Chairman of the New York State Assembly Energy Committee, and Jack Reynolds, Ulster County Energy Co-ordinator, who will be the principal speakers. There will also be summaries presented by the various panels on the results of their morning sessions, and a general discussion from the floor.

Euell's Spirit Goes On

The spirit of Euell Gibbons lives in Billy Joe Tatum of Melbourne, Ark., who stalks the Ozark Mountains in search of the wild asparagus and other edibles. (UPI)

He's Been on Top Of the World

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (UPI) — When Naomi Uemura makes it to this Alaskan village in mid-May he will have ended the longest dogsled trek on record, and a change of diet probably will be uppermost in his mind.

Uemura, of Tokyo, has been mushing his way across the top of the world for 17 months in an effort to complete a solitary 4,000 mile journey. At times he has gone as long as a month without seeing another human being. He exists mostly on dried caribou and whale, but occasionally he shoots a seal or walrus with his .222 rifle — then eats the meat raw.

After leaving Jakobshavn, Greenland, Dec. 20, 1974, Uemura followed the coast of Greenland, crossed the Canadian islands of the Northwest Territory and followed the northern coast of Canada and Alaska to Barrow and then on to Wainwright.

He has stopped to rest at native villages, replenishing provisions and exchanging exhausted dogs for strong ones. He has had to replace 20 dogs, some of which have starved or frozen to death in temperatures that have dropped to 60 degrees below zero.

Although only 35, Uemura accumulated a long record of exploits before beginning his journey by dogsled. He scaled Mt. Everest during one of his four expeditions and reached the summit of Mt. McKinley on a solo expedition. Climbs on those two mountains and on Mt. Blanc, Mt. Kilimanjaro and Mt. Aconcagua make him the only man who has climbed the five highest mountains on five continents. In 1968 he floated nearly 3,800 miles down the Amazon River.

On his present journey, Uemura travels 25 to 30 miles a day wearing a caribou parka, polar bear pants, polar bear boots with dog skin socks and caribou mittens. His trip has been sponsored by the Mainichi Newspaper, Bungei Shunju Publishing Co. and Nippon Education Television Co. His wife and representatives of his sponsors will greet him at Kotzebue.

Philly's 200th Project . . . Living History Center

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Philadelphia did not get to put on a Bicentennial Exposition but it did build the nation's most ambitious municipal Bicentennial project — a Living History Center that cost $11.5 million and looks every penny of it.

The center opened last week almost before the cement and paint were dry, meeting a deadline laid down by Philadelphia '76, the city's Bicentennial organization. Planners had only two years to organize and construct the project after collapse of plans to mount a national exposition.

"At first we wanted a miniature Disney World, but the Disney people said we didn't have enough time," said Richard C. Bond, chairman of Philadelphia '76 and president of the John Wanamaker department stores. "So we turned to master designer Raymond Loewy who consulted with documentary film maker Francis Thompson on a film and electronics project."

Loewy created an exhibition building of modern design in antique rose brick at Sixth and Race streets across from Independence Mall. It includes a handsome movie theater with the largest movie screen in the world, a series of exhibit areas, a capacious cafeteria, a "historytoys" playground, and a leafy garden with a water wall.

Some 875 visitors at a time view Thompson's "American Years" on the 70 by 93 foot screen. History from 1765 to 1976 is condensed into 48 minutes. The film envelops a spectator's complete range of vision with giant images that seem almost real even though they are two dimensional. The new film technique was created by IMAX Entertainment Ltd., of Toronto.

"When I first saw the size of the screen I nearly fainted," said Thompson, an Academy Award winner for his "To Be Alive" at the 1964-65 New York World's Fair. "I asked, 'What shall we make that is suited to this moment?' Then I decided on various moments in the lives of little people — the ordinary events in our history. Hopefully it is not a dull history lesson."

Dull it isn't. Colonial riders hurtle across the screen to spread the word of new taxes. Pioneer families hew a new nation from the wilderness. The first trains conquer the west. Massive engines thrill crowds at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. Blacks march for their rights. Apollo II blasts off with a magnificence that never was realized on home television screens.

The exhibit areas offer enough visual and audio material on American history to occupy visitors for two hours. Outstanding are "To the New World," a slide show of 2,500 pictures showing the impact of immigration; "To Secure These Rights," a dramatic film on the Bill of Rights presented in a 40 room theater; "Soundscapes," audio shows heard through stereophonic headsets; and "Assembly Line," a TV and mirror show that recreates the atmosphere of a factory.

Loewy created a playground that delights both children and adults. Ten antique toys have been reproduced in fiberglass and steel to climb, ride, swing, whirl and jump on. There also is a display of archeological artifacts found on the site of the center, and some fairly undistinguished sculpture. Overall, the center has what it takes to become a permanent attraction once the Bicentennial is over, which is the plan of Philadelphia '76. Altogether the organization has scheduled some 250 Bicentennial events costing the city

$175 million. The Johnson Wax Company gave an assistance grant toward "American Years," a $18 million film.

The center is open from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a

Philly's 200th Project . . . Living History Center

Euell's Spirit Goes On

The spirit of Euell Gibbons lives in Billy Joe Tatum of Melbourne, Ark., who stalks the Ozark Mountains in search of the wild asparagus and other edibles. (UPI)

He's Been on Top Of the World

KOTZEBUE, Alaska (UPI) — When Naomi Uemura makes it to this Alaskan village in mid-May he will have ended the longest dogsled trek on record, and a change of diet probably will be uppermost in his mind.

Uemura, of Tokyo, has been mushing his way across the top of the world for 17 months in an effort to complete a solitary 4,000-mile journey. At times he has gone as long as a month without seeing another human being. He exists mostly on dried caribou and whale, but occasionally he shoots a seal or walrus with his .222 rifle — then eats the meat raw.

After leaving Jakobshavn, Greenland, Dec. 20, 1974, Uemura followed the coast of Greenland, crossed the Canadian islands of the Northwest Territory and followed the northern coast of Canada and Alaska to Barrow and then on to Wainwright.

He has stopped to rest at native villages, replenishing provisions and exchanging exhausted dogs for strong ones. He has had to replace 20 dogs, some of which have starved or frozen to death in temperatures that have dropped to 60 degrees below zero.

Although only 35, Uemura accumulated a long record of exploits before beginning his journey by dogsled. He scaled Mt. Everest during one of his four expeditions and reached the summit of Mt. McKinley on a solo expedition. Climbs on those two mountains and on Mt. Blanc, Mt. Kilimanjaro and Mt. Aconcagua make him the only man who has climbed the five highest mountains on five continents. In 1968 he floated nearly 3,800 miles down the Amazon River.

On his present journey, Uemura travels 25 to 30 miles a day wearing a caribou parka, polar bear pants, polar bear boots with dog skin socks and caribou mittens. His trip has been sponsored by the Mainichi Newspaper, Bungei Shunju Publishing Co. and Nippon Education Television Co. His wife and representatives of his sponsors will greet him at Kotzebue.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Philadelphia did not get to put on a Bicentennial Exposition but it did build the nation's most ambitious municipal Bicentennial project — a Living History Center that cost $11.5 million and looks every penny of it.

The center opened last week almost before the cement and paint were dry, meeting a deadline laid down by Philadelphia '76, the city's Bicentennial organization. Planners had only two years to organize and construct the project after collapse of plans to mount a national exposition.

"At first we wanted a miniature Disney World, but the Disney people said we didn't have enough time," said Richard C. Bond, chairman of Philadelphia '76 and president of the John Wanamaker department stores. "So we turned to master designer Raymond Loewy who consulted with documentary film maker Francis Thompson on a film and electronics project."

Loewy created an exhibition building of modern design in antique rose brick at Sixth and Race streets across from Independence Mall. It includes a handsome movie theater with the largest movie screen in the world, a series of exhibit areas, a spacious cafeteria, a "historytoy" playground, and a leafy garden with a water wall.

Some 875 visitors at a time view Thompson's "American Years" on the 70 by 93-foot screen. History from 1765 to 1976 is condensed into 48 minutes. The film envelops a spectator's complete range of vision with giant images that seem almost real even though they are two dimensional. The new film technique was created by IMAX Entertainment Ltd., of Toronto.

"When I first saw the size of the screen, I nearly fainted," said Thompson an Academy Award winner for his "To Be Alive" at the 1964-65 New York World's Fair. "I asked, 'What shall we make that is suited to this moment?' Then I decided on various moments in the lives of little people — the ordinary events in our history. Hopefully it is not a dull history lesson."

Dull it isn't. Colonial riders hurtle across the screen to spread the word of new taxes. Pioneer families hew a new nation from the wilderness. The first trains conquer the west. Massive engines thrill crowds at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. Blacks march for their rights. Apollo II blasts off with a magnificence that never was realized on home television screens.

The exhibit areas offer enough visual and audio material on American history to occupy visitors for two hours. Outstanding are "To the New World," a slide show of 2,500 pictures showing the impact of immigration; "To Secure These Rights," a dramatic film on the Bill of Rights presented in a 40-room theater, "Soundscapes," audio shows heard through stereophonic headsets; and "Assembly Line," a TV and mirror show that recreates the atmosphere of a factory.

Loewy created a playground that delights both children and adults. Ten antique toys have been reproduced giant size in fiberglass and steel to climb, ride, swing, whirl and jump on. There also is a display of archeological artifacts found on the site of the center, and some fairly undistinguished sculpture. Overall, the center has what it takes to become a permanent attraction once the Bicentennial is over, which is the plan of Philadelphia '76. Altogether the organization has scheduled some 250 Bicentennial events costing the city

$175 million. The Johnson Wax Company gave an assistance grant toward "American Years," a $1.8 million film.

The center is open from 9:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week and charges a $3.50 admission fee for adults, $2 for children and senior citizens. "American Years" shows every hour on the hour beginning at 10 a.m. Adequate parking space is available.

Spirit of '76 Was Scout Gala Theme

Making Ice Cream With Pioneer Tools

Candlemaking Comes Easy to Troop 16

MARBLETOWN — Spirit of '76 prevailed at the recent Scout Expo held at Marbletown Middle School for packs and troops in the Minnewaska District.

Several hundred persons turned out for the affair which featured competitive events and booths in which strations in such things as candlemaking, growing plants and other creative and scientific endeavors were given.

Scout Troop 80 of Bloomington and Cub Pack 17 of Tillson were the two top units receiving prizes and awards for the competitions. Twenty-six units participated under the direction of Alan McCorkle, chairman.

Others assisting in the staging were district director Donald Whitaker, Malcolm Taylor and James Anderson, both of New Paltz.

Making Ice Cream With Pioneer Tools

Candlemaking Comes Easy to Troop 16

MARBLETOWN — Spirit of '76 prevailed at the recent Scout Expo held at Marblertown Middle School for packs and troops in the Minnewaska District.

Several hundred persons turned out for the affair which featured competitive events and booths in which strations in such things as candlemaking, growing plants and other creative and scientific endeavors were given.

Scout Troop 80 of Bloomington and Cub Pack 17 of Tillson were the two top units receiving prizes and awards for the competitions. Twenty-six units participated under the direction of Alan McCorkle, chairman.

Clown Lib, A New Call

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — San Diego State University has graduated its fifth gaggle of giggle getters in a clownology commencement exercise.

Boopjie, Dinky, Kinky, Mournful, Shortcake and 18 other newly minted clowns trooped, bounced and rocked to the commencement platform to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" as rendered on an antique callopie.

Trouble, who is Veronica Cunningham, got vigorous applause from an audience estimated at 2,000 by proposing, as valedictorian, a clown liberation movement. "All we ask as clowns is to be taken seriously," she said.

She also demanded equal time for foolishness and complained that university officials acted as clowns without dressing for the role.

The graduates donned red, white and blue cardboard hats for their song-and-dance routine observing the nation's Bicentennial.

The greasepaint grads wound up festivities by switching to mortarboards for a tassel ceremony and popped out of an 8 foot-tall cake behind a wave of gas-filled balloons.

Their reception was a melange of frizzy purple hair, green and orange plaid coats, oversize rubber noses, floppy shoes, cake and wellwishers.

Speed Reading Course To Begin in Kingston

Arrangements have been made by the Institute of Speed Reading, Inc., to conduct a 24 hour course in speed reading. The course is open to anyone above the age of 13 and guarantees every graduate a reading speed triple that of your present rate and with at least an increase in comprehension.

After the eight week program a person can read any average length book in less than an hour and understand it better. In addition to speed reading the course also emphasizes improved study techniques, better test-taking skills, and increased concentration and retention abilities.

The course requires a person to attend one class per week on the evening of their choice. For those who would like more information without obligation to enroll, a series of Free one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled.

These meetings are free to the public and the course will be explained in complete details including entrance requirements, class room schedule and location. You need to attend only one of the meetings whichever one is most convenient for you. These free one hour orientation lectures will be held as follows:

Monday the 10th at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday the 11th at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday the 12th at 7:30 p.m. AND FINAL MEETING THURSDAY, MAY 13th at 7:30 P.M. ALL MEETINGS UPSTAIRS AT THE KINGSTON-ULSTER COUNTY YMCA, 507 BROADWAY, KINGSTON.

This Is Handyman With Real Talent

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (UPI) — Retiree Virgil Harman says he is the type of handyman whose wife has to call the plumber or the electrician after he finishes "fixing" things around the house.

But Harman, 57, is also a handyman with a special talent, born of an appreciation for the beauty of the fallen cedar logs in New Mexico's mountain forests.

Not liking to see some of the cedars converted into firewood that goes up in smoke through the chimneys of Albuquerque homes, Harman decided several years ago to do something about it.

Since then he has made more than 100 wall and mantle clocks from the logs he said were "too pretty to burn." He gives away some of the timepieces, sells others and keeps the rest — currently numbering eight — in his own home.

Battery-powered "rustic clocks" made by the former security specialist at Kirtland Air Force Base are now being displayed in homes from Ohio to Oklahoma to California. A good share of them are in Oklahoma City, where Harman was born and reared and where his parents recently celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary.

Three years ago, Harman recalls, he came back from the nearby mountains with a load of logs.

"I was cutting it up for fireplace wood, but its beauty and that cedar chest smell. I just kinda quit cutting. I just couldn't put a match to them, so I stored the logs in the garage."

"Six months later one of my wall clocks refused to run and I took it to a repairman. I watched the guy as he put in a whole set of new movements."

"It looked real easy. Then, like a bolt of lightning, it struck me. My logs would make ideal clock faces and I could by the movements from a supplier."

Harman doesn't try to sell the clocks. The news of the timepieces spreads by word of mouth and people contact him looking for Christmas and birthday gifts or clocks for their homes.

Harman recommends clock making as good therapy and a good hobby and he says "if anybody wants to get started, I'd be glad to help them."

Although he prefers the cedar wood with its red or white hues, Harman says, "some people use walnut, which is a hardwood and others use California redwood. You could use really any type of wood."

Harman's recipe: Get a log measuring 12 to 18 inches in diameter and cut slices two to three inches thick. Sand the wood for about four or five hours, then give it a couple of coats of sealer.

Harman uses a router — similar to an electric drill — to make a hole in the center of the slice for the hand shaft to go through and a three to four inch cavity is opened for the movement.

Harman applies six coats of clear liquid plastic and glues numbers on the front for the clock face. The hands then are put on the shaft.

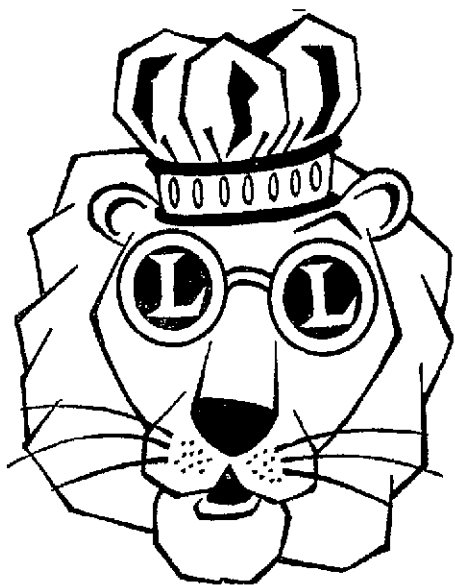

It takes about a week to turn out a finished product because of all the drying time needed, Harman says, but four or five clocks can be made at the same time.

"You can get the movements starting at $7-$8," Harman says. "When I sell the clocks, the price starts at $20 on up to around $50."

For a mantle clock, Harman says, mount the face on branches used as a base by drilling a couple of holes in the two pieces and inserting dowels — pegs placed into the corresponding holes — and glue.

Asked about the skill level required to make the clocks, Harman says, "Usually when I do something around the house my wife has to call in the professionals to redo it."

He says his wife "kind of gets bored" with his clock making sometimes and "doesn't like cleaning up all the mess of the sawdust getting tracked in the house, but I try to be careful."

Burn Center Check Presented

ALBANY — Representatives of the Volunteer Firefighters Burn Treatment Fund of Ulster, Orange and Sullivan Counties recently presented a check $26,050 check to officials at the Albany Medical Burn Center.

The check represented the latest installment of monies collected locally during a year-long fund drive. The total collected in the tri-county area, and turned over to the Burn Center, now stands at $118,000.

According to an announcement by Roy Mick and Ernest Alberg, members of the Board of Directors of the tri-county fund drive, the financial assistance to Albany Medical Center's burn care unit will insure residents of the Mid-Hudson Region adequate and professional burn treatment in the event of an emergency.

The latest $26,050 donation will be used specifically to purchase needed equipment for the facility, and to train a nurse clinician, who will organize an education program for the nursing staff at the burn unit, and act as a consultant to other burn units at other hospitals.

RVC Moves On Dropouts

KYSERIKE — James O'Connell, Rondout Valley superintendent of schools, has begun a new program at Rondout Valley High School, dealing with school dropouts and potential dropouts.

The program provides attractive educational options to meet the needs of secondary school dropouts and in-school youths who are potential dropouts. O'Connell notes that the main objective is to build functional competence in each enrolled student in the areas of basic, life and career skills.

The district will re-enroll youths who have already dropped out for a variety of reasons. For these youngsters there will be alternative work-study experience programs, competency-based diploma granting and other educational opportunities.

The Mid-Hudson School Study council development office is bringing together agencies and funding sources for the new program.

Statement on Chlorinators 'Not A Contradiction'

SPRING LAKE—County Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto says it is not a "contradiction" for him to suggest that residents of Spring Lake area can alleviate their polluted water problems by purchasing chlorinators.

Dutto, who had written the Kingston Water Board about three months ago on behalf of the residents of Gulf Terrace, Saccoman Lane, Catskill Avenue and Spring Lake Drive, stating that "every effort should be made to obtain a source of water," told the Freeman his position hasn't changed. "There's nothing new on that statement," he said. "If they were smart they'd each get their own chlorinator."

Dutto indicated that his statement about chlorinators had more to do with economics and political realities than health problems. A chlorinator costs about $200 with another $25 or so for a filter to remove the taste from the water. Hooking into the Kingston Water system could cost more than $2,000 for each family, and there is no indication the city is ready to grant permission for a Spring Lake connection.

Dutto remains "seriously concerned" about potential health hazards but said he is not about to declare a formal health hazard in the area. Dutto said if he were to declare a health hazard it would mean by law that all homes in the affected area would have to be boarded up and evacuated, the town would have to drill for a new source of water and the expense would be borne by the residents. From a practical standpoint and from a health standpoint, Dutto said the situation doesn't warrant such action, although he admits the "potential" for serious health problems is there.

The health department has not done any widespread testing of water in the 59-home Spring Lake area bordering the city since July 1974. At that time water in 38 homes was tested at the request of the Ulster

Town Board. Nine unsatisfactory water samples were found, according to John Power of the health department. Of that number, seven were found on Gulf Terrace and two on Saccoman Lane. Only 38 of the 59 homes were tested, according to Power, because, "They were the people who were home." He said the testing had been well publicized beforehand.

Power said the department's tests almost two years ago revealed levels of coliform in the nine homes that by departmental standards were unsatisfactory. Coliform is an intestinal bacteria which Power said in itself is not harmful but can be an indicator of some harmful bacteria. "It's very hardy," Power explained. "They survive a lot longer. If you don't have them it means others probably aren't present."

Residents of Spring Lake are continuing their efforts to secure city water. A petition drive in the city has already garnered several hundred signatures. In addition, residents have petitioned the Common Council to intercede with the water board which voted 4-1 against them in February.

Statement on Chlorinators 'Not A Contradiction'

SPRING LAKE—County Health Commissioner Dr. Bartholomew J. Dutto says it is not a "contradiction" for him to suggest that residents of Spring Lake area can alleviate their polluted water problems by purchasing chlorinators.

Dutto, who had written the Kingston Water Board about three months ago on behalf of the residents of Gulf Terrace, Saccoman Lane, Catskill Avenue and Spring Lake Drive, stating that "every effort should be made to obtain a source of water," told the Freeman his position hasn't changed. "There's nothing new on that statement," he said. "If they were smart they'd each get their own chlorinator."

Dutto indicated that his statement about chlorinators had more to do with economics and political realities than health problems. A chlorinator costs about $200 with another $25 or so for a filter to remove the taste from the water. Hooking into the Kingston Water system could cost more than $2,000 for each family, and there is no indication the city is ready to grant permission for a Spring Lake connection.

Dutto remains "seriously concerned" about potential health hazards but said he is not about to declare a formal health hazard in the area. Dutto said if he were to declare a health hazard it would mean by law that all homes in the affected area would have to be boarded up and evacuated, the town would have to drill for a new source of water and the expense would be borne by the residents. From a practical standpoint and from a health standpoint, Dutto said the situation doesn't warrant such action, although he admits the "potential" for serious health problems is there.

The health department has not done any widespread testing of water in the 59-home Spring Lake area bordering the city since July 1974. At that time water in 38 homes was tested at the request of the Ulster

Town Board. Nine unsatisfactory water samples were found, according to John Power of the health department. Of that number, seven were found on Gulf Terrace and two on Saccoman Lane. Only 38 of the 59 homes were tested, according to Power, because, "They were the people who were home." He said the testing had been well publicized beforehand.

Power said the department's tests almost two years ago revealed levels of coliform in the nine homes that by departmental standards were unsatisfactory. Coliform is an in-

Residents of Spring Lake are continuing their efforts to secure city water. A petition drive in the city has already garnered several hundred signatures. In addition, residents have petitioned the Common Council to intercede with the water board which voted 4-1 against them in February.

Burn Center Check Presented

at the Albany Medical Burn Center.

The check represented the latest installment of monies collected locally during a year-long fund drive. The total collected in the tri-county area, and turned over to the Burn Center, now stands at $118,000.

According to an announcement by Roy Mick and Ernest Alberg, members of the Board of Directors of the tri-county fund drive, the financial assistance to Albany Medical Center's burn care unit will insure residents of the Mid-Hudson Region adequate and professional burn treatment in the event of an emergency.

The latest $26,050 donation will be used specifically to purchase needed equipment for the facility, and to train a nurse clinician, who will organize an education program for the nursing staff at the burn unit, and act as a consultant to other burn units at other hospitals.

RVC Moves On Dropouts

KYSERIKE — James O'Connell, Rondout Valley superintendent of schools, has begun a new program at Rondout Valley High School, dealing with school dropouts and potential dropouts.

The program provides attractive educational options to meet the needs of secondary school dropouts and in-school youths who are potential dropouts. O'Connell notes that the main objective is to build functional competence in each enrolled student in the areas of basic, life and career skills.

The district will re-enroll youths who have already dropped out for a variety of reasons. For these youngsters there will be alternative work-study experience programs, competency-based diploma granting and other educational opportunities.

The Mid-Hudson School Study council development office is bringing together agencies and funding sources for the new program.

When God Created Mothers...

When the Good Lord was creating Mothers he was into his sixth day of "overtime" when the angel appeared and said, "You're doing a lot of fiddling around on this one."

And the Lord said, "Have you read the spec on this order?"

She has to be completely washable, but not plastic.

Have 180 moveable parts . . . all replaceable.

Run on black coffee and leftovers.

Have a lap that disappears when she stands up.

A kiss that can cure anything from a broken leg to a disappointed love affair.

And six pairs of hands.

The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands . . . no way."

"It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said the Lord. "It's the three pairs of eyes that Mothers have to have."

"That's on the standard model?" asked the angel.

The Lord nodded. "One pair that sees through closed doors when she asks, 'What are you kids doing in there?' when she already knows. Another here in the back of her head that sees what she shouldn't but what she has to know, and of course the ones here in front that can look at a child when he goofs up and say, 'I understand and I love you' without so much as uttering a word."

"Lord," said the angel touching His sleeve gently, "Come to bed. Tomorrow . . ."

"I can't," said the Lord, "I'm so close to creating something so close to myself. Already I have one who heals herself when she is sick . . . can feed a family of six on one pound of hamburger . . . and can get a nine-year-old to stand under a shower."

The angel circled the model of a Mother very slowly.

"It's too soft," she sighed.

"But tough!" said the Lord excitedly. "You cannot imagine what this Mother can do or endure."

"Can it think?"

"Not only think, but it can reason and compromise," said the Creator.

Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek. "There's a leak," she pronounced. "I told you you were trying to put too much into this model."

"It's not a leak," said the Lord, "It's a tear."

"What's it for?"

"It's for joy, sadness, disappointment, pain, loneliness and pride."

"You are a genius," said the angel.

What's a Mother To Do?

Rare or remote is the mother who hasn't worried over little ones in traffic, but no one has the problem of the Kittiwake above. We can't imagine what she found so attractive about the site, but she chose to nest beside the runway at Ulster Airport. At each take-off, the Kittiwake spreads her fragile

Consumer Panel: Verdicts in On Mayonnaise and Pancake Mix

KINGSTON— What with spring past the midway mark and summer just around the corner, weight-conscious calorie-counters are planning menus geared to get them into last year's bikini.

One of the items selected this week to be tested by the consumer panel was a help in that department. It's Kraft Imitation Mayonnaise, with half the calories of regular mayonnaise. The second item is Aunt Jemima Whole Wheat Pancake and Waffle Mix.

Emily Spada of Saugerties said it was a "riot" at her home the night she served pancakes and sausage. "I'm not very proficient at making nice round pancakes. To me it's an ordeal," she said. Her batter was too thick so her husband added milk. Then, it was too runny. "But, the LAST pancake was perfect, round and brown."

The family agreed the pancakes were delicious. "The whole wheat was by far superior to the regular, especially these days when everyone is so conscious of nutrition." (Pancakes were purchased at Weis Market in Kingston at 83 cents for 35 ounce box.)

had tried Kraft Imitation Mayonnaise a year ago and "no one liked it," she decided it might have been a case of mind over matter. This time she made no issue of it and didn't bother to tell her husband and son of the switch. Since both of them enjoy lettuce and mayonnaise with their lunch meat, she used the Kraft product instead of her usual spread. At the end of the week, she asked: "How were your sandwiches this week?" Both father and son said "delicious." They didn't know the difference.

Mrs. Spada also made a tuna fish salad using the imitation mayonnaise which the family enjoyed. "It costs less money than my regular mayonnaise (87 cents a quart jar at Waldbaum's in Kingston) and has fewer calories, so we're switching to 'imitation' instead of the 'real,'" Mrs. Spada concluded.

Gloria Casciaro's family of Kingston "really enjoyed the flavor and lightness of the pancakes which had a 'bit of a nutty flavor.'" Her three sons preferred the buttermilk waffles which seemed to be a little heavier than the pancakes.

Emily Spada

Being whole wheat, she felt, the pancakes had more nutrients and, she added "I'll definitely buy them again." (Purchased at Grand Union at 79 cents for 32 ounce box.)

Mrs. Casciaro wasn't sure how she was going to "push the imitation mayonnaise" on her family who was used to Hellmann's. She tried it first in a trout salad (her husband caught the fish) and everyone said it was delicious...had a much lighter taste. And it was "really great in tuna salad, too. My son Paul loved it." She found it to be equally good for blue cheese dressing. Although two of her sons still preferred Hellmann's on sandwiches, she said she would buy it again. "It's good for dieters, lower in calories, fat saturates and cholesterol than the real thing." (Purchased at Governor Clinton Market for 93 cents a quart.)

Bernadette Morris of New Paltz liked the whole wheat pancakes but found "the batter too thick in their proportion so they took a little longer to cook. Then, I added a little more milk." The family enjoyed the whole wheat taste, and agreed "it was good for a change." She intends to buy them again. (Purchased at Grand Union in New Paltz.)

As for the imitation mayonnaise, "I prefer Hellmann's or Miracle Whip, but my daughter loved it on sandwiches." Her husband and son are not mayonnaise-eaters, but in salad "they couldn't tell the difference." To Mrs. Morris, the imitation seemed "eggier" and, "while it wasn't disagreeable, I didn't like it as well as my regular brands." She added, "for those who must watch their fat intake, it's a good purchase." (Kraft product was from Shop-Rite in New Paltz.)

Dorothy Lynch of High Falls had only the highest adjectives — "great...marvelous...best mix I've ever tried" — to describe the pancake mix. Mrs. Lynch has been using the same mix for 20 years but due to this week's testing, she's going to switch. "The pancakes were so light, everything they should be, as well as being good for you. It's nice to have something be good for you and still taste good." (Shop-Rite in New Paltz at 79 cents for 35 ounce box.)

On the other hand, Mrs.

Gloria Casciaro

Lynch who is natural food-minded, hesitated on trying the imitation mayonnaise. "It tastes exactly like real mayonnaise, but I don't like imitations. I can't see the point of using them. I'm trying to cut down on foods that contain chemicals and food additives. Kraft's product uses five chemicals or additives while the product I use now only has one."

Mrs. Lynch will not "buy it or use it again." She noted the opposite extremes in the two products selected to be tested. "The whole wheat product is the way we're supposed to eat, the other is 'man-made.'" (Purchased at Shop-Rite in New Paltz at 59 cents a pint.)

At the Thomas Reynolds III home in Woodstock, Mrs. Reynolds reports "everyone seemed to enjoy the pancakes (especially my 14 month old), but couldn't compare their taste to 'regular' ones because they were 'just different.'"

Mrs. Reynolds added: "For preparation, the mix truly is different. The batter is thinner than you'd expect — we even double-checked the recipe. When they say 30 pancakes, they MEAN 30 pancakes. For this reason, the mix is, perhaps, more economical than it had first seemed. (83 cents at Weis Market) Also, since unbleached flours are used, it should be more nutritious."

Regarding the Kraft product, Mrs. Reynolds' mother cautioned: "If you want a really good salad, you must use REAL mayonnaise." So, it was with reluctance that she tried Kraft's Imitation Mayonnaise.

Being calorie-conscious (the comparison is 105 calories per tablespoon as opposed to only 40 calories per tablespoon), Mrs. Reynolds used the spread on everything from salads to sandwiches. "I was amazed...it's super," she said.

Mrs. Reynolds made her purchase at Weis Market for 59 cents "after seeing it as high as 87 cents in another store." On asking the manager about the difference in price, he commented: "It all evens out anyway," referring, she said, to the possibility of his store carrying other lower-priced items. Mrs. Reynolds concluded: "You've got to shop around to make ends meet."

(Two weeks from today, our consumer testing panel will offer their critiques on two "natural" food products: Nature Valley Granola, 100 per cent natural and ready-to-eat, no additives, no preservatives; and Breyers all-natural ice cream.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Kelly of Red Hook. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mizerak of Cayuta.

The Rev. Francis Sample of Red Hook officiated at the ceremony. Organist Randy Franklin provided wedding selections.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She selected a gown of imported organza fashioned with a modified Empire bodice featuring a scooped neckline and cap sleeves. A border of pale pink crystal pleated organza, accented with a narrow floral-patterned Venice lace braid, trimmed the neckline. A deep flounce of pleated organza bordered the hemline of the A-line skirt which swept back to form an attached chapel length train and created an apron detail at the back.

Miss Toni Rossi, cousin of the bride, Yonkers, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Kathleen Kelly, and Colleen Kelly, sisters of the bride, Red Hook.

Joseph Mizerak of Cayuta was best man for his brother. Ushers were James Mizerak, brother of the bridegroom, Cayuta, and Kevin Kelly, brother of the bride, Red Hook.

A reception was given at Capri 400 Restaurant in Port Ewen.

The bride, a 1971 graduate of Red Hook Central High School, was graduated in 1973 from State University of New York at Cobleskill and from Rochester Institute of Technology, class of 1975, with a bachelor's degree in Hospital Dietetics.

Her husband, a 1970 alumnus of Horsehead's High School, received his bachelor's degree in Mathematics from Rochester Institute of Technology, class of 1974. He is employed as an associate programmer at IBM in Endicott.

The couple will reside at Glen Aubrey.

The Rev. Peter Damian officiated at the ceremony. Carmela DiCamillis, organist; Nicholas and Alice Brown, guitar and vocalists, provided wedding selections.

The bride was given in marriage by her grandfather, Edward Fischer. She wore an ivory colored Irish linen gown styled with an empire waistline, scooped neckline and long bell sleeves. The sleeves and skirt were trimmed in lace. Her dress and veil were made by Doris Herring. Margaret Schenck of New Paltz was matron of honor for her sister. Best man was Richard Ruby of Saugerties. Ushers were David Pugliese of Kingston; James Yarter of Hurley; and Robert Swart of Saugerties.

A reception was given at The Hedges in West Park.

The bride, a graduate of St. Helena High School in the Bronx, and St. Joseph's College in Brooklyn, is employed by Kingston Consolidated Schools at Meagher School. She is a member of Beta Sigma Phi.

Her husband, an alumnus of Kingston High School, is employed as sales manager by 7 Up Bottling Co. in Kingston. He is a member of Saugerties Gun Club and New York State Amateur Trap Shooting Association.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert will reside at Port Ewen.

Petrizzo-Och

Paulette Petrizzo of Box 6, Esopus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V.J. Petrizzo, became the bride of Edward J. Och Jr. of 5 Holly Hills Drive, Woodstock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Och Sr. of Flushing, L.I.

The Rev. R. Dubuque, pastor, officiated at the ceremony April 24 at Port Ewen United Methodist Church. Mrs. Carmela Smith, sister of the bride, was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a polyester

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside at Woodstock.

MR. and MRS. JAMES M. KELLY

were provided.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, chose an ivory organza gown featuring an empire bodice with a transparent yoke. Venice motifs applied the bodice, ring neckline and cuffs of the semi-bishop sleeves. A wide flounce bordered the hemline, with motifs applied to give a scalloped effect. The chapel length train had narrow Venice lace at the hemline. Her blusher and mantilla had been worn by her mother.

Cheryl Ann Cahoon of Hurley was maid of honor for her sister. Attendants were Michelle Cahoon, Hurley, sister of the bride; Grace Kelly, Kingston; sister of the bride; groom; and Mary Anne Volpe of West Hurley.

Michael Joy of 62 East Chester Street, Kingston, was best man. Ushers were Thomas Kelly, John Kelly, brothers of the bridegroom, Kingston; Glenn Marrus of Hurley.

A reception was given at Twin Lakes Restaurant. The bride, a graduate of Kingston High School, is employed as secretary at Sears Roebuck and Co.

Her husband, an alumnus of KHS, is serving with the armed forces in Seoul, Korea.

Attending the wedding from England were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hill and her two aunts, Mrs. Timothy Buckley and Mrs. Norman Buckley.

Musialkiewicz-Koosis Vows Exchanged

MRS. ANTHONY J. KOOSIS
(Diana Helen Musialkiewicz)

Miss Diana Helen Musialkiewicz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Musialkiewicz of 845 Nicholas Avenue, Kingston, exchanged wedding vows with Anthony John Koosis, son of Mrs. Isola Biase and the late John Koosis of Arlington, Va., on Saturday, April 24 at Immaculate Conception Church, Kingston.

The Rev. Joseph Kozlowski officiated at the double ring ceremony. Joseph Eigo, organist, accompanied Richard Scherer who sang wedding selections.

The bride and bridegroom each presented their mothers with a rose.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of silk organza styled with a high Victorian neckline and deep yoke of Chantilly lace. The full skirt was fashioned in a redingote effect edged with Chantilly lace and accented with crystals and seed pearls. Appliques of matching lace bordered the gown.

Jeannie Modert of 132 Clinton Avenue, Kingston, was matron of honor. Attendants were Cynthia Rose of Conifer Lane, Kingston, and Donna Banks of New York City.

Joseph Mehm, brother-in-law of the bride, Rifton, was best man. Ushers were James Countryman and George Countryman of Groff Street, Kingston.

A wedding reception was given at White Eagle Hall, Kingston.

The bride, a graduate of Kingston High School and Ulster County Community College, attended Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, Ill. She is employed as a research worker for the State Department of Illinois.

Her husband, an alumnus of Yorktown High School, Arlington, Va., and Southern Illinois University, is employed by Michael French and Associates, Insurance Co., Mt. Vernon, Ill.

The couple will reside in Carbondale, Ill.

Gardecki-Lukaszewski

Anita M. Gardecki, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Gardecki of 50 Stephan Street, Kingston, exchanged nuptial vows with Gerard P. Lukaszewski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lukaszewski of 170 Clifton Avenue, Kingston.

The Rev. Walter Doty officiated at the ceremony April 25 at St. Mary's Church in Kingston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose an A-line gown accented with white Chantilly lace.

JoAnn M. Gardecki of Kingston was maid of honor for her sister. Attendants were Deborah Carlino, Michele DeCicco, both of Kingston. Flower girl was Dorene Gardecki, sister of the bride.

Peter F. Tiano Jr. of 175 Old Flatbush Avenue, Kingston, was best man. Ushers were Warren Lawrence of Hurley and Richard Harnden of Sylvester Street, Kingston.

A reception was given at Walnut Grove in Kingston.

The bride, a 1974 graduate of Kingston High School, is employed by Shop-Rite. Her husband attended KHS and is employed by M.O.K. Enterprises.

Mr. and Mrs. Lukaszewski will reside at Stuyvesant Charter Apartments.

Ted Bessell, the smile of success is sometimes a scowl.

That Man . . . Ted Bessell

By MARIAN CHRISTY

NEW YORK — Ted Bessell, that man who played opposite Marlo Thomas in "That Girl," is answering that question about whether or not Marlo eclipsed him in the ABC-TV series which ran five years. He claims he let her be The Star.

"I wasn't competitive with Marlo," says Bessell — despite reports of stormy confrontations that were said to have led to frequent verbal clashes. "Marlo wanted to be up-front, so I stood back," says Bessell, whose marriage proposal to Marlo was mutually disavowed.

New York-born Bessell, 40, a somber-looking man who wears denim aviator suits and a scowl that is born of vulnerability rather than scorn, says he still isn't a "star" in the traditional sense of the word — and doesn't care.

He says: "If you're a star, which I'm not, you concentrate on promoting yourself so that the public believes in your superiority. But that illusion detaches you from the world and, when you're set apart, you realize that stardom is another kind of alienation."

Bessell, who's currently appearing in the Broadway play, "Same Time Next Year," says no person ever made a "rational decision" to become an actor. "I fantasized that acting was a place where I could really belong," he broods. "But in the end, I felt I didn't belong at all."

Apparently Bessell, who has gone through periods of severe loneliness, has always been a "seeker of truth."

When he graduated from Washington's Georgetown University, class of 1958, he seriously considered entering the priesthood. But, in the final analysis, the priesthood seemed like an "escape hatch" from the real world.

"When I examined the reasons behind my religious ambitions," he says, "I realized that my motivations were based on a need to put on a costume and act out a part."

Bessell, who is living with a woman he loves, says he prefers "relationships" to contractual marriage. "Of course," he admits, "these theories are based on my own emotional difficulties. I don't feel legalities have any place in a commitment between two people."

There was never a feeling of kinship between Bessell and his parents.

About his father, a toy company executive:

"We didn't know each other. When I told him I was going into acting, he uttered the usual plethora of clichés — that acting was a risky business and that the people I'd come in contact with were questionable types."

About his mother, New York radio actress, Jo Bessell, now living in Newport Beach, Calif.:

"We're not friends." "If you don't have nice things to say about mother, you never come out a winner. But, of course, the hardest thing in the world is to reject someone else's version of life and live by your own standards and dreams. Oh, this is awfully difficult to talk about because it challenges things that are sacred to me."

Bessell, who's financially successful, owns a colonial-style house in a prestigious area of Bel Aire, Calif., and maintains a Greenwich Village apartment here.

"Wherever I am living, I arrange it so I can leave that address in about five minutes," says Bessell, who is secure with a "hang-loose" lifestyle. "The regimentation of one's life — home, marriage and family — are frightening areas for me. When I bought the California house, it was a self-admission that I was ready to establish roots. But, as it turns out, I can leave even that house in exactly five minutes."

Bessell, who obviously has not "found himself" in acting, talks about wanting to retire, at least temporarily, to a solitary existence.

"I'd like to back off from the world and do nothing, absolutely nothing," he says. "One of the questions I want to settle in my mind is this: Which relationship is more important — the relationship between a Person and The Job or the relationship between a person and Another Person?"

Bessell is disenchanted with the American concept of success, which is judged by one's earnings and the trappings that those earnings can buy.

"Why does success always have to do with winning?" he asks. "If a person is successful by current standards, he or she has to struggle to achieve power. If a person has power, he is said to be successful."

"To me, the most successful person has peace of mind."

When God Created Mothers...

When the Good Lord was creating Mothers he was into his sixth day of "overtime" when the angel appeared and said, "You're doing a lot of fiddling around on this one." And the Lord said, "Have you read the spec on this order?"

She has to be completely washable, but not plastic. Have 180 moveable parts all replaceable.

Run on black coffee and left-tovers. Have a lap that disappears when she stands up. A kiss that can cure anything from a broken leg to a disappointed love affair. And six pairs of hands. The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands... no way."

"It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said

the Lord. "It's the three pairs of eyes that Mothers have to have."

"That's on the standard model?" asked the angel.

The Lord nodded. "One pair that sees through closed doors when she asks, 'What are you kids doing in there?' when she already knows. Another here in the back of her head that sees what she shouldn't but what she has to know, and of course the ones here in front that can look at a child when he goes up and say, 'I understand and I love you' without so much as uttering a word."

"Lord," said the angel touching His sleeve gently, "Come to bed. Tomorrow

"I can't," said the Lord, "I'm so close to creating something so close to myself. Already I have one who heals herself when she is sick... can feed a family of six on one pound of hamburger... and can get a nine-year-old to stand under a shower."

The angel circled the model of a Mother very slowly. "It's too soft," she sighed.

"But tough!" said the Lord excitedly. "You cannot imagine what this Mother can do or endure."

"Can it think?"

"Not only think, but it can reason and compromise," said the Creator.

"It's not a leak," said the Lord. "It's a tear."

"What's it for?"

"It's for joy, sadness, disappointment, pain, loneliness and pride."

"You are a genius," said the angel.

SUNDAY, MAY 9

Your birthday today: Kicks off a successful campaign for self-improvement. Abstract and practical knowledge is required, including some not as yet available in schools. Many events this year encourage a revision of goals as you gain broader perspective on the possibilities at hand. Today's natives are graceful, physically active, some famous as dancers. In others the gift takes mental form in agile minds.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Be prepared for rarely seen visitors, perhaps messengers from distant places. This is a Sunday to stay at or return home. Celebrate once again!

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Team up with others of similar interests for a hobby project. Lasting benefit is achieved by pursuing special connections to improve your public image.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Organize an outing. Bring along those you're negotiating business with, get acquainted as people rather than commercial robots, and all goes better later.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Subtle encouragement is offered for constructive ideas. Exclude business contacts from most of your social plans. Discreet personal plans advance readily.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): There's nothing special to attend to, a "big deal" is not as important as reported. Avoid taking matters to heart. Relax, with open show of feelings.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get things in order. Touches of formality enhance the depth of today's emotional expression. Evening brightens as romantic attraction becomes stronger.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gather individuals you're seldom able to get together for a planning session. The chance to meet VIPs is one of today's characteristics, so be well turned out.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): For a change, make an effort to reach people socially. Then during the workweek it's easier to do business with them. Give a moderate party tonight.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have no trouble finding any number of lively excursions. Just be sure nobody with a great interest in your welfare is neglected or out of touch.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make peace, bring together those who have disagreed. Correct false impressions concerning you and your career. Home life has happy surprises.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Enjoy traditional observances, showing your appreciation. Overcome a temptation to loaf, a creative adjustment in work saves much bother later on.

Glad Day for Mom

DEAR READERS: Today is Mother's Day. Many suspect that it is just another commercial holiday dreamed up by florists and merchants to stimulate business.

Not so! Mother's Day was actually conceived by Anna M. Jarvis of Philadelphia who in 1907 persuaded her minister to have a special church service the second Sunday in May to honor all mothers. Those with living mothers wore red carnations, and those without mothers wore white carnations. This custom is still observed in some areas.

Mother's Day is a day of gladness to most mothers. But not for all. I should know. For weeks following Mother's Day, my desk is covered with the tear-stained letters of mothers who have been snubbed, slighted or forgotten.

Two typical post-Mother's Day letters:

DEAR ABBY: Ever since my son got married, he forgot that he has a mother. Every holiday—including Mother's Day—his wife drags him to HER people, and he goes like a little puppy without even putting up a fight.—NEGLECTED IN NEW ORLEANS

DEAR ABBY: My son lives in the same city with me, but I'm lucky if I see him six times a year for 10 minutes. Then on Mother's Day he sends me a bouquet of roses. Big deal!—HURT IN HOUSTON

Each year, disappointed mothers send me the verse: "A son is a son until he takes a wife, but a daughter is a daughter all her life."

My mail constantly reaffirms the fact that one of the most sensitive of all human relationships is the one that exists between a woman and her mother-in-law (There is far more friction between a woman and her husband's mother than between a man and the mother of his wife.)

You don't have to be a Dear Abby to know that being a good mother-in-law is one of the most difficult roles in the world.

When God Created Mothers...

And the Lord said, "Have you read the spec on this order?"

She has to be completely washable, but not plastic. Have 180 moveable parts all replaceable.

Run on black coffee and leftovers.

Have a lap that disappears when she stands up.

A kiss that can cure anything from a broken leg to a disappointed love affair.

And six pairs of hands.

The angel shook her head slowly and said, "Six pairs of hands... no way."

"It's not the hands that are causing me problems," said

the Lord. "It's the three pairs of eyes that Mothers have to have."

"That's on the standard model?" asked the angel.

The Lord nodded. "One pair that sees through closed doors when she asks, 'What are you kids doing in there?' when she already knows. Another here in the back of her head that sees what she shouldn't but what she has to know, and of course the ones here in front that can look at a child when he goes off and say, 'I understand and I love you' without so much as uttering a word."

"Lord," said the angel touching His sleeve gently, "Come to bed. Tomorrow..."

"I can't," said the Lord, "I'm so close to creating something so close to myself. Already I have one who heals herself when she is sick... can feed a family of six on one pound of hamburger... and can get a nine-year-old to stand under a shower."

The angel circled the model of a Mother very slowly. "It's too soft," she sighed.

"But tough!" said the Lord excitedly. "You cannot imagine what this Mother can do or endure."

"Can it think?"

"Not only think, but it can reason and compromise," said the Creator.

Finally, the angel bent over and ran her finger across the cheek. "There's a leak," she pronounced. "I told you you were trying to put too much into this model."

"It's not a leak," said the Lord, "it's a tear."

"What's it for?"

"It's for joy, sadness, disappointment, pain, loneliness and pride."

"You are a genius," said the angel.

The Lord looked somber. "I didn't put it there."

Q: Are those two new Hollywood brides, Tuesday Weld and Karen Black, enjoying marriage and motherhood? - L.A., San Bernardino, Calif. 3

A: Too bad, trouble in paradise for both Karen and her husband, writer Kit Carson, and Tuesday and her husband, British comic Dudley Moore. Both babies are doing fine, however.

Q: I hear my darling Woody Allen is making a new movie with Diane Keaton. What's this one to laugh over? - E.T., Peabody, Mass.

A: Can't say for sure as no one, not even the actors, has been allowed a peek at the entire script. All they're told is what's on the shooting schedule for that particular day.

Q: Has TV's David Frost gone ahead with the Nixon interviews on schedule? - P.F., Daytona Beach, Fla.

A: The interviews have been postponed at Nixon's request until after the November election. There has been fear that no matter how tight the security, some of the interview material might get out and have an influence on the November voting. Of course, Nixon could hardly be expected to be in a visiting mood these days with the Woodward-Bernstein book, "The Final Days," newly Alan Greenspan. However, nothing definite yet since when will Greenspan be if Ford loses the election? Remember, Barbara likes her men powerful so maybe we'll have to wait until after November to see what happens.

Q: Are the Beatles really so rich that they can resist the huge sums being suggested for a single reunion concert? - K.F., Syracuse, N.Y.

A: Yes they are. They are selling more records today in England than they ever did. One of the reasons is that their recording company, EMI, decided to promote all of their singles at the same time. Others are now complaining that the unprecedented surge in Beatle record sales is preventing newcomers from getting the hearing they deserve.

Q: Why don't the stars answer the letters I write to them? R.W., Springfield, Mass.

A: How could they manage it? In the old days, stars worked for studios which had large fan mail departments for dealing with thousands of letters. Every writer got an autographed photo and a form personal letter in reply. But these days the film and TV celebrities are largely independent and couldn't possibly cope with such a deluge of mail—mainly requests for money. Hence they are very careful not to reveal their personal addresses and seldom answer the fan mail that does get through.

Area Church News

Feud Explodes Over Ordination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Moderates in the feuding Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod have raised another explosive issue in the dispute which threatens to divide the denomination—women's ordination.

Seminex, the rebel "seminary-in-exile" founded by moderates when denomination leaders suspended the president of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, has "certified as qualified for the ministry" a woman student serving an internship in Oakland, Calif.

The woman, Jan Otte, will receive her master of divinity degree from Seminex this spring and is seeking a call and ordination in the Missouri Synod. Seminex officials believe she will succeed in receiving a call from a moderate-leaning congregation in the 2.8 million member denomination.

At least two issues are involved in the controversy: Women's ordination and the right of congregations to call whomever they want for ministry.

The Missouri Synod, the nation's eighth largest Protestant denomination in the United States, has consistently reaffirmed its objection to women pastors. Both the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, Missouri's sister churches, allow ordination of women.

At its 1971 convention, the Missouri Synod declared: "The Word of God does not permit women to hold pastoral office or to serve in any capacity involving distinctive functions of this office."

In early April, the faculties of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill., expressed concern over the possibility of Seminex certifying intern Otte and urged synodical officials to take "strong and immediate" action in the event such an ordination occurs.

Evangelical Lutherans in Mission, the moderate organization in the Missouri Synod and Seminex's primary financial backer, have surveyed their membership and found a majority support ordination of women.

One of the main issues in the decade-long dispute in Missouri has been over congregational autonomy and the rights of congregations over the central administration of the synod in St. Louis. That administration is controlled by conservatives.

Moderates, angered by the suspension of the Rev. John Tietjen as president of Concordia Seminary, established Seminex and moderate congregations still in the Missouri Synod have continued to call graduates of the rebel seminary.

Community Service

NEW PALTZ — The Foundation for Religion and Mental Health and the University of Bridgeport have joined in a new post-graduate degree-granting program designed to help meet increasing needs for mental health services in Hudson Valley Communities.

Announcement of the expansion of an educational partnership forged earlier this year was made by the Rev. Ralph Fogg, director of the Mid-Hudson Counseling Centers, with the Rev. Robert C. Hamlyn, president of the Foundation and director of its Training Institute, and Dr. Dominic Di Mattia, chairman of the University's Department of Counselor Education.

The Mid-Hudson Centers, with offices in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in New Paltz and the parish house of Christ Lutheran Church in Newburgh, is administered by the Foundation.

The Foundation and the University introduced a master's degree program earlier this year for qualified students in the Foundation's Transactional Analysis training program. In addition, the Foundation has an arrangement with New York Theological Seminary under which students in pastoral counseling courses who meet certain standards can receive master's degrees.

Hamlyn said the new program, which will be conducted at the Foundation's headquarters at 30 South State Road in Briarcliff Manor and on the University campus in Bridgeport, is open to qualified members of the clergy and lay men and women who are accepted for the two-year, on-day-a-week individual or pastoral counseling courses conducted by the Foundation's Training Institute for Counseling and Therapy.

The Bridgeport master's degree in counseling and human resources will be offered beginning with the fall term. Hamlyn invited anyone interested in applying for acceptance in any of the Foundation's courses to audit the final sessions of the spring semester.

He said that visitors would be welcome to join students and members of the faculty from 12:15 to 4:15 p.m. on Tuesday, May 11 or May 18. Arrangements may be made by telephoning Hamlyn at the center.

"We are very excited about the new program with the University of Bridgeport, which is taking an innovative grassroots approach to higher education by going out into communities rather than expecting all students to travel great distances to its campus for all of its courses," Hamlyn said.

"As the network of centers and offices administered by our Foundation continues to grow, we have become increasingly aware of the need for more skilled pastoral counselors and more Foundation staff counselors to help people solve problems and improve the quality of their lives. We have found it is best to be able to offer such help within the communities of the people we serve, and under our expanding educational program we hope to attract more students."

Hamlyn added that the new Bridgeport program is "one more evidence of the growing stature of pastoral counseling as it functions in partnership with psychology and psychiatry."

"It also offers further recognition to our Foundation educational program, in which we have trained well over 200 members of the parish clergy and nearly 100 lay people in the last eight years."

Di Mattia welcomed the expansion of the university's relationship with the Foundation as adding a new dimension to his department's counseling education program.

"The utilization of proven off-campus training programs is one of the most interesting new developments in higher education," he said. "Because of our expansion in this area, we can offer a wider variety of counseling specialties than any other university, as far as we know."

Theology Just God-Talk

By UPI

Theology, most simply, is God-talk. As long as people have wondered and talked about God, there has been theology.

In the Christian scheme of things, theology is the attempt to articulate, in a somewhat sophisticated way, the distinctive Christian message of Scripture to make the message meaningful for a particular time and place.

But according to Dr. George A. Lindbeck of the Divinity School of Yale University, the very notion of "doing theology" is today under attack.

Lindbeck was one of the signers of the now famous "Hartford Appeal," the manifesto that attacked 13 "themes" or patterns of thought of modern life as "false and debilitating" but all too pervasive in the life of the Church.

In an article on the Appeal in historical perspective, Lindbeck argued that the Appeal is unique in history "because it battles for the possibility of theology rather than itself proposing a theology."

His article, "A Battle for Theology," along with essays by seven other signers of the Appeal which expand on the theme and intents of the manifesto's makers, has been published in a new book, "Against the World For the World" (Seabury Press).

In earlier times, Lindbeck said, previous theological manifestoes all assumed the possibility of Christian theology and the manifestoes were statements of various sides or positions in a debate.

"The quarrels between right and left, majorities and minorities, orthodox and heretics were over the right theology, not over the possibility of theology," he said.

Today, however, the themes articulated in the baldest fashion in the Hartford Appeal — such notions as "Modern thought ... is superior to all past forms of understanding reality" or "the world sets the agenda for the Church" — are so widespread, so much a part of everyone's common assumptions that they "inhibit the theological attempt to discern what is true and right from an independently Christian perspective." In other words, they make theology impossible.

"Many of the signers at Hartford admit they personally find these themes seductive," he said, adding that the themes "so completely discourage theology that they even prevent explicit heresy."

Another way of putting it is to say that Christian thinkers who subscribe to the themes attacked in the Hartford Appeal are held in "cultural captivity," where the fads and fancies of that which is contemporary shape their thinking more than the distinctive, timeless truths of the Christian faith.

Lindbeck believes this is a period of theological shift, a period of transition when older models for ways of thinking about the Christian faith do not seem adequate.

In the midst of such shifts, he argues, many are tempted to deny either the necessity or the possibility of theology. "The Appeal is addressed precisely to this danger," he noted.

"It does not try to propose either a new or old theology ... It rather tries to rally together those who believe that theological affirmation is vital to Christianity."

"It asks Christians to attend seriously to past theological affirmations, and to recognize that these are better than nothing during our period of waiting and struggle for something new," he said.

What Future For the Liberal

Rev. George Marshall

KINGSTON—What Future for Liberal Religion is the topic chosen by the Rev. George Marshall of the Church of the Larger Fellowship for his appearance at the Unitarian Fellowship of Ulster County, 99 Henry Street, Sunday, May 16.

He will conduct a workshop on religious education, adult programs and denomination Saturday, May 15, at 1 p.m. At 5:30 p.m. he will be a guest at a dinner and discussion with Religion in Life candidates in Scouting.

A fellowship gathering and party will honor the Rev. Mr. Marshall at the home of Evanne Martin at 8 p.m. The Sunday program at 10:30 a.m. will be followed by a potluck luncheon at the Fellowship.

The Rev. Mr. Marshall is the author of Church of the Pilgrim Fathers; An Understanding of Albert Schweitzer and Challenge of a Liberal Faith. He co-authored Schweitzer, A Biography with David Poling for Doubleday publishers.

He has served as minister of the Church of the Larger Fellowship, Unitarian Universalist, which meets the needs of religious liberals who cannot participate in a local Unitarian Universalist church, since 1960. Prior to that he was minister of churches in Plymouth Mass. and Niagara Falls.

He holds degrees from Tufts, Columbia and Harvard Universities.

Guest Lecturer

KINGSTON—There is no secret out to security, Paul K. Wavro, CSB, of Jacksonville, Fla. observes in the Christian Science lecture he will give Monday, May 17.

His appearance in Kingston is at the invitation of First Church of Christ Scientist. The one-hour lecture will be given at the Ramada Inn, Route 28 near Thruway Exit 19, at 8:15 p.m. The public may attend. No ticket or admission charge is required.

Wavro's lecture is entitled How Secure Are You. He observes, "you have to be willing to find out what it really means to be God's 'image and likeness.'"

A member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship since 1958, Wavro has lectured in Europe, the Caribbean, South America, Africa, Australia, Fiji and all 50 of the United States.

Continues Study

WEST PARK—The Rev. Roy Parker, OHC, a member of the Order of Holy Cross, West Park has entered the spring term of the Center for Continuing Education program at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va.

The six-week term is designed to meet the growing awareness and need clergy continuing education. Brother Parker is one of 14 carefully selected fellows who represent a variety of ecumenical backgrounds.

Initiated in 1967, the program is based on residential experience followed by a 10-month back home and completed by a one-week return conference with the original group.

The center basically includes renewal in personal awareness, encounters with biblical and theological content, field and case studies, a retreat, institutional management and leadership training and intensive life and career planning.

Area Church News

Feud Explodes Over Ordination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Moderates in the feuding Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod have raised another explosive issue in the dispute which threatens to divide the denomination—women's ordination.

Seminex, the rebel "seminary-in-exile" founded by moderates when denomination leaders suspended the president of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, has "certified as qualified for the ministry" a woman student serving an internship in Oakland, Calif.

The woman, Jan Otte, will receive her master of divinity degree from Seminex this spring and is seeking a call and ordination in the Missouri Synod. Seminex officials believe she will succeed in receiving a call from a moderate-leaning congregation in the 2.8 million member denomination.

At least two issues are involved in the controversy: Women's ordination and the right of congregations to call whomever they want for ministry.

The Missouri Synod, the nation's eighth largest Protestant denomination in the United States, has consistently reaffirmed its objection to women pastors. Both the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America, Missouri's sister churches, allow ordination of women. At its 1971 convention, the Missouri Synod declared: "The Word of God does not permit women to hold pastoral office or to serve in any capacity involving distinctive functions of this office."

In early April, the faculties of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and Concordia Seminary, Springfield, Ill., expressed concern over the possibility of Seminex certifying intern Otte and urged synodical officials to take "strong and immediate" action in the event such an ordination occurs.

Evangelical Lutherans in Mission, the moderate organization in the Missouri Synod and Seminex's primary financial backer, have surveyed their membership and found a majority support ordination of women.

One of the main issues in the decade-long dispute in Missouri has been over congregational autonomy and the rights of congregations over the central administration of the synod in St. Louis. That administration is controlled by conservatives.

Moderates, angered by the suspension of the Rev. John Tietjen as president of Concordia Seminary, established Seminex and moderate congregations still in the Missouri Synod have continued to call graduates of the rebel seminary.

Collarmen in Benefit Concert

The Collarmen of Mt. St. Alphonsus Seminary, Esopus will present a concert for the benefit of the children of Emma Wygant School. The program will be presented at the J. Watson Bailey Junior High School 7:30 p.m. Friday, May 14. Tickets may be obtained at the door.

Community Service

NEW PALTZ — The Foundation for Religion and Mental Health and the University of Bridgeport have joined in a new post-graduate degree-granting program designed to help meet increasing needs for mental health services in Hudson Valley Communities.

Announcement of the expansion of an educational partnership forged earlier this year was made by the Rev. Ralph Fogg, director of the Mid-Hudson Counseling Centers, with the Rev. Robert C. Hamlyn, president of the Foundation and director of its Training Institute, and Dr. Dominic Di Mattia, chairman of the University's Department of Counselor Education.

The Mid-Hudson Centers, with offices in St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in New Paltz and the parish house of Christ Lutheran Church in Newburgh, is administered by the Foundation.

The Foundation and the University introduced a master's degree program earlier this year for qualified students in the Foundation's Transactional Analysis training program. In addition, the Foundation has an arrangement with New York Theological Seminary under which students in pastoral counseling courses who meet certain standards can receive master's degrees.

Hamlyn said the new program, which will be conducted at the Foundation's headquarters at 30 South State Road in Briarcliff Manor and on the University campus in Bridgeport, is open to qualified members of the clergy and lay men and women who are accepted for the two-year, on-day-a-week individual or pastoral counseling courses conducted by the Foundation's Training Institute for Counseling and Therapy.

The Bridgeport master's degree in counseling and human resources will be offered beginning with the fall term. Hamlyn invited anyone interested in applying for acceptance in any of the Foundation's courses to audit the final sessions of the spring semester.

He said that visitors would be welcome to join students and members of the faculty from 12:15 to 4:15 p.m. on Tuesday, May 11 or May 18. Arrangements may be made by telephoning Hamlyn at the center.

"We are very excited about the new program with the University of Bridgeport, which is taking an innovative grassroots approach to higher education by going out into communities rather than expecting all students to travel great distances to its campus for all of its courses," Hamlyn said.

"As the network of centers and offices administered by our Foundation continues to grow, we have become increasingly aware of the need for more skilled pastoral counselors and more Foundation staff counselors to help people solve problems and improve the quality of their lives. We have found it is best to be able to offer such help within the communities of the people we serve, and under our expanding educational program we hope to attract more students."

Hamlyn added that the new Bridgeport program is "one more evidence of the growing stature of pastoral counseling as it functions in partnership with psychology and psychiatry."

"It also offers further recognition to our Foundation educational program, in which we have trained well over 200 members of the parish clergy and nearly 100 lay people in the last eight years."

Di Mattia welcomed the expansion of the university's relationship with the Foundation as adding a new dimension to his department's counseling education program.

"The utilization of proven off-campus training programs is one of the most interesting new developments in higher education," he said. "Because of our expansion in this area, we can offer a wider variety of counseling specialties than any other university, as far as we know."

Theology Just God-Talk

By UPI

Theology, most simply, is God-talk. As long as people have wondered and talked about God, there has been theology.

In the Christian scheme of things, theology is the attempt to articulate, in a somewhat sophisticated way, the distinctive Christian message of Scripture to make the message meaningful for a particular time and place.

But according to Dr. George A. Lindbeck of the Divinity School of Yale University, the very notion of "doing theology" is today under attack.

Lindbeck was one of the signers of the now famous "Hartford Appeal," the manifesto that attacked 13 "themes" or patterns of thought of modern life as "false and debilitating" but all too pervasive in the life of the Church.

In an article on the Appeal in historical perspective, Lindbeck argued that the Appeal is unique in history "because it battles for the possibility of theology rather than itself proposing a theology."

His article, "A Battle for Theology," along with essays by seven other signers of the Appeal which expand on the theme and intents of the manifesto's makers, has been published in a new book, "Against the World For the World" (Seabury Press).

In earlier times, Lindbeck said, previous theological manifestoes all assumed the possibility of Christian theology and the manifestoes were statements of various sides or positions in a debate.

"The quarrels between right and left, majorities and minorities, orthodox and heretics were over the right theology, not over the possibility of theology," he said.

Today, however, the themes articulated in the baldest fashion in the Hartford Appeal — such notions as "Modern thought ... is superior to all past forms of understanding reality" or "the world sets the agenda for the Church" — are so widespread, so much a part of everyone's common assumptions that they "inhibit the theological attempt to discern what is true and right from an independently Christian perspective." In other words, they make theology impossible.

"Many of the signers at Hartford admit they personally find these themes seductive," he said, adding that the themes "so completely discourage theology that they even prevent explicit heresy."

Another way of putting it is to say that Christian thinkers who subscribe to the themes attacked in the Hartford Appeal are held in "cultural captivity," where the fads and fancies of that which is contemporary shape their thinking more than the distinctive, timeless truths of the Christian faith.

Lindbeck believes this is a period of theological shift, a period of transition when older models for ways of thinking about the Christian faith do not seem adequate.

In the midst of such shifts, he argues, many are tempted to deny either the necessity or the possibility of theology. "The Appeal is addressed precisely to this danger," he noted.

"It does not try to propose either a new or old theology ... It rather tries to rally together those who believe that theological affirmation is vital to Christianity."

"It asks Christians to attend seriously to past theological affirmations, and to recognize that these are better than nothing during our period of waiting and struggle for something new," he said.

What Future For the Liberal

KINGSTON — What Future for Liberal Religion is the topic chosen by the Rev. George Marshall of the Church of the Larger Fellowship for his appearance at the Unitarian Fellowship of Ulster County, 99 Henry Street, Sunday, May 16.

He will conduct a workshop on religious education, adult programs and denomination Saturday, May 15, at 1 p.m. At 5:30 p.m. he will be a guest at a dinner and discussion with Religion in Life candidates in Scouting.

A fellowship gathering and party will honor the Rev. Mr. Marshall at the home of Evanne Martin at 8 p.m. The Sunday program at 10:30 a.m. will be followed by a potluck luncheon at the Fellowship.

The Rev. Mr. Marshall is the author of Church of the Pilgrim Fathers; An Understanding of Albert Schweitzer and Challenge of a Liberal Faith. He co-authored Schweitzer, A Biography with David Poling for Doubleday publishers.

He has served as minister of the Church of the Larger Fellowship, Unitarian Universalist, which meets the needs of religious liberals who cannot participate in a local Unitarian Universalist church, since 1960. Prior to that he was minister of churches in Plymouth Mass. and Niagara Falls.

He holds degrees from Tufts, Columbia and Harvard Universities.

Guest Lecturer

KINGSTON — There is no short cut to security, Paul K. Wavro, CSB, of Jacksonville, Fla., observes in the Christian Science lecture he will give Monday, May 17.

His appearance in Kingston is at the invitation of First Church of Christ Scientist. The one-hour lecture will be given at the Ramada Inn, Route 28 near Thruway Exit 19, at 8:15 p.m. The public may attend. No ticket or admission charge is required.

Wavro's lecture is entitled How Secure Are You. He observes, "you have to be willing to find out what it really means to be God's 'image and likeness.'"

A member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship since 1958, Wavro has lectured in Europe, the Caribbean, South America, Africa, Australia, Fiji and all 50 of the United States.

Continues Study

WEST PARK — The Rev. Roy Parker, OHC, a member of the Order of Holy Cross, West Park has entered the spring term of the Center for Continuing Education program at the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va.

The six-week term is designed to meet the growing awareness and need clergy continuing education. Brother Parker is one of 14 carefully selected fellows who represent a variety of ecumenical backgrounds.

Initiated in 1967, the program is based on residential experience followed by a 10-month back home and completed by a one-week return conference with the original group.

Religion Review

Withdrawal

NEW YORK (UPI) — Representatives of several church bodies have withdrawn a stockholders' resolution filed with International Telephone and Telegraph challenging the company's involvement in providing military and police equipment to the government of South Africa. The resolution was withdrawn after ITT announced it had sold the South African subsidiary company that was making the equipment for the apartheid Johannesburg regime.

Report Promised

GRAYMOOR, N.Y. (UPI) — The Friars of the Atonement have announced that the Phelps Dodge Corporation has agreed to provide shareholders with a complete report on its activities in South Africa. The Atonement Friars said that in return they would withdraw their proposed resolution seeking such information at the stockholders' meeting.

Resignation

BOLLING SPRINGS, N.C. (UPI) — E. Eugen Posten, Southern Baptist president of Gardner-Webb College, has resigned to seek the Democratic nomination as congressman from North Carolina's 10th District.

Top Emphasis

WHITING, N.Y. (UPI) — Camping leaders of the United Methodist Church have been asked to make hunger and proper stewardship of the world's natural resources a top emphasis of Methodist camping programs throughout the coming summer.

Great Old Inns — Also pleasant country hotels and comfortable guest houses are included in British Tourist Authority's new "Commended Country Hotels". The Bull at Long Melford, Suffolk, here shown, dates from the 15th century. It's included.

Britain's Bicentennial Salute

Houseboat Route The One to Go!

ALBANY — New York travelers searching for a holiday free of traffic congestion and summer's hustle and bustle should consider a houseboating vacation, suggests the State Department of Commerce. Houseboat holidays have been gaining in popularity with landlubbers in recent years because they provide a comfortable and leisurely means for seeing much of the Empire State.

The lakes, rivers and canals that make up New York's inland waterways system lure many vacationers to the Empire State. With more than 1,600 square miles of inland waters, New York's waterways provide excellent routes to the state's vacation areas, communities and attractions.

Vacationers can rent a houseboat at marinas in many waterfront communities in the Thousand Islands, Finger Lakes, Hudson Valley and Long Island area of New York State. However, the State Department of Commerce advises reservations be made well in advance.

Rental fees depend on the houseboat size, time of year, and rental period length. Weekly fees can run from $350 to $900, an average of from $50 to $128 per day or $8 to $21 per person daily for a six person accommodation. Weekend rates total about $275, and mid-week rates around $350. Rates do not include food or fuel.

Modern Marina In Sardinia

PORTO CERVO, Sardinia (UPI) — The most modern yachting marina in the Mediterranean is being built in Northeastern Sardinia where goats and malarial mosquitoes held sway until after World War II.

The latest addition to the Costa Smeralda (Emerald Coast) development of Prince Karim, the Aga Khan, is a $25 million complex of docks, shipyard, motel, restaurants, yacht club, apartments, garage and supermarket taking shape in the Bay of Porto Cervo. The docks will be ready for moorings in July, the shipyard completed in October and the commercial area open for business in 1977.

Costa Smeralda, with its many offshore islands and challenging Strait of Bonifacio, between Sardinia and Corsica, has been one of the mid-Mediterranean's prime yachting centers since malaria was eradicated by insecticide sprays and the Aga Khan transformed the goat farms into a fashionable resort in 1960. But docking facilities never have been adequate for the 2,000 yachts that visit here each summer.

The new marina is safely in the lee of the mistral, across the bay from the original windward port. It will provide 480

Cenote, Scene of Sacrifices, Is Mexican Highlight

CHICHEN-ITZA, Mexico (UPI) — "Don't get too close to the edge," warned our Mexican guide, looking at the young blonde American, her fingers, wrists, neck and ears dripping with jewelry. "We need rain."

We were standing near the rim of the Well of Sacrifice in what remains of the ancient Maya capital of Chichen-Itza in Mexico's Yucatan.

A descendant of the people who built a great culture and civilization in the jungles and mountains of Middle America while Europe was still fumbling through the Dark Ages, our guide said the ancient Maya believed their Rain God lived in the cenote.

A natural pit about 350 feet long and 150 feet wide, the elliptical cenote has almost vertical limestone walls dropping about 70 feet to the mirrorlike murky jade-green water.

"In times of severe drought, the high priest would select beautiful young maidens to be

"Quien sabe?" he replied when pressed whether the story of the sacrificed virgins was fact or fiction. It is a matter of record, however, that divers employed by Edward Thompson, then the U.S. consul in the Yucatan, in 1904 did recover human bones, ceremonial knives, balls of copal incense and ornaments and other artifacts of gold and carved jade.

The cenote is a major highlight on the tour of Chichen-Itza, one of the outstanding archaeological finds in the Americas, which sprawls over 18 square miles of scrub jungle in the peninsula washed by the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean Sea.

The well — where a few scraggly trees provided the only shelter from the blazing midday tropical sun — is about 350 yards from the main square in the city which dates back to the fifth century. The dusty dirt path, called the Sacred Way, is the same used by the ancient Mayas.

Dominating the area is the magnificent Temple of Kukulkan, also known as El Castillo, dedicated to the Feathered Serpent. It actually consists of two pyramids, the outer built upon an older, inner structure.

It rises up from the flat, bare terrain from a 200-square-foot base to a height of about 125 feet in nine terraces and is topped by a beautiful temple.

There are stairways on each of the four sides — 91 steps — up the 45-degree-angle walls to the top platform for a thrilling panoramic view of the entire area.

It is a steep climb, too, by a dark, narrow, airless stairway to a chamber in the inside pyramid with a Chac-Mool statue and a red-painted stone jaguar with eyes of jade.

Impressive also is the 120-foot-wide Ball Court, flanked by two massive walls 272 feet long, where defeat meant death, the guide said. Embedded in the center of each wall — about 25 feet up — is a large stone ring with a hole about 18 inches in diameter. The court was used for a soccerlike contest in which players tried to knock a hard-rubber ball through the holes without using their hands.

The captain of the losing team was decapitated by the winning captain — the death ceremony is depicted in the bas relief sculptures along the base of the walls.

Other highlights included the Temple of the Warriors, a complex of various types of structures and huge inscribed pillars and sacrificial stone altars; the Temple of the Tigers and Eagles, with its carvings of tigers, jaguars, eagles and plumed serpents clutching human hearts in their talons; the Wall of the Skulls, depicting hundreds of human skulls impaled on poles; the circular El Caracol, or observatory; the Chichen-Chob, with its still undeciphered strip of carved hieroglyphics; and the Nunnery and Annex, one of the most beautiful of the ruins and which the Spaniards believed served as a Maya convent.

I visited Chichen-Itza on one of the series of 12-day "Voyages to the Cities of the Dawn" operated during the 1975-76 season out of New Orleans by the Carras Lines new luxury cruise ship Daphne. The cruises to Yucatan, Central America and the islands of the Caribbean will be resumed this fall.

Optional land excursions also are offered from the various ports of call to the Maya ruins of Uxmal, Tulum and Copan in Honduras as well as other points of interest.

We made the trip — three hours each way — by bus from Playa del Carmen on the Caribbean, our first stop in Yucatan. It's about a two-hour ride from Merida, capital of the Yucatan, on the western side of the peninsula. Merida is about two hours by jet plane from Mexico City and Miami.

There are two resort hotels at Chichen-Itza — the Mayaland and Hacienda Chichen — and several newer hotels in the village of Pisté, about one mile away on Route CN-180. Accommodations also are available in Merida.

Tourism Not Enough for Islands

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, Virgin Islands (UPI) — Sleek white ocean liners from France, Britain, Norway, Greece, The Netherlands and Italy pull into the turquoise-blue bay of Charlotte Amalie daily and unload thousands of tourists wearing straw hats, tennis shoes, and Bermuda shorts, camera at the ready.

Most of them will stay in the U.S. Virgin Islands only a few hours.

They will tour the picturesque historical buildings built by Denmark and shop in the duty-free stores jammed side-by-side along Main Street.

They will return to their cruise ships carrying perfume, Swiss watches, jewelry, and a "five-pack," a special cardboard box designed to hold five fifths of liquor, the maximum allowed duty-free into the United States until the limit was cut to one fifth per person during the Johnson administration.

Then the ships will sail away, leaving behind 100,000 troubled Virgin Islanders, who, even as they wait for the next boat, are fast waking up to the fact that tourism and duty-free liquor stores are not enough to live on.

Over one million tourists are expected to visit St. Thomas, St. Croix, and St. John this year, accounting for an estimated half the Virgin Islands' economic activity.

Businessmen and government officials say the islands are having their best tourist season in three years, yet they remain concerned over high levels of unemployment, rampant crime, and insufficient public services.

"We are having a pretty good tourist season," said John F. Tinsley, a government economist. "But the number of tourist arrivals doesn't tell the whole story."

Tinsley said the economic base of the island is too narrow to absorb the unemployed, estimated at more than 11 per cent of the labor force.

"We're now trying to attract more tourists who will stay a few weeks, not a few hours," he said.

When a handful of watch-assembly factories and hotels closed in the past two years, the impact was severe on a labor force of 40,000, he said.

Gov. Cyril E. King has asked Washington for a $76 million loan to bail out this year's budget, expand public works, and help support a bureaucracy accounting for around 25 per cent of the islands' work force — a public payroll he has promised to trim.

At the same time the governor has proposed broadening the property tax, raising sales taxes, and hiking inheritance taxes, and he is pleading with Congress to get a $80 million gasoline tax rebate for the islands.

In private, government officials complain bitterly that money on the islands is being absorbed by big companies on the mainland that own hotels, duty-free shops, and factories. "The money that comes in here zooms right out," one official said.

The Virgin Islands have had their ups and downs since the United States bought them from Denmark in 1917.

The Navy ran them until 1931, when the first civilian governor was installed. President Herbert Hoover, visiting St. Thomas on a warship the same year, described the islands as "an effective poorhouse."

"It was unfortunate that we ever acquired these islands," Hoover said.

After World War II the island began to boom with the arrival of more federal aid, a few factories, and, above all, tourists.

With Cuba off-limits in the 1960s, they became more popular than ever before. New hotels were built. Increasingly affluent Americans began to arrive in jet planes.

The boom ended abruptly in 1972 when five blacks, armed with submachine guns and shotguns, killed eight persons and wounded four others in a robbery-assault on the Rockefeller-owned Fountain Valley Golf Club.

That one incident nearly destroyed tourism.

It opened to public view the islands' festering problems of crime, racial tensions, and economic inequality.

When the tourists stopped coming, the islands entered a recession from which they have still not fully recovered. The 1974-75 economic downturn on the U.S. mainland made things worse.

Now the tourists are beginning to come back, though not in enough numbers to satisfy officials.

"We're holding our own," said Dale M. Shakespeare, floor manager of the 125-room landmark hotel Bluebeard's Castle.

Authorities say the Fountain Valley murders were an aberration, but they concede crime — especially burglaries — remains a problem.

"Crime comes with the tourist industry," said Police Chief Ivan Williams in an interview. "This is the price we pay for growth."

"Fountain Valley! Fountain Valley!" one official complained. "That's all anyone ever writes about the Virgin Islands. It has really hurt us."

Another trouble spot is the large colony of immigrants known as "down islanders."

These newcomers from the former British West Indies and the next door British Virgin Islands arrived with the rapid rise of tourism in the 1950s and 1960s in search of better wages.

They filled a labor shortage by working in the hotels, driving the taxis, and joining the construction crews — jobs many native-born islanders would now be glad to have.

Immigration authorities since 1970 have tightened restrictions on the aliens and Governor King and other officials are now fighting attempts by the State Department to give legal status to aliens, who do not have the proper papers.

Great Old Inns — Also pleasant country hotels and comfortable guest houses are included in British Tourist Authority's new "Commended Country Hotels". The Bull at Long Melford, Suffolk, here shown, dates from the 15th century. It's included.

Britain's Bicentennial Salute

Houseboat Route The One to Go!

ALBANY — New York travelers searching for a holiday free of traffic congestion and summer's hustle and bustle should consider a houseboat vacation, suggests the State Department of Commerce. Houseboat holidays have been gaining in popularity with landlubbers in recent years because they provide a comfortable and leisurely means for seeing much of the Empire State.

The lakes, rivers and canals that make up New York's inland waterways system lure many vacationers to the Empire State. With more than 1,600 square miles of inland waters, New York's waterways provide excellent routes to the state's vacation areas, communities and attractions.

Vacationers can rent a houseboat at marinas in many waterfront communities in the Thousand Islands, Finger Lakes, Hudson Valley and Long Island area of New York State. However, the State Department of Commerce advises reservations be made well in advance. Rental fees depend on the houseboat size, time of year, and rental period length. Weekly fees can run from $350 to $900, an average of from $50 to $128 per day or $8 to $21 per person daily for a six person accommodation. Weekend rates total about $275, and mid-week rates around $350. Rates do not include food or fuel.

Houseboats can accommodate from six to eight persons and have most of the equipment found in house trailers. Powered by one or two engines, houseboat operation is easy to learn and instruction is provided at most marinas.

New York's houseboating routes can include the ocean waters off Long Island; the Hudson, Mohawk and St. Lawrence Rivers; Lakes Erie, Ontario, Champlain, Seneca and Cayuga; and the State Barge Canal System, a 524-mile connection between the Atlantic Ocean and the Great Lakes.

Modern Marina In Sardinia

PORTO CERVO, Sardinia (UPI) — The most modern yachting marina in the Mediterranean is being built in Northeastern Sardinia where goats and malarial mosquitoes held sway until after World War II.

The latest addition to the Costa Smeralda (Emerald Coast) development of Prince Karim, the Aga Khan, is a $25 million complex of docks, shipyard, motel, restaurants, yacht club, apartments, garage and supermarket taking shape in the Bay of Porto Cervo. The docks will be ready for moorings in July, the shipyard completed in October and the commercial area open for business in 1977. Costa Smeralda, with its many offshore islands and challenging Strait of Bonifacio, between Sardinia and Corsica, has been one of the mid-Mediterranean's prime yachting centers since malaria was eradicated by insecticide sprays and the Aga Khan transformed the goat farms into a fashionable resort in 1960. But docking facilities never have been adequate for the 2,000 yachts that visit here each summer.

Cenote, Scene of Sacrifices, Is Mexican Highlight

CHICHEN-ITZA, Mexico (UPI) — "Don't get too close to the edge," warned our Mexican guide, looking at the young blonde American, her fingers, wrists, neck and ears dripping with jewelry. "We need rain."

We were standing near the rim of the Well of Sacrifice in what remains of the ancient Maya capital of Chichen-Itza in Mexico's Yucatan.

A descendant of the people who built a great culture and civilization in the jungles and mountains of Middle America while Europe was still fumbling through the Dark Ages, our guide said the ancient Maya believed their Rain God lived in the cenote.

A natural pit about 350 feet long and 150 feet wide, the elliptical cenote has almost vertical limestone walls dropping about 70 feet to the mirrorlike murky jade-green water.

"In times of severe drought, the high priest would select beautiful young maidens to be

"Quien sabe?" he replied when pressed whether the story of the sacrificed virgins was fact or fiction. It is a matter of record, however, that divers employed by Edward Thompson, then the U.S. consul in the Yucatan, in 1904 did recover human bones, ceremonial knives, balls of coral incense and ornaments and other artifacts of gold and carved jade.

The cenote is a major highlight on the tour of Chichen-Itza, one of the outstanding archaeological finds in the Americas, which sprawls over 18 square miles of scrub jungle in the peninsula washed by the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean Sea.

The well — where a few scraggly trees provided the only shelter from the blazing midday tropical sun — is about 350 yards from the main square in the city which dates back to the fifth century. The dusty dirt path, called the Sacred Way, is the same used by the ancient Mayas.

Dominating the area is the magnificent Temple of KukulKan, also known as El Castillo, dedicated to the Feathered Serpent. It actually consists of two pyramids, the outer built upon an older, inner structure.

It rises up from the flat, bare terrain from a 200-square-foot base to a height of about 125 feet in nine terraces and is topped by a beautiful temple. There are stairways on each of the four sides — 91 steps — up the 45-degree-angle walls to the top platform for a thrilling panoramic view of the entire area.

It is a steep climb, too, by a dark, narrow, airless stairway to a chamber in the inside pyramid with a Chac-Mool statue and a red-painted stone jaguar with eyes of jade.

Impressive also is the 120-foot-wide Ball Court, flanked by two massive walls 272 feet long, where defeat meant death, the guide said. Embedded in the center of each wall — about 25 feet up — is a large stone ring with a hole about 18 inches in diameter. The court was used for a soccerlike contest in which players tried to knock a hard-rubber ball through the holes without using their hands.

The captain of the losing team was decapitated by the winning captain — the death ceremony is depicted in the bas relief sculptures along the base of the walls.

Other highlights included the Temple of the Warriors, a complex of various types of structures and huge inscribed pillars and sacrificial stone altars; the Temple of the Tigers and Eagles, with its carvings of tigers, jaguars, eagles and plumed serpents clutching human hearts in their talons; the Wall of the Skulls, depicting hundreds of human skulls impaled on poles; the circular El Caracol, or observatory; the Chichen-Chob, with its still undeciphered strip of carved hieroglyphics; and the Nunnery and Annex, one of the most beautiful of the ruins and which the Spaniards believed served as a Maya convent.

I visited Chichen-Itza on one of the series of 12-day "Voyages to the Cities of the Dawn" operated during the 1975-76 season out of New Orleans by the Carras Lines new luxury cruise ship Daphne. The cruises to Yucatan, Central America and the islands of the Caribbean will be resumed this fall.

Optional land excursions also are offered from the various ports of call to the Maya ruins of Uxmal, Tulum and Copan in Honduras as well as other points of interest.

We made the trip — three hours each way — by bus from Playa del Carmen on the Caribbean, our first stop in Yucatan. It's about a two-hour ride from Merida, capital of the Yucatan, on the western side of the peninsula. Merida is about two hours by jet plane from Mexico City and Miami.

There are two resort hotels at Chichen-Itza — the Mayaland and Hacienda Chichen — and several newer hotels in the village of Pisté, about one mile away on Route CN-180. Accommodations also are available in Merida.

Tourism Not Enough for Islands

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, Virgin Islands (UPI) — Sleek white ocean liners from France, Britain, Norway, Greece, The Netherlands and Italy pull into the turquoise-blue bay of Charlotte Amalie daily and unload thousands of tourists wearing straw hats, tennis shoes, and bermuda shorts, camera at the ready.

Most of them will stay in the U.S. Virgin Islands only a few hours.

They will tour the picturesque historical buildings built by Denmark and shop in the duty-free stores jammed side-by-side along Main Street.

They will return to their cruise ships carrying perfume, Swiss watches, jewelry, and a "five-pack," a special cardboard box designed to hold five fifths of liquor, the maximum allowed duty-free into the United States until the limit was cut to one fifth per person during the Johnson administration.

Then the ships will sail away, leaving behind 100,000 troubled Virgin Islanders, who, even as they wait for the next boat, are fast waking up to the fact that tourism and duty-free liquor stores are not enough to live on.

Over one million tourists are expected to visit St. Thomas, St. Croix, and St. John this year, accounting for an estimated half the Virgin Islands' economic activity.

Businessmen and government officials say the islands are having their best tourist season in three years, yet they remain concerned over high levels of unemployment, ram-nant crime, and insufficient public services.

Tinsley said the economic base of the island is too narrow to absorb the unemployed, estimated at more than 11 per cent of the labor force.

"We're now trying to attract more tourists who will stay a few weeks, not a few hours," he said.

When a handful of watch-assembly factories and hotels closed in the past two years, the impact was severe on a labor force of 40,000, he said.

Gov. Cyril E. King has asked Washington for a $76 million loan to bail out this year's budget, expand public works, and help support a bureaucracy accounting for around 25 per cent of the islands' work force — a public payroll he has promised to trim.

At the same time the governor has proposed broadening the property tax, raising sales taxes, and hiking inheritance taxes, and he is pleading with Congress to get a $60 million gasoline tax rebate for the islands.

In private, government officials complain bitterly that money on the islands is being absorbed by big companies on the mainland that own hotels, duty-free shops, and factories.

"The money that comes in here zooms right out," one official said.

The Virgin Islands have had their ups and downs since the United States bought them from Denmark in 1917.

The Navy ran them until 1931, when the first civilian governor was installed. President Herbert Hoover, visiting St. Thomas on a warship the same year, described the islands as "an effective poorhouse."

"It was unfortunate that we ever acquired these islands," Hoover said.

After World War II the island began to boom with the arrival of more federal aid, a few factories, and, above all, tourists.

With Cuba off-limits in the 1960s, they became more popular than ever before. New hotels were built. Increasingly affluent Americans began to arrive in jet planes.

The boom ended abruptly in 1972 when five blacks, armed with submachine guns and shotguns, killed eight persons and wounded four others in a robbery-assault on the Rockefeller-owned Fountain Valley Golf Club.

That one incident nearly destroyed tourism.

It opened to public view the islands' festering problems of crime, racial tensions, and economic inequality.

When the tourists stopped coming, the islands entered a recession from which they have still not fully recovered. The 1974-75 economic downturn on the U.S. mainland made things worse.

Now the tourists are beginning to come back, though not in enough numbers to satisfy officials.

"We're holding our own," said Dale M. Shakespeare, floor manager of the 125-room landmark hotel Bluebeard's Castle.

Authorities say the Fountain Valley murders were an aberration, but they concede crime — especially burglaries — remains a problem.

"Crime comes with the tourist industry," said Police Chief Ivan Williams in an interview. "This is the price we pay for growth."

"Fountain Valley! Fountain Valley!" one official complained. "That's all anyone ever writes about the Virgin Islands. It has really hurt us."

Another trouble spot is the large colony of immigrants known as "down islanders."

These newcomers from the former British West Indies and the next door British Virgin Islands arrived with the rapid rise of tourism in the 1950s and 1960s in search of better wages.

They filled a labor shortage by working in the hotels, driving the taxis, and joining the construction crews — jobs many native-born islanders would now be glad to have.

Immigration authorities since 1970 have tightened restrictions on the aliens and Governor King and other officials are now fighting attempts by the State Department to give legal status to aliens, who do not have the proper papers.

Appraiser Can Help

With the growing number of divorces taking place in the United States, I receive many letters concerning split marriages. Here is one example.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My husband and I have been married for seven years. We have both decided that is enough. He has decided to relocate out West. I am going to stay put.

We worked out a very amicable divorce until we got down to the issue of our house. Since I am staying in the area, I would like to keep the house. My husband says this is fine, and I should pay him for his half.

When we bought the house five years ago, the price was $30,000. There is a mortgage balance of $20,000. I offered him $5,000, which seemed fair for his half. My husband claims that the house is now worth $60,000 — and wants me to pay him $20,000.

We are at a loss in trying to settle our differences. Please advise. — SEVEN-YEAR ITCH.

This is one area where the services of a good real estate appraiser could come in handy. It is important that the appraiser be somebody independent of both you and your husband.

The normal procedure is for the attorneys to select an appraiser and the cost be divided equally between husband and wife. This is the only way you will ever solve this type of problem.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: The house we are living in is quite old and almost no renovation work has been done since it was originally built 40 years ago.

When we purchased the house last year, there was an old fuse box in the basement with only two fuses in it. It was a common occurrence to blow at least one fuse a day — and my wife and I began to make a game out of whose turn it was next to venture down to the basement and replace the fuse.

A year of this was enough. We called in a local electrician who told us that in order to update the house's electrical service, we needed a new 200-amp circuit breaker system. We gave the job to the electrician and it cost a lot of money. Now we have a large circuit breaker panel in the basement with only two circuit breakers in it. These circuit breakers have to be reset as often as we had to change fuses. I am writing you before I sue the electrician. What seems to be the problem? — BLOWN FUSE.

Replacing the circuit breaker panel was only half of the problem. The other part of the problem has to do with the distribution of wiring throughout the house.

Unfortunately, when your house was built, there were very few appliances, and the use of electricity was limited to minimal lighting requirements.

All of the outlets and lights in your house are connected to only two circuits. The size of the wiring can handle no more than 20 amps per circuit. You must consider the new electrical service to be phase one of your electrical renovation.

As a next step, you should install additional outlets throughout the house where they are needed. Give prime attention to the kitchen, for appliances, and any area where air conditioners or similar electrical devices are used.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Our daughter and her husband are now in a position to buy a house. They have a downpayment, but they can get more favorable terms if we will lend them enough to fatten the initial payment. There is no problem about the sum involved or the probability of repayment.

In your judgment, what is the best way to set up this loan to avoid complications for all parties concerned? — DOT-ING PARENTS.

If there is no problem about the sum involved or the probability of repayment, I think it would be best if you offered this loan on an informal basis, rather than as a typical business transaction.

After all, it is should turn out that they are unable to repay the loan, you would certainly not foreclose on the mortgage. Very often when close members of a family become too businesslike, strained relations (and sometimes even complete estrangement) result.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Last week I received a telephone call from the political headquarters for one of the presidential candidates. They would like to rent my vacant garage for one month prior to the primary election.

They claim they do not have any money and wonder if I would donate the space. Since the rental value is $100, can I give them the space free and deduct $100 from my tax return as a political contribution? — PATRIOTIC BUT PRACTICAL.

Whenever you donate the use of a property for no rental, it is impossible to deduct the rental value as a political contribution or a charitable contribution.

The law requires an exchange of dollars. If they were to pay you the rent, you could then donate it back to the campaign, if you were so inclined. In that way, you would have a legal deduction.

But you would also be required to report the $100 rental as income. This would be of no real benefit to you unless the candidate wins — thereby offering the possibility of a political job.

Antiques Fair At W. Plains

WHITE PLAINS—The 82nd Eastern States Antiques Fair will be in White Plains County Center through Sunday, May 9. Hours are 1 to 10 p.m. daily; noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Considered one of the top Americana shows in the country, with 100 exhibits from 13 eastern states, included are a Bicentennial view of the bedware, cookware, clothing, tools, furnishings that sustained life in colonial days; Tiffany Glass; toys; grandma played with; 1876 Centennial souvenirs; Whirligigs. Weather-vanes, Ships' figureheads, cigar-store Indians.

There was considerable agitation for women's rights even before the Declaration of Independence. Tom Paine wrote an essay calling for justice for women before he wrote his argument for independence: Common Sense.

Persian Rug Adds to Elegance

Persian rug, crystal finials, georgian columns play discreet accompaniment to this small but elegant living room where live revolves around the piano. Louvered doors open to a lush garden. Walls are painted a creamy off-white. The lawson armchair is covered in cardinal red Naugahyde vinyl fabric.

A Partial Formal Garden

If you like formal gardens but haven't the space to develop one completely — or if you don't have the time or inclination to take care of a large formal garden — why not make a partial one?

The garden illustrated here is really nothing more than a modified border garden. But its lines are formal and it is developed about a central axis (an imaginary line that divides it into two equal parts) with all elements carefully balanced along this line.

This garden is enclosed by a simple fence. The fence gives the garden definition at its rear and sides. It also acts as a deterrent to possible invasion of the garden by children at play.

Further definition is gained by a low border of compact cranberry bushes (Viburnum opulus nana), a compressed shrub that seldom reaches a height over two feet. It is hardy and responds well to shearing — or, you can let it grow naturally. You can easily keep it to a height of one foot.

The central feature of this garden is a small pool at the center. You can equip a pool of this kind with a recirculating pump and fill it with water in warm weather and syphon it before cold weather begins, thus eliminating the need for a piped water supply.

The front corners of the pool are accented with two low-growing Dwarf Japanese yews (Taxus cuspidata nana) and the sides and rear are complemented with a ground-hugging, fast-growing hybrid, Cotoncaster (Herbstfeuer) (Cotoncaster dammeri x salicifolia) with evergreen leaves and decorative red berries in abundance.

Two fine yews, Sebian Intermediate (Taxus cuspidata "Sebian"), accent the inner corners of the garden while each outer front corner features a Star Magnolia (Magnolia stellata), a slow-growing very early blooming shrub with fragrant white flowers.

Each of the rear corners is given stature with a Sargent crab apple (Malus sargentii), a diminutive crab apple with a rounded form that ultimately reaches a height of eight to 10 feet. Its white flowers in May are followed later by decorative small (one-quarter inch) red apples. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I've heard that veronica, sometimes called speedwell, makes a good ground cover. Would you recommend this plant?

A. No. Once it escapes into a lawn it is very difficult to remove and will eventually ruin the lawn.

Q. What kind of separator strips would you recommend for a patterned concrete pavement?

A. One-half inch redwood strips set a quarter inch below the pavement surface would do very well.

Booklets available at cost: To receive any one of the following, write me in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and requested amount of money. The prices are: ORNAMENTAL SHRUBS, 20 cents in coin; DECIDUOUS TREES FOR THE SMALL HOME, 20 cents in coin; MAKING A LAWN, 20 cents in coin; CONIFEROUS EVERGREENS, 10 cents in coin; PRUNING TREES, SHRUBS AND EVERGREENS, 10 cents in coin.

To receive all five, enclose a long, self-addressed envelope with 24 cents in stamps and 80 cents in coin.

Pest Control Guide Offered

Mild April weather has given an unexpected boost to spring greenery. But it has also hastened the emergence of pests that plague plants, say Cornell University plant pathologists and entomologists.

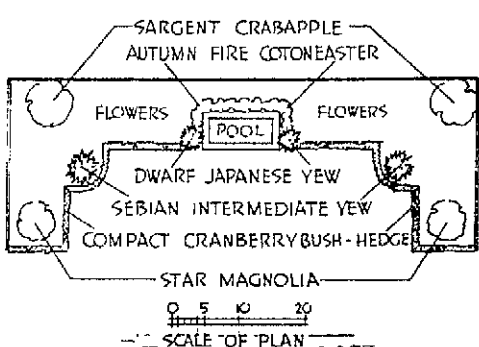

Their advice on how to prevent pests from overtaking house plants, home and garden is offered in a bulletin titled, "A Guide To Safe Pest Control Around the Home."

"More than 95 per cent of our insect problems are solved by natural controls, such as weather, predatory animals and parasitic plants and animals," they say. "But because of the about one per cent that nature does not solve, or because nature is sometimes slower than we like, we bring other controls into action."

The new guide explains safe use of pesticides, equipment for pest control and treatment options for the home and garden. Elaborate tables and pictures aid the identification of pest-related problems and suggest solutions. It is designed to help the apartment-dweller who likes to fill rooms with greenery, the home owner concerned with maintaining ornamental plants, and the more serious gardener with large plots of food plants and flowers.

Oleander One Houseplant That Travels

It's that time of year again when many households are moving lock, stock, barrel and houseplants to a new location. Recent magazine articles have been full of advice on how to prepare and pack your plants for safe travel, but seldom has there been any mention of whether you should even take them along.

An amazing number of indoor gardeners don't seem to know that many states have restrictions on the movement of plant material, and sometimes these restrictions apply to intrastate transportation as well as interstate travel. If you're planning a move, please get in touch with the U.S. Department of Agriculture office closest to you, and get their instructions on what to do (more importantly, what not to do) about taking your houseplants with you.

I've been the route, and it's sometimes a headache to go through inspection stations, wait while your plants are examined by someone with a magnifying glass, obtain phytosanitary certificate, or find you have tree, your plants bareroot or even defoliated. But look at the other side of the problem: would you want someone moving next door to you with a batch of diseased plants that might wipe out every plant in your garden?

One plant I've always managed to take along on our moves is Nerium Oleander "Carneum florepleno," better known as Oleander "Mrs. Roeding." This variety is naturally shorter than others in the genus, it has graceful, weeping-willow type branches, and it's nearly always loaded with fully double, salmon-pink blooms. The plant will begin flowering while still very small and can be kept to a three-foot height by pruning or thinning. If you prefer, skirt it as necessary until it's in a large container where it will be able to attain its normal height of about eight feet.

Oleanders enjoy as much sun as you can provide. They like moderate warmth, and they prefer a moist, loamy soil enriched with humus or peat moss. Like many of our finest houseplants, oleanders have potentially toxic parts, but these should not cause you undue concern or problems if you're careful to wash your hands after you've handled the plant while repotting or pruning.

For a better understanding of what plants may be poisonous, and how to avoid any possibility of danger from them, I suggest you read our little booklet, "POISON — Handle With Care." To obtain a copy, please write to me, Katherine B. Walker, in care of this newspaper, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope plus 25¢ and ask for the booklet by name. Questions and Answers

Q. Why can't plants grow just as well in plastic pots (with drainage holes) as they do in clay ones?

A. Plants can do just as well, sometime s better, in plastic pots if normal watering practices are adjusted to take into account their lack of porosity. Indoor gardeners tend to overwater their plants as a rule. When clay pots are used, some of the excess moisture can escape and the plants have a slightly better chance of survival. Plants in plastic pots have very little chance to live through constant overwatering.

Q. I've tried rooting wax begonias in water, soil, vermiculite and sand, and the cuttings always make good roots. But as soon as I pot them up, they die. Why?

A. The usual cause is too-tight soil. When potting, hold the cutting in place, then sift soil around it until the pot is full. Set the pot in water to its rim until the surface soil is fully wet, then set it aside to drain. If the soil settles down too far, add more soil. But again, simply add it; don't tamp it down or try to firm it with your thumbs. Some plants prefer tight potting, but begonias don't; it smother their fine roots.

Q. I have a lovely fern whose entire appearance is spoiled because it's way off-center in the pot. How can I correct this? Will turning the bare side toward the light source help it?

A. Turning the pot may help. But for a better effect, I would suggest repotting the fern. Unpot it, scrape off the extra soil on its bare side, then repot adding an equal amount of soil to the opposite side so that the plant is centered in its container.

Q. I want a small, very inconspicuous trellis, not over eight inches high. Can you suggest materials?

A. Clear-plastic drinking straws can be inserted in the soil, then strung criss-cross fashion with colorless nylon thread. The straws are available in extra-long sizes.

The free Indoor Gardening Source Sheet has been revised and simplified. Most plants mentioned in Indoor Gardening can be bought from a local dealer, but if he cannot supply them, the Source Sheet lists where they may be obtained. For your copy of the new Indoor Gardening Source Sheet, write to Katherine B. Walker in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self addressed, stamped envelope.

Mrs. Walker is always happy to hear from readers, and whenever possible she answers their questions on house plants in her column, but she regrets that because of the vast volume of mail received she cannot reply to individual letters.

Mr. Meltzer

Appraiser Can Help

With the growing number of divorces taking place in the United States, I receive many letters concerning split marriages. Here is one example.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My husband and I have been married for seven years. We have both decided that is enough. He has decided to relocate out West. I am going to stay put.

We worked out a very amicable divorce until we got down to the issue of our house. Since I am staying in the area, I would like to keep the house. My husband says this is fine, and I should pay him for his half.

When we bought the house five years ago, the price was $30,000. There is a mortgage balance of $20,000. I offered him $5,000, which seemed fair for his half. My husband claims that the house is now worth $60,000 — and wants me to pay him $20,000.

We are at a loss in trying to settle our differences. Please advise. — SEVEN-YEAR ITCH.

This is one area where the services of a good real estate appraiser could come in handy. It is important that the appraiser be somebody independent of both you and your husband.

The normal procedure is for the attorneys to select an appraiser and the cost be divided equally between husband and wife. This is the only way you will ever solve this type of problem.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: The house we are living in is quite old and almost no renovation work has been done since it was originally built 40 years ago.

When we purchased the house last year, there was an old fuse box in the basement with only two fuses in it. It was a common occurrence to blow at least one fuse a day — and my wife and I began to make a game out of whose turn it was next to venture down to the basement and replace the fuse.

A year of this was enough. We called in a local electrician who told us that in order to update the house's electrical service, we needed a new 200-amp circuit breaker system. We gave the job to the electrician and it cost a lot of money. Now we have a large circuit breaker panel in the basement with only two circuit breakers in it. These circuit breakers have to be reset as often as we had to change fuses. I am writing you before I sue the electrician. What seems to be the problem? — BLOWN FUSE.

Replacing the circuit breaker panel was only half of the problem. The other part of the problem has to do with the distribution of wiring throughout the house.

Unfortunately, when your house was built, there were very few appliances, and the use of electricity was limited to minimal lighting requirements.

All of the outlets and lights in your house are connected to only two circuits. The size of the wiring can handle no more than 20 amps per circuit. You must consider the new electrical service to be phase one of your electrical renovation.

As a next step, you should install additional outlets throughout the house where they are needed. Give prime attention to the kitchen, for appliances, and any area where air conditioners or similar electrical devices are used.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Our daughter and her husband are now in a position to buy a house. They have a downpayment, but they can get more favorable terms if we will lend them enough to fatten the initial payment. There is no problem about the sum involved or the probability of repayment.

In your judgment, what is the best way to set up this loan to avoid complications for all parties concerned? — DOTTING PARENTS.

If there is no problem about the sum involved or the probability of repayment, I think it would be best if you offered this loan on an informal basis, rather than as a typical business transaction.

After all, if it should turn out that they are unable to repay the loan, you would certainly not foreclose on the mortgage. Very often when close members of a family become too businesslike, strained relations (and sometimes even complete estrangement) result.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Last week I received a telephone call from the political headquarters for one of the presidential candidates. They would like to rent my vacant garage for one month prior to the primary election.

They claim they do not have any money and wonder if I would donate the space. Since the rental value is $100, can I give them the space free and deduct $100 from my tax return as a political contribution? — PATRIOTIC BUT PRACTICAL.

Whenever you donate the use of a property for no rental, it is impossible to deduct the rental value as a political contribution or a charitable contribution.

The law requires an exchange of dollars. If they were to pay you the rent, you could then donate it back to the campaign, if you were so inclined. In that way, you would have a legal deduction.

But you would also be required to report the $100 rental as income. This would be of no real benefit to you unless the candidate wins — thereby offering the possibility of a political job.

Antiques Fair At W. Plains

WHITE PLAINS—The 82nd Eastern States Antiques Fair will be in White Plains County Center through Sunday, May 9. Hours are 1 to 10 p.m. daily; noon to 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Considered one of the top Americana shows in the country, with 100 exhibits from 13 eastern states, included are a Bicentennial view of the bedware, cookware, clothing, tools, furnishings that sustained life in colonial days; Tiffany Glass; toys grandma played with; 1876 Centennial souvenirs; Whirligigs, Weather-vanes, Ship's figureheads, cigar-store Indians.

There was considerable agitation for women's rights even before the Declaration of Independence. Tom Paine wrote an essay calling for justice for women before he wrote his argument for independence: Common Sense.

Persian Rug Adds to Elegance

Persian rug, crystal finials, georgian columns play discreet accompaniment to this small but elegant living room where live revolves around the piano. Louvered doors open to a lush garden. Walls are painted a creamy off-white. The lawson armchair is covered in cardinal red Naugahyde vinyl fabric.

A Partial Formal Garden

If you like formal gardens but haven't the space to develop one completely — or if you don't have the time or inclination to take care of a large formal garden — why not make a partial one?

The garden illustrated here is really nothing more than a modified border garden. But its lines are formal and it is developed about a central axis (an imaginary line that divides it into two equal parts) with all elements carefully balanced about this line.

This garden is enclosed by a simple fence. The fence gives the garden definition at its rear and sides. It also acts as a deterrent to possible invasion of the garden by children at play.

Further definition is gained by a low border of compact cranberry bushes (Viburnum opulus nana), a compressed shrub that seldom reaches a height over two feet. It is hardy and responds well to shearing — or, you can let it grow naturally. You can easily keep it to a height of one foot.

The central feature of this garden is a small pool at the center. You can equip a pool of this kind with a recirculating pump and fill it with water in warm weather and syphon it before cold weather begins, thus eliminating the need for a piped water supply.

The front corners of the pool are accented with two low-growing Dwarf Japanese yews (Taxus cuspidata nana) and the sides and rear are complemented with a ground-hugging, fast-growing hybrid, Cotoneaster "Herbstfeuer" (Cotoneaster dammeri x salicifolia) with evergreen leaves and decorative red berries in abundance.

Two fine yews, Seban Intermediate (Taxus cuspidata "Seban"), accent the inner corners of the garden while each outer front corner features a Star Magnolia (Magnolia stellata), a slow-growing very early blooming shrub with fragrant white flowers.

Each of the rear corners is given stature with a Sargent crab apple (Malus sargentii), a diminutive crab apple with a rounded form that ultimately reaches a height of eight to 10 feet. Its white flowers in May are followed later by decorative small (one-quarter inch) red apples. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Q. I've heard that veronica, sometimes called speedwell, makes a good ground cover. Would you recommend this plant?

A. No. Once it escapes into a lawn it is very difficult to remove and will eventually ruin the lawn.

Q. What kind of separator strips would you recommend for a patterned concrete pavement?

A. One-half inch redwood strips set a quarter inch below the pavement surface would do very well.

Booklets available at cost: To receive any one of the following, write me in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope and requested amount of money. The price is: ORNAMENTAL SHRUBS, 20 cents in coin; DECIDUOUS TREES FOR THE SMALL HOME, 20 cents in coin; MAKING A LAWN, 20 cents in coin; CONIFEROUS EVERGREENS, 10 cents in coin; PRUNING TREES, SHRUBS AND EVERGREENS, 10 cents in coin.

To receive all five, enclose a long, self-addressed envelope with 24 cents in stamps and 80 cents in coin.

Pest Control Guide Offered

Mild April weather has given an unexpected boost to spring greenery. But it has also hastened the emergence of pests that plague plants, say Cornell University plant pathologists and entomologists.

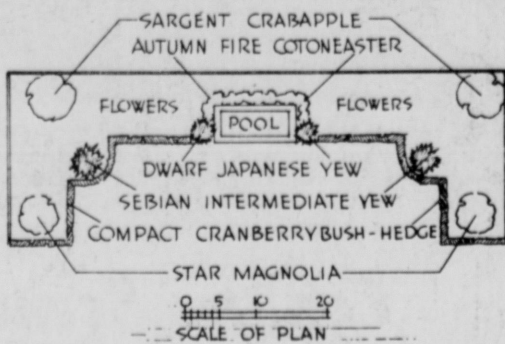

Their advice on how to prevent pests from overtaking house plants, home and garden is offered in a bulletin titled, "A Guide To Safe Pest Control Around the Home."

More than 95 per cent of our insect problems are solved by natural controls, such as weather, predatory animals and parasitic plants and animals," they say. "But because of the about one per cent that nature does not solve, or because nature is sometimes slower than we like, we bring other controls into action."

The new guide explains safe use of pesticides, equipment for pest control and treatment options for the home and garden. Elaborate tables and pictures aid the identification of pest-related problems and suggest solutions. It is designed to help the apartment-dweller who likes to fill rooms with greenery, the home owner concerned with maintaining ornamental plants, and the more serious gardener with large plots of food plants and flowers.

Cost of the 60-page booklet is one dollar. For a copy of "A Guide To Safe Pest Control Around the Home" check with your Cooperative Extension office or write to Mailing Room A, 7 Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853.

Oleander One Houseplant That Travels

It's that time of year again when many households are moving lock, stock, barrel and houseplants to a new vocation. Recent magazine articles have been full of advice on how to prepare and pack your plants for safe travel, but seldom has there been any mention of whether you should even take them along.

An amazing number of indoor gardeners don't seem to know that many states have restrictions on the movement of plant material, and sometimes these restrictions apply to intrastate transportation as well as interstate travel. If you're planning a move, please get in touch with the U.S. Department of Agriculture office closest to you, and get their instructions on what to do (more importantly, what not to do) about taking your houseplants with you.

I've been the route, and it's sometimes a headache to go through inspection stations, wait while your plants are examined by someone with a magnifying glass, obtain phytose-iter certificate, or find you have tree, your plants bareroot or even defoliated. But look at the other side of the problem: would you want someone moving next door to you with a batch of diseased plants that night wipe out every plant in your garden?

One plant I've always managed to take along on our moves is Nerium Oleander "Carneum florepleno," better known as Oleander "Mrs. Roeding." This variety is naturally shorter than others in the genus, it has graceful, weeping-willow type branches, and it's nearly always loaded with fully double, salmon-pink blooms. The plant will begin flowering while still very small and can be kept to a three-foot height by pruning or thinning. If you prefer, shirr it as necessary until it's in a large container where it will be able to attain its normal height of about eight feet.

Oleanders enjoy as much sun as you can provide. They like moderate warmth, and they prefer a moist, loamy soil enriched with humus or peat moss. Like many of our finest houseplants, oleanders have potentially toxic parts, but these should not cause you undue concern or problems if you're careful to wash your hands after you've handled the plant while repotting or pruning.

For a better understanding of what plants may be poisonous, and how to avoid any possibility of danger from them, I suggest you read our little booklet, "POISON — Handle With Care." To obtain a copy, please write to me, Katherine B. Walker, in care of this newspaper, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope plus 25¢ and ask for the booklet by name. Questions and Answers

Q. Why can't plants grow just as well in plastic pots (with drainage holes) as they do in clay ones?

A. Plants can do just as well, sometime s better, in plastic pots if normal watering practices are adjusted to take into account their lack of porosity. Indoor gardeners tend to overwater their plants as a rule. When clay pots are used, some of the excess moisture can escape and the plants have a slightly better chance of survival. Plants in plastic pots have very little chance to live through constant overwatering.

Q. I've tried rooting wax begonias in water, soil, vermiculite and sand, and the cuttings always make good roots. But as soon as I pot them up, they die. Why?

A. The usual cause is too-tight soil. When potting, hold the cutting in place, then sift soil around it until the pot is full. Set the pot in water to its rim until the surface soil is fully wet, then set it aside to drain. If the soil settles down too far, add more soil. But again, simply add it; don't tamp it down or try to firm it with your thumbs. Some plants prefer tight potting, but begonias don't; it smothers their fine roots.

Q. I have a lovely fern whose entire appearance is spoiled because it's way off-center in the pot. How can I correct this? Will turning the bare side toward the light source help it?

A. Turning the pot may help. But for a better effect, I would suggest repotting the fern. Unpot it, scrape off the extra soil on its bare side, then repot adding an equal amount of soil to the opposite side so that the plant is centered in its container.

Q. I want a small, very inconspicuous trellis, not over eight inches high. Can you suggest materials?

A. Clear-plastic drinking straws can be inserted in the soil, then strung criss-cross fashion with colorless nylon thread. The straws are available in extra-long sizes.

The free Indoor Gardening Source Sheet has been revised and simplified. Most plants mentioned in Indoor Gardening can be bought from a local dealer, but if he cannot supply them, the Source Sheet lists where they may be obtained. For your copy of the new Indoor Gardening Source Sheet, write to Katherine B. Walker in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

St. John's Women Note Success in Ventilator Drive

KINGSTON— The area drive conducted by St. John's Episcopal Church Women for an Infant Ventilator Fund is an overwhelming success, according to Mrs. James A. Barba, chairperson. The fund has surpassed its goal, with contributions still coming in. A host of organizations, churches and local philanthropists have opened their hearts and wallets for this worthy cause.

A ventilator has been ordered and contributors are anxiously awaiting its arrival. Since the ventilator selected costs less than anticipated, the committee is in the process of looking at fetal heart monitors. A fetal heart monitor can be used on an infant to monitor any irregularities in its heart beat. It is equipped with a warning system to alarm the hospital staff of any problems as soon as they occur.

Anyone still interested in contributing to the fund is invited to do so. All monies will be used for equipment for the newborn at either Kingston or Benedictine Hospital.

Short Shrift in Pants Cuts Off Compliments

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — All right, Angie Dickinson, en garde.

We're well aware that designers had your legs in mind when they knocked over a horn of plenty of pants and shorts this spring and summer.

And, further, that the majority of us women were given jodhpur thighs, sagging buttocks and knobby calves just to make you look good in contrast.

Well, the experts have come together to tell us which body to stick in which pant to give you a run for your money. Or a sprint, at least.

Of course, they do bear out the scientific law which states that for every three experts in attendance, at least four different opinions arise.

"The new thing in pants for spring and summer are short shorts, jamaicas which hit mid-thigh, and bermudas which hit just above the top of the knee," says Jean Guilder, fashion director of Glamour magazine.

"Obviously," she continues, "what would be a bermuda short on one person, would be a jamaica on another. It all has to do with proportion. The length of the pant and where it hits you is determined by the length of your leg in proportion to your body."

The width of your body, she says, determines the cut of the pant.

"Full leg pants help to camouflage big hips, as do big tops," she says, "but remember — if you have heavy thighs and big hips, they're going to show no matter what you wear. Just don't accentuate them by wearing pants that are too tight and close to the body."

On short legs, she says, "Jamaica shorts could be ungainly, so you might stick with pants that hit you below the knee, such as clam diggers. Or wear short shorts."

"If you're a woman with big hips and skinny legs and your legs are nice, they'll look good in pedal pushers which are cuffed and reach below the knee."

You are, after all, the best judge of how you look in pants, and Ms. Guilder urges aggressive retrospection. "Look in a rear view mirror," she says. "At best, it's a very good incentive to lose a couple of inches."

She also cautions women to be mindful of the rule of thumb regarding proper shoe height.

"The shorter the pant, the flatter the heel of the shoe you should wear," she says.

"Espadrilles are fine with pedal pushers and clam diggers but when you get into above-the-knee pants and short shorts, they tend to make you look a little 'tootsie'."

If "tootsie" as an adjective is puzzling to you, think of it as a noun and you'll have the picture.

Nancy Marcantonio, fashion director of Seventeen magazine, points out that "wherever the line of the pants stops, that's what it accentuates."

"For example, if you have big calves, don't wear pedal pushers because the pants leg stops at the calf. The same applies to big thighs and jamaica shorts," and knobby knees and bermudas.

Knees notwithstanding, Marilyn Kirschner, a fashion editor at Harper's Bazaar, believes that bermuda shorts look well on just about everyone.

"So do walking shorts which are skirt length, except if you have ugly calves," she says. "Clam diggers demand pretty shapely legs," she continues, "and a short woman should not wear pedal pushers or things that go below the knee. You have to be tall for pedal pushers. If you're short, wear regular ankle length pants, shorts or bermudas."

And if your legs lack any charm whatsoever, she says, "don't wear shorts at all."

Back, now, to Jean Guilder for the final word. "The ideal is to have marvelous, long legs, but if you don't, you might stick with a pant that hits you mid-thigh."

Except, of course, if you're short, or your thighs are heavy, or

CLAM DIGGERS are back for 1976. So-called because clam diggers used to roll their pants to this length to keep them dry, clam diggers surged in the 1950s. Updated version in white cotton by Foxey, right, teams with a red and white striped T-shirt by Tea Shirts and blue striped vest by Foxey. Big bag is in gradations of blue.

JAMAICA SHORTS are favorites of women of all ages because of their flattering length. Shorts go to all lengths this season and this style named after the island of Jamaica stops three or four inches above the knee. These by Gant for Women are in pastel madras striped cotton, paired with matching cotton shirt and blue chambray vest.

Short Shrift in Pants Cuts Off Compliments

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — All right, Angie Dickinson, en garde.

We're well aware that designers had your legs in mind when they knocked over a horn of plenty of pants and shorts this spring and summer.

And, further, that the majority of us women were given jodhpur thighs, sagging buttocks and knobby calves just to make you look good in contrast.

Well, the experts have come together to tell us which body to stick in which pant to give you a run for your money. Or a sprint, at least.

Of course, they do bear out the scientific law which states that for every three experts in attendance, at least four different opinions arise.

"The new thing in pants for spring and summer are short shorts, jamaicas which hit mid-thigh, and bermudas which hit just above the top of the knee," says Jean Guilder, fashion director of Glamour magazine.

"Obviously," she continues, "what would be a bermuda short on one person, would be a jamaica on another. It all has to do with proportion. The length of the pant and where it hits you is determined by the length of your leg in proportion to your body."

The width of your body, she says, determines the cut of the pant.

"Full leg pants help to camouflage big hips, as do big tops," she says, "but remember — if you have heavy thighs and big hips, they're going to show no matter what you wear. Just don't accentuate them by wearing pants that are too tight and close to the body."

"If you're a woman with big hips and skinny legs and your legs are nice, they'll look good in pedal pushers which are cuffed and reach below the knee."

You are, after all, the best judge of how you look in pants, and Ms. Guilder urges aggressive retrospection. "Look in a rear view mirror," she says. "At best, it's a very good incentive to lose a couple of inches."

She also cautions women to be mindful of the rule of thumb regarding proper shoe height.

"The shorter the pant, the flatter the heel of the shoe you should wear," she says.

"Espadrilles are fine with pedal pushers and clam diggers but when you get into above-the-knee pants and short shorts, they tend to make you look a little 'tootsie'."

If "tootsie" as an adjective is puzzling to you, think of it as a noun and you'll have the picture.

Nancy Marcantonio, fashion director of Seventeen magazine, points out that "wherever the line of the pants stops, that's what it accentuates."

"For example, if you have big calves, don't wear pedal pushers because the pants leg stops at the calf. The same applies to big thighs and jamaica shorts," and knobby knees and bermudas.

Knees notwithstanding, Marilyn Kirschner, a fashion editor at Harper's Bazaar, believes that bermuda shorts look well on just about everyone.

"So do walking shorts which are skirt length, except if you have ugly calves," she says.

"Clam diggers demand pretty shapely legs," she continues, "and a short woman should not wear pedal pushers or things that go below the knee. You have to be tall for pedal pushers. If you're short, wear regular ankle length pants, shorts or bermudas."

And if your legs lack any charm whatsoever, she says, "don't wear shorts at all."

Back, now, to Jean Guilder for the final word. "The ideal is to have marvelous, long legs, but if you don't, you might stick with a pant that hits you mid-thigh."

Except, of course, if you're short, or your thighs are heavy, or . . .

CLAM DIGGERS are back for 1976. So-called because clambers used to roll their pants to this length to keep them dry, clam diggers surged in the 1950s. Updated version in white cotton by Foxey, right, teams with a red and white striped T-shirt by Tea Shirts and blue striped vest by Foxey. Big bag is in gradations of blue.

JAMAICA SHORTS are favorites of women of all ages because of their flattering length. Shorts go to all lengths this season and this style named after the island of Jamaica stops three or four inches above the knee. These by Gant for Women are in pastel madras striped cotton, paired with matching cotton shirt and blue chambray vest.

Sunny-Side Up

By Lei

Thanks to the weird weather, teens with tans wearing snorkel jackets are not an uncommon sight on the street. A lot of teens were able to start their tans around Easter without going to Fort Lauderdale. Hopefully, this month will be more suitable for sunning than skiing.

As we wrote in an earlier column, however, the smart money this summer is going to be on teens who avoid the shake n' bake look. The light, honey colored tan or even strikingly pale skin is a new emphasis for summer.

Dermatologists warn that even black teens can become sunburned with over exposure. It may not be as obvious as it is on paler skins, but it is just as painful and just as dangerous. Dr. Albert Kleigman, dermatology professor at the University of Pennsylvania, warns most of the signs of aging in skin—wrinkles, sags and the leathery look—are caused by exposure to the sun—and overexposure can hurry those effects.

A sun screen lotion that contains sufficient quantities of PABA can help screen out the guilty ultraviolet rays, as can avoiding the sun in the hours between 10 in the morning and two in the afternoon. After all, it must mean something that the people who have lived for countless centuries in areas of unremitting sunshine wrap themselves up in yards of protective clothing—Arabs for instance or the plains Indians in their blankets. Those lightly clad African natives live in camps hacked out of jungle areas so dense that the sun rarely penetrates the forest floor. Besides, a sunburn doesn't look very sexy. Who needs the dried skin?

Hair needs special care in the summer, too—and this goes for you fellows as well as the girls. The word for summer hair is 'simple.' Bleached looks, styles sculptured with curling irons and the long, tangled manes are a real pain in the brain in summer.

Remember, bleached or tinted hair as well as that which has had a permanent MUST be kept out of the sun. Otherwise it will burn to a frazzle, dry out, break and change color in some awfully strange ways. One day at the beach is enough to turn an artificial "natural" into something that looks like it was styled by an exploding oven. Some hair experts recommend applying conditioner to your hair before a trip to the beach, just like you apply suntan oil.

The best looking summer hair for fellows as well as girls will be a short, smooth cut that can get wet, get ruffled by the wind, get full of sand and still fall into place for a cool unfrazzled look. If you aren't ready to part with long hair, remember it can get hot on the back of the neck. Pig tails or a smooth roll pulled up under a beach hat are easy summer looks for girls with long hair. Most fellows find they prefer to pull it back of the head, particularly when biking.

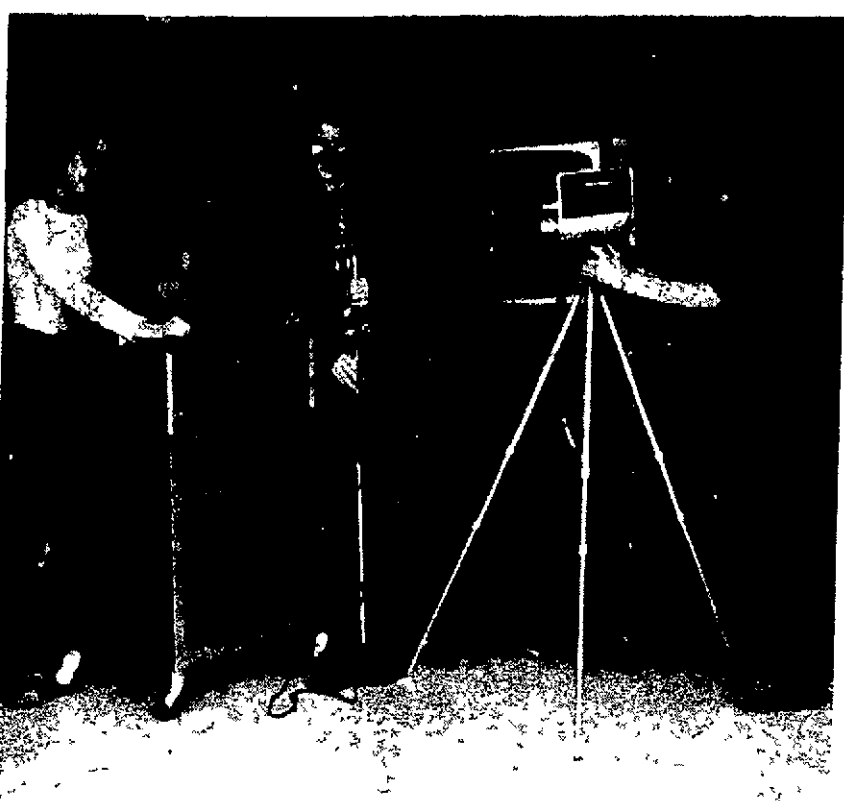

Clothing for summer includes some bright new looks in addition to the uniform of tee shirts and cut offs. Plan your summer wardrobe according to whether you'll be working or playing.

If you are working, it may well be in an air-cooled building and, distressingly enough, you may find that you're most comfortable in your spring clothes.

Remember when purchasing summer clothes that polyester won't absorb perspiration and that includes polyester denim and light polyester muslins. On a sweltering day, they can start to feel like plastic bags and since your skin won't be cooled by evaporation, you'll feel a lot hotter. On the other hand, polyester won't wrinkle and stays looking neat without ironing, even after being packed.

For working clothes, remember, being too conservative is better than being too with-it in your wardrobe. You can wear your wild wardrobe during your non-working hours. For those playtimes, the salsa look is the summer's brightest new idea—trousers that look like pajama bottoms, colorful head kerchiefs and front.

Believe it or not, it's a unisex look! For girls, those little cropped off at-the-ribs blouses are rapidly replacing the halter and fellows are discovering it's a very macho look—if you have a macho midriff. If you've got a big sunburnt belly, get thyself a caftan and a diet.

Business Class on TV

KINGSTON—As part of their business studies, the introduction to Business students at J. Watson Bailey Junior High School produced and directed their own 30-second television commercials.

The program was carried out under the direction of John E. Roche, teacher, using the school district's video tape equipment.

The three participating classes were divided into advertising firms consisting of five or six students. They wrote, produced, directed and performed their own commercials which were judged on originality, persuasiveness, entertainment, salability, product identification and professionalism.

Judges were George Ford, principal, Peter Incalcaterra, vice principal and Joseph Chupay, guidance counselor. Winning commercial was Roach Bananas. Other products were Phy It Phones, Foamy Face Shaving Cream, Seven Roses Wine, Heavenly Delight Beer, Bailey Credit Car, Beamies Food Sticks, Silky Soft Tissue, Soul Gum and Poly X Detergent.

The top four commercials will be shown over Kingston Cablevision in the near future.

Area Student Honors

A number of area students have been commended for academic achievement during the past college semester. Allen Olsen of 72 Northfield Street, Kingston was named to the dean's list at Cornell University for the fall semester.

Allen, a senior in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at the university, is majoring in education. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Olsen.

Brian J. Edwards of Kingston, a general engineering sophomore, has been named to the winter quarter dean's list at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University at Blacksburg, Va.

Maureen H. Farley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Farley of Clifton Avenue, Kingston was honored this month by being named to the dean's list for the past term at Endicott College, Beverly, Mass. She is a freshman, majoring in legal secretarial science at the two year college.

Holly Lynn Wenner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allen H. Wenner of Glenford has been named to the dean's list at Roberts Wesleyan College, Rochester, according to an announcement by the college.

Deborah L. Strunk of 150 Main Street, Kingston has been named to the dean's list at Pennsylvania State University, University Park, Pa. with a 3.73 average for the winter semester.

"Venus and Mars," which is to say that there is nothing as engaging as 'Jet' or 'Listen to What the Man Said' here. Nonetheless, there is a kind of consistency and assurance about the album which is very welcome. Aside from the embarrassing 'Cook of the House' and McCartney's attempt at a secular hymn, 'Warm and Beautiful,' "At the Speed of Sound" is mostly the ex-Beatle at his best, frequently at his most rocking.

McCartney's rock style is closer to the post-White Album Beatles than anything else: clearly produced, direct, relying almost exclusively on perfect playing from the basic unit of guitars, bass, keyboards and drums. Here, 'Let 'Em In,' 'Time to Hide' and 'Beware My Love' all prove the point. His experiments with brass and strings are, I think, generally less successful than his rock.

The real flaws in McCartney's approach come when he reaches for the big statement. 'Cook of the House,' which ought to be a simple, rousing rockabilly number, is encumbered by Linda McCartney's affectless vocal; 'Warm and Beautiful' simply isn't a convincing

Arlington Relays a Runaway for Host Admirals

By Steve Kane

FREEDOM PLAINS — The Tenth Annual Arlington Invitational Relays did not go exactly as expected Saturday. The competition didn't quite come through.

Host Arlington High, supposed to be faced with stiff challenges from squads from New Rochelle, Archbishop Molloy and North Rockland, among others, ran away with the laurels in both boys and girls divisions.

The Admirals won the Class I boys crown by a secure, 77-50 margin over runnerup Molloy. The Arlington girls topped the Class A field by an even bigger spread.

Washingtonville was the Class II boys winner in the meet's tightest division, and favored O'Neill took the Class III honors.

In the girls B division, Red Hook upset favored Millbrook.

The usual quota of state and meet records fell, but the assault on the books began spectacularly in the first event of the day.

George Kolb of Ketcham, one of the top entries in the mile walk, cracked seven minutes in the event. His time was 6:58.0, a meet, section and state record and a pending national record.

From that point, however, the Relays provided fewer thrills than they have in the past few years. In several events the challengers weren't up to the Admirals' standards, and the winners added to their widening gap by picking up some unexpected points in the field events.

The individual star of the day was Arlington's brilliant junior Steve Francis. Coming off a successful performance in the Penn Relays several weeks ago, Francis began his day with a victory in the featured 1500 meter run.

Francis swept past Sewanhaka's Tom Camien on the final lap to demolish a strong field in 3:59.2.

Francis later anchored a winning sprint medley relay team with the most exciting performance of the day. He began his 880 in fifth position, stayed there for one easy lap, then passed the field to complete a split of 1:57.5. Arlington's winning time in the race was 3:39.5, a meet record.

Two local entries earned places in the boys individual open events. Kingston's Bob Easter took a fourth in the long jump, an event won by Sleepy Hollow's Sanya Owolabi with a leap of 45-11½. Shot putter Ken McKay of Wallkill also placed fourth in his event. Cosmo Tocci of North Rockland had the winning put, a meet record 60-1½.

In the girls open competition, Eileen Casey of Kingston was third in the 1500 meters, and teammate Kathi Pfeiffer was fourth in the shot. Red Hook's winning effort in Class B got boosts from Barb Skiba, who was third in the long jump and fifth in the 100 meter dash, and from Lisa Theberge, who was sixth in the long jump.

The list of record setters for the day included Lakeland's Ron Boerner who threw the javelin 178-5, Arlington's Kevin Cole, who pole vaulted 13-9, and Molloy's John Gleason who high jumped 6-6. All were meet marks.

Millbrook's Green sisters added two new standards. Sylvia went 17-2½ in the long jump, and Pam tossed the discus 122-7.

TRACK SHORTS. Kolb's potential record was shrugged off by several observing coaches who felt his technique was illegal. None of the numerous judges, however, signaled for a disqualification. Wallkill got a couple of nice relay efforts. Dennis Lloyd almost pulled off a win for the Panthers in the 440 R and Nancy Acevedo gave her team a big jump in the girls sprint medley. Red Hook's Mark Gravano didn't place but ran a personal best in the 1500 meters. Gusting wind made distance events difficult. Only hitch is usually smooth program was new, open distance medley relay. Twenty-eight teams running all at once turned the race into a zoo. Dick Beams, Lourdes A.D., commenting on strength of Arlington: "I have a friend who ran for Power Memorial and now coaches in Danbury. He saw Arlington at Mahopac Relays and said there wasn't a team in New York State or Connecticut that could beat Arlington in a multi-meet like this." Summaries on page 28.

Mets and Yankees Rolling Along

Kranepool, Grote, Torre Lead Way

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ed Kranepool's two-run single highlighted a four-run first inning and Jerry Grote and Joe Torre each had three singles and an RBI Saturday to lead the New York Mets to a 7-2 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Wayne Garrett scored the first run of the inning when he drew a walk off loser Rich Folkers, 0-1, and scored on singles by Torre and Dave Kingman. Grote then singled to load the bases, setting the stage for Kranepool's hit. Bud Harrelson then singled in the final run of the inning.

Mickey Lolich went the distance for the Mets to gain his second victory in five decisions. He was touched for a run in the first on Willie Davis' double and Dave Winfield's single and in the ninth on a double by Doug Rader and a single by Mike Ivie.

The Mets scored an unearned run in the fourth when Winfield dropped a fly ball and added single runs in the seventh on consecutive singles by Torre, Kingman and Grote and in the eighth on singles by Garrett, Felix Millan and Torre.

Rookie Santo Alcala limited the Chicago Cubs to two hits in seven innings in his first major league start, and reliever Pedro Borbon hurled two innings of hitless ball to support the Cincinnati Reds' 16-hit attack off four Chicago pitchers for a 14-4 victory.

Wildness hurt Alcala in the first inning, when the Cubs scored three times, but six of the eight Reds who received bases-on-balls—and the only hit batsman, Pete Rose—all scored.

Alcala walked Rick Monday, Bill Madlock and Jerry Morales around a single by Jose Cardenal in the first, forcing in one run, while another scored on John Sumners' infield forecourt and a third on an error. Madlock homered for the last Cub run in the fifth.

Cubs' starter Rick Reuschel walked Ken Griffey, Joe Morgan and Dan Driessen in the first before Tony Perez singled for two runs and George Foster singled in one. In the second Alcala singled, Rose doubled and both scored on an infield out and Morgan's sacrifice fly.

In the fourth, Rose was hit by a pitch, Griffey walked, Morgan singled and Driessen's sacrifice fly brought home two runs. In the ninth a walk to Doug Flynn, a single by Griffey, Morgan's double, a sacrifice fly and Foster's double produced three runs. Morgan and Foster each batted in three runs for the Reds, while Griffey, Driessen, Perez and Dave Concepcion had two each.

In other games, Pittsburgh downed Atlanta 5-3 and Montreal beat San Francisco 7-5.

Dave Parker's three-run triple, one of his three extra-base hits in the game, and a homer by Al Oliver helped the Pirates gain a victory over Atlanta to hand the Braves their 12th straight loss. George Medich gave up eight hits and one earned run in to pick up his second victory in five decisions.

Larry Parrish's wind-blown three-run triple capped a four-run first inning to bring the Expos a victory over the Giants in a nationally televised game played in winds of about 30 miles an hour.

In night games, Los Angeles was at Philadelphia and Houston was at St. Louis.

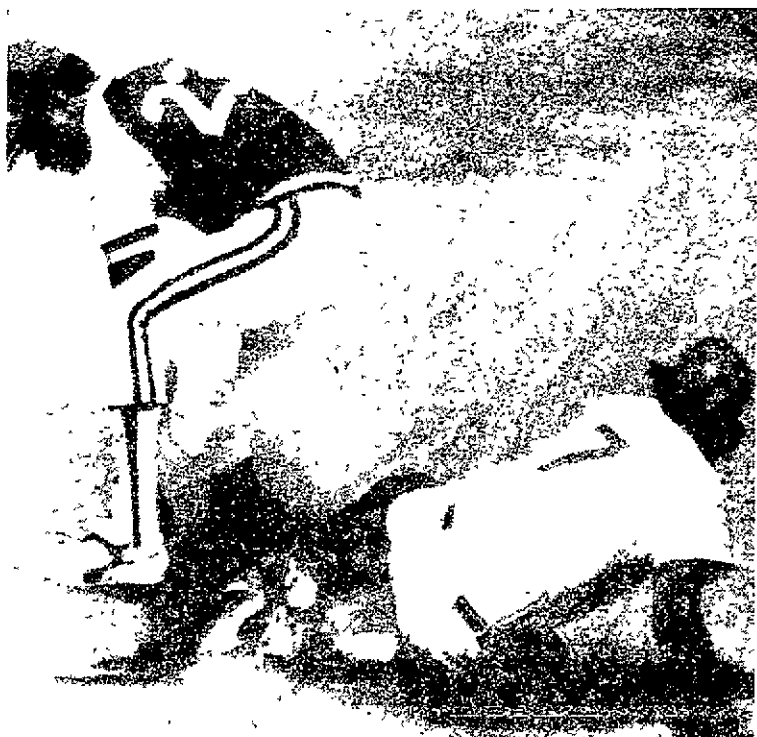

Gene Garber blanked the Dodgers with four innings of one-hit relief Saturday night and Greg Luzinski belted a 500-foot home run as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped a 12-game Los Angeles winning streak with a 6-4 decision.

Luzinski's seventh inning blast, his third of the year, came off loser Tommy John, 1-2. The ball hit the upper deck 60 feet high at a point over 400 feet from home plate in left-center field.

Garber took over for starter Jim Kaat in the sixth and picked up his first victory of the season as the Phillies used a double by Bob Boone, a Garber sacrifice and Dave Cash's ground out to take the lead in the bottom of the inning.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the third on doubles by Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker and a Steve Garvey single. They added two more in the fifth after Lopes and Bill Buckner opened the inning with singles.

Hot-hitting Vic Harris sparked a five-run fifth inning rally with a two-run double and Lynn McGlothen spaced nine hits Saturday night to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Tito Fuentes can't find ball as Ed Kranepool slides into second.

Hayes Three in Front Of Nelson Golf Field

DALLAS (UPI) — Mark Hayes, though his string of par or birdie golf ended at 43 holes, Saturday managed one birdie and consistent play under pressure from the game's biggest stars to hold a three-stroke third-round lead in the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Hayes, who placed dead last in the 1975 Nelson but has been a strong challenger all spring, played an uncharacteristically steady game despite threats from Masters champion Ray Floyd, Dallasite Don January, Hale Irwin and Texan Tom Kite.

Hayes, who shot 66 and 67 in the first two rounds, added an even-par 71 Saturday.

Don Bies moved into second place at six under. Bies, who last won at the 1975 Greater Hartford Open, began the day at five under and bogeyed the second hole but then made birdies at Nos. 6 and 10.

Jack Nicklaus threatened until near the end of his round, when he bogeyed two of the last three holes to fall six strokes back.

Hayes, who said he usually shoots lots of birdies and bogeys, recorded 34 pars and nine birdies Thursday, Friday and through the first seven holes Saturday before a bogey at the par-3 eighth.

Hayes said he was unsatisfied with his even-par 71 and was surprised he kept the lead.

"I thought everybody would get eight to nine under today," he said. "I don't know if par golf can win it tomorrow. I'd like to see the course set up tough so no one will shoot a real low number. But really, if I play a solid round tomorrow, I'll win."

Bies said his round was ordinary and he just tried to keep the ball in play in the swirling wind.

"I need to make some of those putts tomorrow," he said. "If Mark plays par golf tomorrow, he has an excellent chance of winning. Someone will have to shoot 68."

By mid-afternoon, her teammate, Dick Simon, said they still hoped to get the car on the track before closing time. The plan was for Simon, who has competed here six times, to shake down the machine before turning it over to Guthrie, who must pass the traditional rookie test before being permitted to qualify for the race.

Guthrie donned a borrowed uniform and helmet because her own equipment was lost by an airline. It turned up at midday Saturday in Chicago.

Rolla Voldstedt, builder and owner of Guthrie's car, approached Bill Vukovich and asked if he would loan the equipment to Guthrie.

January, who returned to the tour after two years in a golf course construction business, was tied with Floyd in third place at five under.

Next at four under were Bob E. Smith, Larry Nelson and Kite.

January started the day four under, went birdie-bogey on the front nine and then birdied Nos. 10 and 14 to move into the top three.

Since his return to the tour January, one of the most popular of the pros, has made the cut in all 13 of his tournaments, placed in the top 10 six times and won the Tournament of Champions three weeks ago.

Floyd, who won the Masters by a record-tying eight strokes, faltered at the par-4 16th Saturday. He hit a three-wood second shot into a lake guarding the green, chipped over and two-putted for a double bogey. He then birdied 17 and 18.

Hayes played his first hole over par in the tournament at the 229-yard, par-3 eighth. He pushed his tee shot to the right, just missing White Rock Creek, chipped on over a large bunker and two-putted for the bogey.

He regained the stroke on the par-five 10th hole, the easiest on the course for the pros. During the first two rounds the hole has surrendered eight eagles and 70 birdies.

Smith, who started the day at seven under in second place, recorded his first round in the 70s in seven trips around Preston Trail. He placed second last year with four rounds in the 60s, shot 68 Thursday and 67 Friday but had a 75 Saturday.

Lee Trevino, who still has not won in his home state, could never control his game. He started bogey, birdie, bogey, birdie and then shot par until No. 10, which he birdied.

Indy Still Awaits Janet

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway opened for practice Saturday for the million-dollar, May 30 500-mile auto race, but the anxiously awaited debut of the first woman driver at the famed oval was delayed.

Janet Guthrie, the slender New Yorker who hopes to become the first distaff participant in the world's richest race, was working in her garage behind the race track while her crew readied the car.

By mid-afternoon, her teammate, Dick Simon, said they still hoped to get the car on the track before closing time. The plan was for Simon, who has competed here six times, to shake down the machine before turning it over to Guthrie, who must pass the traditional rookie test before being permitted to qualify for the race.

Guthrie donned a borrowed uniform and helmet because her own equipment was lost by an airline. It turned up at midday Saturday in Chicago.

Rolla Voldstedt, builder and owner of Guthrie's car, approached Bill Vukovich and asked if he would loan the equipment to Guthrie.

"He was most gracious to be accommodating," said Phil Hedback, sponsor of Guthrie's car.

Vukovich, son of the late twotime "500" winner Bill Vukovich, was recently quoted as saying that as a race driver, "Guthrie stinks." He withdrew that statement after last Sunday's Trenton 200-miler in which Guthrie placed 15th after her car was sidelined by mechanical troubles.

The famed Speedway was opened promptly at noon (EDT) under sunny, near ideal weather conditions following traditional ceremonies.

Larry Cannon, Danville, Ill., was the first driver on the track followed, in order by Jim McElreath, Arlington, Tex., and rookie Spike Gehlhausen, Jasper, Ind.

Six cars made practice runs in the first hour, including one driven by veteran Roger McCluskey, who drove seven laps at moderate speeds before his engine blew.

White's Hit Sparks Rally In Ninth

OAKLAND (UPI) — Roy White's two-out, two-run ninth inning single, his fourth hit of the game, sparked the New York Yankees to their fifth straight victory Saturday with an 8-4 triumph over the Oakland A's.

White's single off Rolfe Fingers scored Graig Nettles, who had led off the inning with a walk, and Mickey Rivers, who had reached base on a fielder's choice. Thurman Munson followed White's hit with an RBI double and scored when second baseman Phil Garner uncorked a wild relay throw.

Dick Tidrow pitched 1 1-3 of hitless relief to gain his second victory against no losses. Jim Todd, who issued the walks to Nettles and Jim Mason, fell to 1-1.

Oakland had tied the game in the bottom of the eighth on Bert Campaneris' run-scoring single. The Yankees had taken a 3-0 lead earlier, scoring an unearned run in the first, a run in the third on Jim Mason's first homer, and another in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Chris Chambliss, who has hit in 17 straight games, and Oscar Gamble.

After Oakland tied the score in the fourth on Phil Garner's three-run homer, which followed singles by Sal Bando and Ken McMullen, New York moved ahead in the fifth when Mickey Rivers singled, moved to third on White's single and continued home on center fielder Bill North's throwing error.

John Mayberry knocked in five runs — three via his first homer of the year — and Armos Otis and George Brett got three hits apiece Saturday night to spark a 6-3 victory by the Kansas City Royals over the Baltimore Orioles before a Shirt Night crowd of 51,195.

Len Randle's three-run triple and Toby Harrah's two-run homer highlighted a nine-run second inning Saturday to lead the Texas Rangers to a 12-4 rout over Boston for a doubleheader sweep that handed the defending American League champion Red Sox their eighth straight loss.

Roy Howell's first homer of the year in the eighth inning of the opener boosted Texas to a 6-5 victory after the Red Sox had come from four runs behind to tie the score at 4-4 in the fourth inning.

The sweep extended the AL West leaders winning streak to seven games, the longest of their history, while the losing streak is Boston's longest since Sept. 1, 1974 when they dropped eight straight to blow a seven-game lead in the AL East.

All nine Texas runs in the second inning explosion in the nightcap were unearned.

In other games Detroit ripped Chicago 7-1, and Minnesota trounced Milwaukee 13-2.

Aurelio Rodriguez' three-run double supported the combined six-hit pitching of Vern Rühle and Bill Laxton to give Detroit its victory over the White Sox.

Rodriguez' eighth-inning double followed walks to Willie Horton and Jason Thompson sandwiched around a single by Rusty Staub. The Tigers had scored single runs in the first when Staub's sacrifice fly drove in Alex Johnson, in the third when Horton singled in Ron LeFlore, and the fifth when Bucky Dent's error followed a triple by Gary Sutherland that right fielder Pat Kelly lost in the sun.

Craig Kusick, playing in his hometown, slammed a homer, drove in four runs and scored three others to pace the Twins over Milwaukee.

Kusick drove in the Twins' first run with a first inning single. was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded to drive in another run and later scored in the second, hit his second homer of the season in the fourth, and drove in a run while grounding out in the eighth.

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Red Sox centerfielder Fred Lynn had to leave the first game of Saturday's doubleheader the Texas Rangers because of a recurring back spasm.

Last year's American League Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year, who extended his hitting streak to 14 games Saturday, left midway through the game after striking out.

The Red Sox management said Lynn's back was sore before the game started. Lynn missed two games earlier this year because of the injury, which has persisted since spring training.

Sally Little can't coax in putt

Little Ahead in LPGA

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Sally Little sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday to shoot her third straight sub-par round, a one-under 71, and held a one-stroke third round lead in the $70,000 Women's International golf tournament.

"I putted so well, it was unbelievable. I'm very happy," said Little, who built a four-stroke lead at one point before losing it in the high winds that came up as she played her final hole.

Still, the South African with the cover-girl looks, who is seeking her first victory in five years on the LPGA tour, had a 54-hole total of 211, five-under in this inaugural of the tournament, patterned after the men's Masters.

Australian Jan Stephenson, another of the glamorous youngsters dressing up the women's tour and a two-time tournament winner this year, moved into second place by herself with five birdies on the back nine in a round of 70 that put her at four-under 212.

Judy Rankin, the leading money winner on this year's tour, former Women's Open champion Murle Breer and amateur Debbie Massey were three shots farther back at 213. Rankin had a 72 Saturday, Breer and Massey 73s.

Veteran Shirley Englehorn, helped by the first hole-in-one of her career, and No. 3 moneywinner Betty Burdett both had 71s for even-par 216s.

Little, a two-stroke leader at the start of the day, extended her lead with birdie putts of seven feet at the second hole, six feet at the eighth hole and 30 feet at the 11th hole before the wind came up.

"It was blowing so hard it was hard to keep control of your swing," said Little. "I started hitting everything to the right."

Little missed the greens at 13, 15 and 17 for bogeys and when Stephenson, playing just ahead of her in the next-to-last group of the day, birdied 18 from 30 feet, they were tied.

Then Little followed with the birdie of her own.

That left her with 18 holes to go in the battle for a $10,000 first prize and an initial title that has eluded her in 104 previous starts.

"I'm nervous and tense, but I'm ready to go," she said.

Stephenson nearly missed her starting time when a friend borrowed her car and she got here too late to warm up the way she wanted to.

"For four holes, I was swinging fast and couldn't settle down," she said. "I thought I was going to shoot a million." She played her first nine holes in two-over, but then birdied four of the first five holes on the back nine and also birdied 18 after three-putting 17 for a bogey.

Carol Mann birdied the final two holes, chipping in at 18, to shoot a five-under-par 67, the best round of the tournament. She is eight strokes off the lead at 219, but if the 67 holds up as the low round, Mann will earn a $1,000 bonus.

Big E Blasts Bullets' Boss

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The Washington Bullets began looking for a new coach Saturday after firing K.C. Jones and Elvin Hayes suggested they better start looking for his replacement, too.

Hayes said he was outraged when owner Abe Pollin announced Friday that Jones' three-year contract will not be renewed.

Hayes, the Bullets' scoring leader, said, "This whole thing really angers me. I have a lot of love and respect for K.C. and his family. I'd be willing to sacrifice my career over this."

"Maybe I just won't be here. I feel that strongly about it."

"Some people say we have too many superstars on this team. Well, the way I feel now they can be minus one very easily."

Most of the players felt Jones was blameless, but none echoed Hayes' outrage and threat to quit the club.

Among those believed on Pollin's list of prospective coaches are New York Nets coach Kevin Loughery and assistant coach Al Bianchi of the Phoenix Suns, both good friends of Bullets general manager Bob Ferry. In addition, several former NBA coaches have recently been made jobless: Jack Egan of Houston, Jack Ramsey of Buffalo, Cotton Fitzsimmons of Atlanta and Ray Scott of Detroit.

Pollin did not explain why he fired Jones, an outstanding member of the Boston Celtics during their 1960s glory years and whose Bullets won 63 per cent of their games. But it was a familiar story in professional sports: win big or leave.

The Bullets won the division title two out of three years and were blown out of the NBA finals in four games last year by Golden State.

They were expected to be much stronger after swapping Kevin Porter for Detroit's Dave Bing.

But the team lost the division title to Cleveland, which knocked them out of the firstround playoffs in seven games.

Gene Garber blanked the Dodgers with four innings of one-hit relief Saturday night and Greg Luzinski belted a 500-foot home run as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped a 12-game Los Angeles winning streak with a 6-4 decision.

Luzinski's seventh inning blast, his third of the year, came off loser Tommy John, 1-2. The ball hit the upper deck 60 feet high at a point over 400 feet from home plate in left-center field.

Garber took over for starter Jim Kaat in the sixth and picked up his first victory of the season as the Phillies used a double by Bob Boone, a Garber sacrifice and Dave Cash's ground out to take the lead in the bottom of the inning.

The Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the third on doubles by Dave Lopes and Dusty Baker and a Steve Garvey single. They added two more in the fifth after Lopes and Bill Buckner opened the inning with singles.

Hot-hitting Vic Harris sparked a five-run fifth inning rally with a two-run double and Lynn McGlothen spaced nine hits Saturday night to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

Tito Fuentes can't find ball as Ed Kranepool slides into second.

Hayes Three in Front Of Nelson Golf Field

DALLAS (UPI) — Mark Hayes, though his string of par or birdie golf ended at 43 holes, Saturday managed one birdie and consistent play under pressure from the game's biggest stars to hold a three-stroke third-round lead in the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Hayes, who placed dead last in the 1975 Nelson but has been a strong challenger all spring, played an uncharacteristically steady game despite threats from Masters champion Ray Floyd, Dallasite Don January, Hale Irwin and Texan Tom Kite.

Hayes, who shot 66 and 67 in the first two rounds, added an even-par 71 Saturday.

Don Bies moved into second place at six under. Bies, who last won at the 1975 Greater Hartford Open, began the day at five under and bogeyed the second hole but then made birdies at Nos. 6 and 10.

Jack Nicklaus threatened until near the end of his round, when he bogeyed two of the last three holes to fall six strokes back.

Hayes, who said he usually shoots lots of birdies and bogeys, recorded 34 pars and nine birdies Thursday, Friday and through the first seven holes Saturday before a bogey at the par-3 eighth.

Hayes said he was unsatisfied with his even-par 71 and was surprised he kept the lead.

"I thought everybody would get eight to nine under today," he said. "I don't know if par golf can win it tomorrow. I'd like to see the course set up tough so no one will shoot a real low number. But really, if I play a solid round tomorrow, I'll win."

Bies said his round was ordinary and he just tried to keep the ball in play in the swirling wind.

"I need to make some of those putts tomorrow," he said. "If Mark plays par golf tomorrow, he has an excellent chance of winning. Someone will have to shoot 66 or better."

Indy Still Awaits Janet

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The Indianapolis Motor Speedway opened for practice Saturday for the million-dollar, May 30 500-mile auto race, but the anxiously awaited debut of the first woman driver at the famed oval was delayed.

Janet Guthrie, the slender New Yorker who hopes to become the first distaff participant in the world's richest race, was working in her garage behind the race track while her crew readied the car.

By mid-afternoon, her teammate, Dick Simon, said they still hoped to get the car on the track before closing time. The plan was for Simon, who has competed here six times, to shake down the machine before turning it over to Guthrie, who must pass the traditional rookie test before being permitted to qualify for the race.

Guthrie donned a borrowed uniform and helmet because her own equipment was lost by an airline. It turned up at midday Saturday in Chicago.

to 67 to win.

Next at four under were Bob E. Smith, Larry Nelson and Kite.

January started the day four under, went birdie-bogey on the front nine and then birdied Nos. 10 and 14 to move into the top three.

Since his return to the tour January, one of the most popular of the pros, has made the cut in all 13 of his tournaments, placed in the top 10 six times and won the Tournament of Champions three weeks ago.

Floyd, who won the Masters by a record-tying eight strokes, faltered at the par-4 16th Saturday. He hit a three-wood second shot into a lake guarding the green, chipped over and two-putted for a double bogey. He then birdied 17 and 18.

Hayes played his first hole over par in the tournament at the 229-yard, par-3 eighth. He pushed his tee shot to the right, just missing White Rock Creek, chipped on over a large bunker and two-putted for the bogey.

He regained the stroke on the par-five 10th hole, the easiest on the course for the pros. During the first two rounds the hole has surrendered eight eagles and 70 birdies.

Smith, who started the day at seven under in second place, recorded his first round in the 70s in seven trips around Preston Trail. He placed second last year with four rounds in the 60s, shot 68 Thursday and 67 Friday but had a 75 Saturday.

Lee Trevino, who still has not won in his home state, could never control his game. He started bogey, birdie, bogey, birdie and then shot par until No. 10, which he birdied.

and asked if he would loan the equipment to Guthrie.

"He was most gracious to be accommodating," said Phil Hedback, sponsor of Guthrie's car.

Vukovich, son of the late twotime "500" winner Bill Vukovich, was recently quoted as saying that as a race driver, "Guthrie stinks." He withdrew that statement after last Sunday's Trenton 200-miler in which Guthrie placed 15th after her car was sidelined by mechanical troubles.

The famed Speedway was opened promptly at noon (EDT) under sunny, near ideal weather conditions following traditional ceremonies.

Larry Cannon, Danville, Ill., was the first driver on the track followed, in order by Jim McElreath, Arlington, Tex., and rookie Spike Gehlhausen, Jasper, Ind.

Six cars made practice runs in the first hour, including one driven by veteran Roger McCluskey, who drove seven laps at moderate speeds before his engine blew.

White's Hit Sparks Rally In Ninth

OAKLAND (UPI) — Roy White's two-out, two-run ninth inning single, his fourth hit of the game, sparked the New York Yankees to their fifth straight victory Saturday with an 8-4 triumph over the Oakland A's.

White's single off Rollie Fingers scored Graig Nettles, who had led off the inning with a walk, and Mickey Rivers, who had reached base on a fielder's choice. Thurman Munson followed White's hit with an RBI double and scored when second baseman Phil Garner uncorked a wild relay throw.

Dick Tidrow pitched 1 1-3 of hitless relief to gain his second victory against no losses. Jim Todd, who issued the walks to Nettles and Jim Mason, fell to 1-1.

Oakland had tied the game in the bottom of the eighth on Bert Campaneris' run-scoring single. The Yankees had taken a 3-0 lead earlier, scoring an unearned run in the first, a run in the third on Jim Mason's first homer, and another in the fourth on consecutive doubles by Chris Chambliss, who has hit in 17 straight games, and Oscar Gamble.

After Oakland tied the score in the fourth on Phil Garner's three-run homer, which followed singles by Sal Bando and Ken McMullen, New York moved ahead in the fifth when Mickey Rivers singled, moved to third on White's single and continued home on center fielder Bill North's throwing error.

John Mayberry knocked in five runs — three via his first homer of the year — and Amos Otis and George Brett got three hits apiece Saturday night to spark a 6-3 victory by the Kansas City Royals over the Baltimore Orioles before a Shirt Night crowd of 51,195.

Len Randle's three-run triple and Toby Harrah's two-run homer highlighted a nine-run second inning Saturday to lead the Texas Rangers to a 12-4 rout over Boston for a doubleheader sweep that handed the defending American League champion Red Sox their eighth straight loss.

Roy Howell's first homer of the year in the eighth inning of the opener boosted Texas to a 6-5 victory after the Red Sox had come from four runs behind to tie the score at 4-4 in the fourth inning.

The sweep extended the AL West leaders' winning streak to seven games, the longest of their history, while the losing streak is Boston's longest since Sept., 1974 when they dropped eight straight to blow a seven-game lead in the AL East.

All nine Texas runs in the second inning explosion in the nightcap were unearned.

In other games Detroit ripped Chicago 7-1, and Minnesota trounced Milwaukee 13-2.

Aurelio Rodriguez' three-run double supported the combined six-hit pitching of Vern Ruhle and Bill Laxton to give Detroit its victory over the White Sox.

Rodriguez' eighth-inning double followed walks to Willie Horton and Jason Thompson sandwiched around a single by Rusty Staub. The Tigers had scored single runs in the first when Staub's sacrifice fly drove in Alex Johnson, in the third when Horton singled in Ron LeFlore, and the fifth when Bucky Dent's error followed a triple by Gary Sutherland that right fielder Pat Kelly lost in the sun.

Craig Kusick, playing in his hometown, slammed a homer, drove in four runs and scored three others to pace the Twins over Milwaukee.

Kusick drove in the Twins' first run with a first inning single, was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded to drive in another run and later scored in the second, hit his second homer of the season in the fourth, and drove in a run while grounding out in the eighth.

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Red Sox centerfielder Fred Lynn had to leave the first game of Saturday's doubleheader the Texas Rangers because of a recurring back spasm.

Last year's American League Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year, who extended his hitting streak to 14 games Saturday, left midway through the game after striking out.

The Red Sox management said Lynn's back was sore before the game started. Lynn missed two games earlier this year because of the injury, which has persisted since spring training.

Sally Little can't coax in putt

Little Ahead in LPGA

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI) — Sally Little sank a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Saturday to shoot her third straight sub-par round, a one-under 71, and held a one-stroke third round lead in the $70,000 Women's International golf tournament.

"I putted so well, it was unbelievable. I'm very happy," said Little, who built a four-stroke lead at one point before losing it in the high winds that came up as she played her final hole.

Still, the South African with the cover-girl looks, who is seeking her first victory in five years on the LPGA tour, had a 54-hole total of 211, five-under in this inaugural of the tournament, patterned after the men's Masters.

Australian Jan Stephenson, another of the glamorous youngsters dressing up the women's tour and a two-time tournament winner this year, moved into second place by herself with five birdies on the back nine in a round of 70 that put her at four-under 212.

Judy Rankin, the leading money winner on this year's tour, former Women's Open champion Murle Breer and amateur Debbie Massey were three shots farther back at 213. Rankin had a 72 Saturday, Breer and Massey 73s.

Veteran Shirley Englehorn, helped by the first hole-in-one of her career, and No. 3 moneywinner Betty Burfeidt both had 71s for even-par 216s.

Little, a two-stroke leader at the start of the day, extended her lead with birdie putts of seven feet at the second hole, six feet at the eighth hole and 30 feet at the 11th hole before the wind came up.

"It was blowing so hard it was hard to keep control of your swing," said Little. "I started hitting everything to the right."

Little missed the greens at 13, 15 and 17 for bogeys and when Stephenson, playing just ahead of her in the next-to-last group of the day, birdied 18 from 30 feet, they were tied.

Then Little followed with the birdie of her own.

That left her with 18 holes to go in the battle for a $10,000 first prize and an initial title that has eluded her in 104 previous starts.

"I'm nervous and tense, but I'm ready to go," she said.

Stephenson nearly missed her starting time when a friend borrowed her car and she got here too late to warm up the way she wanted to.

She played her first nine holes in two-over, but then birdied four of the first five holes on the back nine and also birdied 18 after three-putting 17 for a bogey.

Carol Mann birdied the final two holes, chipping in at 18, to shoot a five-under-par 67, the best round of the tournament. She is eight strokes off the lead at 219, but if the 67 holds up as the low round, Mann will earn a $1,000 bonus.

Scores of other top players included U.S. Open champion Sandra Palmer's 69-218, Sandra Haynie's 69-218, JoAnne Carner's 74-222, Kathy Whitworth's 75-222 and Jane Blalock's 73-225.

Big E Blasts Bullets' Boss

LANDOVER, Md. (UPI) — The Washington Bullets began looking for a new coach Saturday after firing K.C. Jones and Elvin Hayes suggested they better start looking for his replacement, too.

Hayes said he was outraged when owner Abe Pollin announced Friday that Jones' three-year contract will not be renewed.

Hayes, the Bullets' scoring leader, said, "This whole thing really angers me. I have a lot of love and respect for K.C. and his family. I'd be willing to sacrifice my career over this."

"Maybe I just won't be here. I feel that strongly about it."

"Some people say we have too many superstars on this team. Well, the way I feel now they can be minus one very easily."

Most of the players felt Jones was blameless, but none echoed Hayes' outrage and threat to quit the club.

Among those believed on Pollin's list of prospective coaches are New York Nets coach Kevin Loughery and assistant coach Al Bianchi of the Phoenix Suns, both good friends of Bullets general manager Bob Ferry. In addition, several former NBA coaches have recently been made jobless: Jack Egan of Houston, Jack Ramsey of Buffalo, Cotton Fitzsimmons of Atlanta and Ray Scott of Detroit.

Pollin did not explain why he fired Jones, an outstanding member of the Boston Celtics during their 1960s glory years and whose Bullets won 63 per cent of their games. But it was a familiar story in professional sports: win big or leave.

The Bullets won the division title two out of three years and were blown out of the NBA finals in four games last year by Golden State.

They were expected to be much stronger after swapping Kevin Porter for Detroit's Dave Bing.

But the team lost the division title to Cleveland, which knocked them out of the firstround playoffs in seven games.

Uster Finishes Fifth

In Conference Tennis

MIDDLETOWN — Uster County Community College

tennis players suffered a quick exit Friday from the annual Mid-Hudson Conference tournament.

Five Senators competed and lost in the first round. Two doubles teams also played and one made it through to the quarter-finals before succumbing.

Rockland won the team title with Orange second, Dutchess third, Westchester fourth, Ulster fifth, and Sullivan sixth.

In singles, fourth-seeded Andy Stoll lost to John Ligero of Orange, 7-6, 6-2; Duane Jones was stopped by Jeff Kaplan of Orange, 6-3, 6-1; Ken Del Rosario was tripped by Rudy Gerundo of Westchester, 6-3, 3-6, 6-2; Vinnie Giovenco fell, 6-2, 6-2, to Geoff Malafsky of Orange; and Bob Gramling was beaten by Dave Kauffman of Orange, 6-1, 6-0.

In doubles, Jones and Del Rosario beat Dutchess' Rich Dolan and Steffen Kraehmer, 7-6, 7-6, then lost to Rockland's Allen Cooke and Richard Reiter, 6-0, 6-0. The other UCCC team, Giovenco and Gramling dropped a 6-0, 6-1 decision to Bruce Wild and Vin Gilbert.

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Danny Ozark is sailing under sealed orders. He'll read them as soon as he's far enough out. He has a hunch what they say already: win or don't bother to come back.

Ruly Carpenter, the Phillies' president, sided with Ozark following a recent run-in with Philadelphia writers, but that shouldn't necessarily be construed as any life-time contract.

For the past three years, which is as long as Ozark has managed the club, the Philadelphia Phillies' front office has done everything it possibly could to provide the talent necessary to win a pennant.

They have gone to tremendous lengths both money-wise and energy-wise to bring in ballplayers like Dave Cash, Tug McGraw, Garry Maddox and Dick Allen — for a second time — and they went out and got Jim Kaat and Ron Reed this past winter.

Ozark has not been told he has to win this year. It doesn't matter. He knows it. If he doesn't win, he's gone. He knows that, too. You don't have to be a Rhodes scholar to figure that out.

Which brings up some of Ozark's problems last year when the Phillies finished second in the National League East 6½ games in back of the Pirates even though many people in Philadelphia are still convinced they should've finished first.

Ozark is the one generally blamed for that. Chiefly because he isn't considered to be such a great baseball mind as, say, Gene Mauch, who some people forget didn't win in eight seasons with the Phillies, either.

A deep source of embarrassment was the answer Ozark gave late last September when he had a little trouble with third grade arithmetic. Seven games behind the Pirates with only six more remaining, the Phillies actually had been eliminated, but when asked for his reaction, Ozark said, "we're not out of it if we win all of them, and they lose all of them."

In Ozark's defense, Tug McGraw says, "how can you bury a guy for one statement?" His mind might've been on something else.

Maybe, but Ozark made some other statements as well which didn't exactly do him a world of good.

McGraw, starting his second season with the Phillies after coming to them from the Mets, feels most of the criticism of Ozark has been unfair.

"When a team wins, everybody says 'what a great bunch of ballplayers,' but when the same team loses, it's the manager's fault," says the lefty reliever the Phils are counting on so much.

"I think when you have adult talented players with good heads on their shoulders plus the capability of winning a pennant, the manager shouldn't make that much difference. Where the manager does make a difference is where you have a young inexperienced team. Then it's his job to instill confidence in those young players and bring out their ability. Gil Hodges was able to do that with the Mets in 1969."

Ozark has almost the perfect mix with the Phillies this year.

He has seasoned veterans like Dick Allen, Jim Kaat, Jim Lonzberg, Tony Taylor and Tug McGraw, those in the middle like Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt, Larry Bowa, Dave Cash and Bob Boone and good looking kids obviously on the way up like Larry Christenson and Tom Underwood.

"He knows the kind of talent he's got," says McGraw. "What he's gotta try to do now is hold it together and keep everybody happy."

How does he do that?

Tug McGraw shrugged.

"That's his problem," he said.

Rondout LL to Host Regional Girls Softball

ROSENDALE — The Rondout Valley Little League will host the 1976 Regional Girls' Little League Softball Championship August 9 to 14, it was announced today.

The tournament attracts the top eight teams in the Eastern Region from two age groups, Division I (up to 12) and Seniors (13-15). The Divisional titlists will advance to Portland, Ore., for the World Series.

A meeting last week attended by District 16 LL administrator Judge Hubert Richter and Eastern Regional LL Director Joseph W. Losch firming up the RVLL commitment.

Another meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Rosendale Town Hall. Committees will be formed at that time for tournaments, program, hosting, and housing among other details.

Is McTear Slowing Up?

WINTER PARK, Fla.

(UPI) — Houston McTear is still the "fastest human" at the Florida State High School

Track Championships but he ran his 100-yard dash specialty

Friday night a full second slower than the world record time he posted last year.

McTear ran the 100 final heat in 10 seconds flat, compared to his 9.8 qualifying time in the afternoon. But he ran against a six mile an hour headwind, wasn't pressed by his competition, and his mind probably was heavy with questions thrown at him by reporters in the past two days.

Asked about his future,

McTear told reporters Thursday he hopes to attend San Jose, Calif., City College next year. But on Friday, he said he is not even sure if he will try to go to college, let alone where.

"I might not go nowhere," he said.

McTear, however, was sure about two things: football and his running ability.

Even though he has signed a grant-in-aid to play football for the University of Florida, the speedy schoolboy from the Florida Panhandle said, "I decided I'm not going to play any more football. Too many people are bothering me about football. I'm not going to no

Gainesville. I just signed with Florida to get them off my back."

Something More Than Hockey Title at Stake

MONTREAL (UPI) — Something more than a hockey championship will be at stake when the proud Montreal Canadiens attempt to reclaim their heritage from the brash Philadelphia Flyers.

Almost from their beginning, long before the Russians discovered the game and exactly a half-century before the Flyers were created, the Canadiens have been recognized as the crown prince of hockey, the one team that stood above all others.

Starting with their first championship in 1924, the Canadiens have won the Stanley Cup a record 17 times, including a run of five years from 1955-60. But in the last few years the Flyers have fought their way to the top, and now are battling for their third consecutive Stanley Cup, a hat trick that has been accomplished in the past only by Montreal and Toronto.

The best-of-seven final, matching the two teams with the best records during the regular National Hockey League season, begins tonight starting at 7 p.m. The second game also will be played in the Forum Tuesday night before the series shifts to Philadelphia for the third and fourth games.

"It is going to be two of the greatest teams in the world playing against each other," said defenseman Joe Watson, who along with Gary Dornhoefer are the only remaining original Flyers. "It's Canada vs. the United States. Sure, we are all Canadians, but we're representing an American city. It's Philadelphia against Montreal. If we go all out, we can win that series, but we've got to have everybody work hard. They are a good, solid hockey team."

Team Captain Bobby Clarke, still hampered somewhat by a bruised knee, said before leaving Philadelphia, "We know it's going to be tough. When you get to the finals anything can happen. We don't feel we have anything to prove but I think a lot of people feel they (the Canadiens) are better than we are. There is a lot of talent on that team, but there is a lot of talent on this team.

"We play together. We are well coached and we play well together. I don't think we have anything to prove. Our record speaks for itself. Sure we'd love to beat them, but we'd love to beat anybody we play in the finals."

Montreal, after turning in a 58-11-11 regular season mark, has won eight of nine playoff games thus far in disposing of the Chicago Black Hawks and New York Islanders. The Canadiens are the fastest team in hockey, won the Vezina Trophy behind goaltender Ken Dryden as the best defensive team in the NHL and have an awesome attack, led by Guy Lafleur's 56 goals and 125 points.

But it is Philadelphia which has the hot hand in Reggie Leach. After scoring 61 goals during the regular campaign, Leach has scored at least once in each of his last nine playoff games, climaxing this streak with a record-equaling five goals in the semifinal clincher against Boston Thursday night.

Canadian Coach Scotty Bowman makes no secret that he will attempt to counter the Leach-Clarke-Bill Barber line with his checking unit of Doug Jarvis, Bob Gainey and Jim Roberts. This line held the high-scoring Islanders' trio of Clark Gillies, Bryan Trottier and Billy Harris to one goal in five games.

"Look, I've got my ideas when I'm going to do," Bowman said Friday, "but I have to work them out in my practices before Sunday night."

Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero has indicated that Wayne Stephenson, who won the last four games against Boston, will open in the Flyer net tonight with perhaps Bernie Parent, the MVP of the last two playoffs, coming back for game two. Rick MacLeish, the high playoff scorer in each of the last two years, will be unavailable to the Flyers after undergoing left knee surgery.

"Montreal won't be easy," Shero said. "They like to win, so do we. Our secret is capacity for work."

Bjorn Tired of Losing

DALLAS (UPI) — Bjorn Borg first came to the World Championship of Tennis tournament two years ago as a mere sprite of 17 and surprisingly worked his way into the finals against John Newcombe. He lost.

Last year he was back and again reached the championship match after a thrilling five-set, four-hour win over Rod Laver. But he lost the title again—this time to Arthur Ashe.

Borg makes it clear that he is tired of losing in Dallas.

After his semifinal win over Harold Solomon Friday night, the normally soft spoken Swede let his voice rise a little when he said:

"I will try so hard on Sunday. I will try everything I can to win. And if I can play like I have been playing I think I will win."

But there is one not-so-small hurdle left before Borg captures his first WCT title and the $50,000 that goes with it.

Borg will meet Guillermo Vilas in the sixth annual WCT finals and in Vilas he will be facing not only a good friend but a carbon copy as far as style is concerned. The two players even look a little alike with the long hair and sweat-band.

And there is no mistaking that Vilas is going to be a determined individual as well in his first WCT title match.

"This is a wonderful opportunity," said the 23-year-old Argentinian. "I'm going to let it go. I'm going to give it all my best to win."

"This time I'll be well prepared."

The championship will bring together two advocates of the baseline with Borg having the better volleys of the two. They have met 11 times in tournament action and Borg has won seven.

But Borg and Vilas have seen each other a lot more than those 11 matches.

"We have practiced together almost every day for the past three years," said Vilas. "There is no reason not to practice before this final."

So the two players did, indeed, conduct a workout Saturday.

"The match is unusual in that we are both topspin players," said Vilas. "Neither of us play against other players who use topspin."

"I don't think about anything special when I play Bjorn, though, even if he is a friend. It is just that usually when we play it is in the semifinals or finals and it is a big match."

Both players have displayed excellent form during this prestigious tournament, Borg breezing past Eddie Dibbs and Solomon while Vilas has disposed of Bob Lutz and Dick Stockton. Both have expressed pleasure at the way they have been playing.

Despite knowing Borg's game so well because they practice together, Vilas said neither of the players had an advantage through the familiarity.

"We don't know how we are going to play the match until we get on the court," Vilas said. "If one player begins to do something one way then the other player adjusts."

"You just have to wait and see how it is going to come out."

***

DALLAS (UPI) — Harold Solomon dropped the first set on a 7-0 tiebreaker but came back to defeat Dick Stockton, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, Saturday and take third place in the World Championship of Tennis tournament.

Solomon, who upset favored Arthur Ashe but lost to Sweden's Bjorn Borg in reaching the consolation match, won $10,000 for third place. Stockton, who downed Mexico's Raul Ramirez, then lost to Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, won $6,000.

Neff and Soutar Win Pro Mixed Doubles

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Steve Neff of Sarasota, Fla., and Judy Soutar of Kansas City, Mo., Saturday won the professional mixed doubles championship of the National Bowling Council 1976 Spectacular.

The Neff-Soutar duo defeated Mark Roth of New York and Vesna Grinfelds of San Francisco, Calif., 184-181, to win the $10,000 first prize.

Roth-Grinfelds earned $7,500 for second place in the nationally televised final round of the four-day tournament at the Myriad Convention Center, site of the recently-completed American Bowling Congress national tournament.

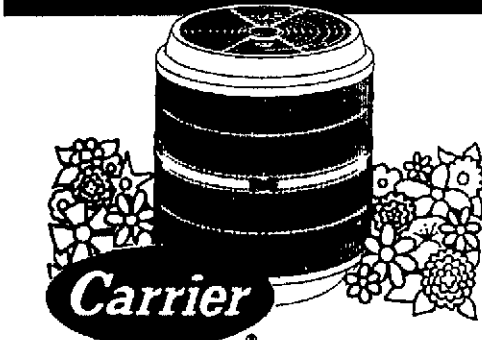

State champions Jack Lee of Enid, Okla., and Bobbie Wiener of Valley Stream, N.Y., captured the amateur crowns Saturday. Friday night the University of South Carolina won the men's collegiate title and the women's crown went to San Jose State.

Roth and Miss Grinfelds beat Larry Lamb of San Francisco and Patty Costello of Scranton, Pa., 226-199, to set up their showdown with Neff and Mrs. Soutar, the top qualifiers in the pro mixed doubles.

Miss Costello and Lamb defeated defending champions Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., and Betty Morris of Stockton, Calif., 258-174, in the first match of the final round Saturday. The Lamb-Costello pair wound up with $5,000 and the Anthony-Morris duo took home $3,500.

Mrs. Wiener beat Jodie Evans of Miami, Fla., 209-201, for the women's amateur championship. Lee defeated Jerome Lee of Medford, Ore., 247-232, for the men's title. Lee and Mrs. Wiener received silver trophy cups.

Ozark has almost the perfect mix with the Phillies this year.

He has seasoned veterans like Dick Allen, Jim Kaat, Jim Lonborg, Tony Taylor and Tug McGraw, those in the middle like Greg Luzinski, Mike Schmidt, Larry Bowa, Dave Cash and Bob Boone and good looking kids obviously on the way up like Larry Christenson and Tom Underwood.

"He knows the kind of talent he's got," says McGraw. "What he's gotta try to do now is hold it together and keep everybody happy."

How does he do that?

Tug McGraw shrugged.

"That's his problem," he said.

Rondout LL to Host Regional Girls Softball

ROSENDALE — The Rondout Valley Little League will host the 1976 Regional Girls' Little League Softball Championship August 9 to 14, it was announced today.

The tournament attracts the top eight teams in the Eastern Region from two age groups, Division I (up to 12) and Seniors (13-15). The Divisional titlists will advance to Portland, Ore., for the World Series.

A meeting last week attended by District 16 LL administrator Judge Hubert Richter and Eastern Regional LL Director Joseph W. Losch firm up the RVLL commitment.

Another meeting is scheduled for Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Rosendale Town Hall. Committees will be formed at that time for tournaments, program, hosting, and housing among other details.

Is McTear Slowing Up?

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI) — Houston McTear is still the "fastest human" at the Florida State High School Track Championships but he ran his 100-yard dash specialty Friday night a full second slower than the world record time he posted last year.

McTear ran the 100 final heat in 10 seconds flat, compared to his 9.8 qualifying time in the afternoon. But he ran against a six mile an hour headwind, wasn't pressed by his competition, and his mind probably was heavy with questions thrown at him by reporters in the past two days.

Asked about his future, McTear told reporters Thursday he hopes to attend San Jose, Calif., City College next year. But on Friday, he said he is not even sure if he will try to go to college, let alone where.

"I might not go nowhere," he said.

McTear, however, was sure about two things: football and his running ability.

Even though he has signed a grant-in-aid to play football for the University of Florida, the speedy schoolboy from the Florida Panhandle said, "I decided I'm not going to play any more football. Too many people are bothering me about football. I'm not going to no Gainesville. I just signed with Florida to get them off my back."

Henn Leads Boat Racers

MIAMI (UPI) — Preston Henn of Pompano Beach, Fla., battled five-foot waves in the Gulf Stream Saturday to win the Open Class competition in the 13th annual $10,000 Miami-Bimini powerboat race.

Pompano Beach drivers won both ends of the competition as Bob Sheer of Pompano Beach was first in the Production Class in his 27-foot Magnum, named "Little Rebel."

Henn averaged 62 miles per hour in his 38-foot Bertram, which he calls "Streaker." It was far short of the record of 74 mph over the 168-nautical mile triangular course from Fowey Rocks, off Key Biscayne, to Fort Lauderdale, Bimini in the Bahamas and then back to Miami.

Joel Halpern, Bronxville, N.Y., this year's point leader for the national powerboat title, finished second, a minute behind Henn, in his "Beep Beep," a 38-foot Cobra.

HVSL Sets Tourneys

KINGSTON — The Hudson Valley Soccer League has announced plans for spring and summer Invitational Tournaments the first of which will be held May 16 at the Putnam Valley field.

Interested participants should contact Pepe Femia at 876-2727. Entry fee for non-league teams is $10.

Something More Than Hockey Title at Stake

MONTREAL (UPI) — Something more than a hockey championship will be at stake when the proud Montreal Canadiens attempt to reclaim their heritage from the brash Philadelphia Flyers.

Almost from their beginning, long before the Russians discovered the game and exactly a half-century before the Flyers were created, the Canadiens have been recognized as the crown prince of hockey, the one team that stood above all others.

Starting with their first championship in 1924, the Canadiens have won the Stanley Cup a record 17 times, including a run of five years from 1955-60. But in the last few years the Flyers have fought their way to the top, and now are battling for their third consecutive Stanley Cup, a hat trick that has been accomplished in the past only by Montreal and Toronto.

The best-of-seven final, matching the two teams with the best records during the regular National Hockey League season, begins tonight starting at 7 p.m. The second game also will be played in the Forum Tuesday night before the series shifts to Philadelphia for the third and fourth games.

"It is going to be two of the greatest teams in the world playing against each other," said defenseman Joe Watson, who along with Gary Dornhoefer are the only remaining original Flyers. "It's Canada vs. the United States. Sure, we are all Canadians, but we're representing an American city. It's Philadelphia against Montreal. If we go all out, we can win that series, but we've got to have everybody work hard. They are a good, solid hockey team."

Team Captain Bobby Clarke, still hampered somewhat by a bruised knee, said before leaving Philadelphia, "We know it's going to be tough. When you get to the finals anything can happen. We don't feel we have anything to prove but I think a lot of people feel they (the Canadiens) are better than we are. There is a lot of talent on that team, but there is a lot of talent on this team.

"We play together. We are well coached and we play well together. I don't think we have anything to prove. Our record speaks for itself. Sure we'd love to beat them, but we'd love to beat anybody we play in the finals."

Montreal, after turning in a 58-11-11 regular season mark, has won eight of nine playoff games thus far in disposing of the Chicago Black Hawks and New York Islanders. The Canadiens are the fastest team in hockey, won the Vezina Trophy behind goaltender Ken Dryden as the best defensive team in the NHL and have an awesome attack, led by Guy Lafleur's 56 goals and 125 points.

But it is Philadelphia which has the hot hand in Reggie Leach. After scoring 61 goals during the regular campaign, Leach has scored at least once in each of his last nine playoff games, climaxing this streak with a record-equalling five goals in the semifinal clincher against Boston Thursday night.

Canadian Coach Scotty Bowman makes no secret that he will attempt to counter the Leach-Clarke-Bill Barber line with his checking unit of Doug Jarvis, Bob Gainey and Jim Roberts. This line held the high-scoring Islanders' trio of Clark Gillies, Bryan Trottier and Billy Harris to one goal in five games.

"Look, I've got my ideas when I'm going to do," Bowman said Friday, "but I have to work them out in my practices before Sunday night."

Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero has indicated that Wayne Stephenson, who won the last four games against Boston, will open in the Flyer net tonight with perhaps Bernie Parent, the MVP of the last two playoffs, coming back for game two. Rick MacLeish, the high playoff scorer in each of the last two years, will be unavailable to the Flyers after undergoing left knee surgery.

"Montreal won't be easy," Shero said. "They like to win, so do we. Our secret is capacity for work."

Bjorn Tired of Losing

DALLAS (UPI) — Bjorn Borg first came to the World Championship of Tennis tournament two years ago as a mere sprite of 17 and surprisingly worked his way into the finals against John Newcombe. He lost.

Last year he was back and again reached the championship match after a thrilling five-set, four-hour win over Rod Laver. But he lost the title again—this time to Arthur Ashe.

Borg makes it clear that he is tired of losing in Dallas.

After his semifinal win over Harold Solomon Friday night, the normally soft spoken Swede let his voice rise a little when he said:

"I will try so hard on Sunday. I will try everything I can to win. And if I can play like I have been playing I think I will win."

But there is one not-so-small hurdle left before Borg captures his first WCT title and the $50,000 that goes with it.

Borg will meet Guillermo Vilas in the sixth annual WCT finals and in Vilas he will be facing not only a good friend but a carbon copy as far as style is concerned. The two players even look a little alike with the long hair and sweat-band.

And there is no mistaking that Vilas is going to be a determined individual as well in his first WCT title match.

"This time I'll be well prepared."

The championship will bring together two advocates of the baseline with Borg having the better volleys of the two. They have met 11 times in tournament action and Borg has won seven.

But Borg and Vilas have seen each other a lot more than those 11 matches.

"We have practiced together almost every day for the past three years," said Vilas. "There is no reason not to practice before this final."

So the two players did, indeed, conduct a workout Saturday.

"The match is unusual in that we are both topspin players," said Vilas. "Neither of us play against other players who use topspin."

"I don't think about anything special when I play Bjorn, though, even if he is a friend. It is just that usually when we play it is in the semifinals or finals and it is a big match."

Other players have displayed excellent form during this prestigious tournament, Borg breezing past Eddie Dibbs and Solomon while Vilas has disposed of Bob Lutz and Dick Stockton. Both have expressed pleasure at the way they have been playing.

Despite knowing Borg's game so well because they practice together, Vilas said neither of the players had an advantage through the familiarity.

"We don't know how we are going to play the match until we get on the court," Vilas said. "If one player begins to do something one way then the other player adjusts."

"You just have to wait and see how it is going to come out."

DALLAS (UPI) — Harold Solomon dropped the first set on a 7-0 tiebreaker but came back to defeat Dick Stockton, 6-7, 6-3, 6-2, Saturday and take third place in the World Championship of Tennis tournament.

Solomon, who upset favored Arthur Ashe but lost to Sweden's Bjorn Borg in reaching the consolation match, won $10,000 for third place. Stockton, who downed Mexico's Raul Ramirez, then lost to Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, won $6,000.

Neff and Soutar Win Pro Mixed Doubles

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Steve Neff of Sarasota, Fla., and Judy Soutar of Kansas City, Mo., Saturday won the professional mixed doubles championship of the National Bowling Council 1976 Spectacular.

The Neff-Soutar duo defeated Mark Roth of New York and Vesna Grinfelds of San Francisco, Calif., 184-181, to win the $10,000 first prize.

Roth-Grinfelds earned $7,500 for second place in the nationally televised final round of the four-day tournament at the Myriad Convention Center, site of the recently-completed American Bowling Congress national tournament.

State champions Jack Lee of Enid, Okla., and Bobbie Wiener of Valley Stream, N.Y., captured the amateur crowns Saturday. Friday night the University of South Carolina won the men's collegiate title and the women's crown went to San Jose State.

Roth and Miss Grinfelds beat Larry Lamb of San Francisco and Patty Costello of Scranton, Pa., 226-199, to set up their showdown with Neff and Mrs. Soutar, the top qualifiers in the pro mixed doubles.

Miss Costello and Lamb defeated defending champions Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., and Betty Morris of Stockton, Calif., 258-174, in the first match of the final round Saturday. The Lamb-Costello pair wound up with $5,000 and the Anthony-Morris duo took home $3,500.

Thurmond Can Expect Long Day

BOSTON (UPI) — Nate Thurmond can expect a long, tiring afternoon Sunday when the Boston Celtics plan to take their attack down the middle in the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference championships against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Celtics, 111-99 winners in the first game of the series, won't say what they have in store for the Thurmond, the 34-year-old Cavs' center. Yet, they did less driving and more perimeter shooting in the opener.

"We still can make Thurmond work harder on defense," said Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn. "But if he's going to be playing Dave Cowens, you can be sure he'll have to work every minute he's out there."

"We're not going to just let him stand there in the middle and play defense. We'll make him work, the same way we made Kareem Abdul-Jabbar work two years ago," Cowens grinned.

In 1974, Boston wore down Abdul-Jabbar and the Milwaukee Bucks to take the NBA title in seven games.

Abdul-Jabbar just had turned 27 when the Bucks met Boston. Thurmond is nearly eight years older. The 6-foot-11 Thurmond is starting because front-liner Jim Chones is sidelined for the playoffs with a broken baby toe on his right foot.

Thurmond still thinks the Cavaliers can win. "It's not a matter of confidence; we have that," said the former San Francisco Warrior and Chicago Bulls center. "The important thing is we're a good team — we're in the final four. With Chones we'd probably win this series in five games."

The Cavs still could win the series in five games, but they must start with a victory Sunday.

Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch intends to play Thurmond less than the 39 minutes the veteran toiled Thursday night. Backup centers John Lambert and Luke Witte are expected to see more action.

The Cavs also plan to run more than they did in the opener and the quicker pace suits the younger centers more than Thurmond.

The Celtics, meanwhile, could be a step slower today because of three nagging injuries. Cowens suffered his second back spasm of the week on Friday. John Havlicek reported he was running "at about 80 per cent of my normal speed" because of a lingering foot injury and Jo Jo White is slowed by a bruised right knee.

One of the healthier Celtics, forward Paul Silas, said Boston would have to concentrate harder than it did Thursday when the Celtics frittered a 16-point lead before roaring to victory in the final period.

"We're going to have to put more pressure on them," said Silas, the first game hero with 21 points.

"I don't know if we thought we'd have it easy because Chones wasn't playing or whether we would have played it much differently if he was in there."

Quite a Catch!

In DCSL Baseball

Sawyers Edge Beacon

SAUGERTIES—Saugerties High clung to an early baseball lead Friday afternoon and rode it out to a 4-3 victory against visiting Beacon.

The win extends the Sawyers' diamond record to 9-1 this season and the evenly spread batting strength against Beacon sustained Saugerties in its bid to retain the lead in the Dutchess County Scholastic League.

Kingston High's scheduled game against Poughkeepsie was rained out and slated for next Tuesday in other DCSL

The Sawyers broke the deadlock Friday in the second inning as Joe Maines tripled to drive in one run. Rick Olson tripled to drive in another, and winning pitcher John Maurer singled for the third run batted in. They added the clincher in the fifth on an RBI single by Jeff Levine.

Mauro fanned five and walked two, giving up six hits and hit two batters. For Beacon, Ferrone pitched the first two innings and took a rest while Musacchio hurled two, then returned to the mound in the fifth inning to take the loss.

Saugerties visits John Jay Monday.

Questions Dot NBA West

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Neither coach Al Attles of Golden State nor John MacLeod of Phoenix is sure what to expect in this afternoon's fourth game of the NBA Western Conference finals.

Phoenix played terribly and lost by 25 points in the opening game. Golden State let down and lost the second by seven and neither coach was particularly impressed with his team's play in the third game, won by the Warriors 99-91.

"We played a quarter and a half of basketball," Attles said after his defending champions took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series Friday night. "We finally got things going in the middle of the third quarter after six quarters-plus of not playing well. But all we've done is regain the home court advantage that we started with and lost in the split of the first two games."

MacLeod, whose team suffered its first home loss in 15 games Friday, admitted the Suns lost their composure after a 53-48 halftime lead, but praised Golden State's defense.

"Give their defense credit," he said. "We tried to force the ball inside more than we should have and made some mistakes at a crucial time, but their defense was doing a terrific job."

Attles promised the Warriors were going to work on their rebounding after getting beaten on the boards 52-39, with both centers — Clifford Ray and George Johnson — getting shut out the first half.

"When you get beat on the boards, especially by that margin, you usually lose the game. We were very fortunate to win. Rebounding is something we're going to have to work on," said Attles.

Another question today is whether the Warriors' Rick Barry will regain his hot hand. The veteran forward got 38 and 44 points in the first two games, but managed only 12 points in the third game on six of 17 field goal attempts.

After today's game, the series returns to Oakland Wednesday night.

UCAL Baseball Roundup

Wallkill Turns Tables on Dukes

KINGSTON — After suffering through a couple of frustrating losses, Wallkill High's baseball team turned the tables around Friday to nip UCAL foe Marlboro, 9-8 in a come from behind, extra inning thriller.

In other UCAL action, Rondout topped Liberty, 6-2, Onteora beat Ellenville, 7-3, Pine Bush stopped Fallsburgh, 5-0. Highland's game at Red Hook was rained out and was reset for Tuesday. Also postponed was Coleman-New Paltz.

Marlboro coach Neil Fino tells his tale of woe: "We were ahead 8-5 going into the seventh, and we had two outs. (Bob) Egan then hit a grounder to third. That should have been the third out, but the throw was bad."

Wallkill's Scott Wilson then worked reliever Randy Baglieri for a walk, and Guy Jollie followed with a three-run homer that tied the game.

The Panthers weren't about to let this one slip away. They held the Dukes in the bottom of the seventh and scored the winner in the eighth on Steve Caswell's double and Greg Palen's RBI single.

Marlboro had a chance to force another inning, putting a runner on third with only one out in the last of the eighth. He died there, however, as winner Bob Lee stopped the contest with two big strikeouts.

Wallkill had taken a 4-1 lead after three innings, but the Dukes were just getting started. They knocked Panther Harry Collier around for five runs in the fourth with the big blow a three-run homer by Dave Onusko.

Neither Rondout nor Liberty had much of a day at the plate — there were only seven singles in the game — but the Ganders didn't care. They scored three times in the first with the help of only one hit, and that was all Paris Perry needed to top the Redskins.

A hit batsman, a walk and an infield out put Ganders on second and third. They both scored when Jeff Debrosky's roller in front of the plate was throw away by Liberty catcher Tom McDermott. Perry contributed a single in the inning that chased Debrosky home. Perry gave up solo runs in the third and sixth but went the distance allowing only three hits. Kevin Atkins started and took the loss for Liberty.

Onteora's defense was a little slow getting itself together, and by the halfway point of the third inning the Ellies had a 3-0 lead.

The Blue Devils, though, returned the favor in the home third, enabling OCS to stage a three-run rally on just two hits. It was then an even game between Indian starter Glen Every and Ellie reliever Tony Sanchez.

Even until the fifth, that is. Rich Rogaski drilled one of his three hits to start things off, then Anthony Turk took off on a Sanchez serve for a two-run homer that gave the Indians the victory.

Every needed a little help from Tom Wells for the decision as the pair combined for a four-hitter.

Bushman Bob Foote fired a one-hitter at Fallsburgh and that topped a three-hitter by

Ellies Upset Coleman Golfers

ELLENVILLE—Ellenville High golfers were six strokes better than the top four from Coleman Friday to topple the Kingston team from the ranks of the undefeated in UCAL play.

The 172-178 win at Shawangunk Country Club placed both teams' records at 4-1 thus far. New Paltz advanced to a 3-1 record Friday with an easy 177-267 win against Fallsburgh at Huguenot Manor.

Leading a consistent Ellenville field was J.B. Gillette's 40, followed by three 44's by Rob Deutsch, Bruce Tennenbaum, and Mayer Scher. Howard Shambo had a 40 for Coleman, followed by Brian Smith, 43; Brian Crosswell, 44; and Mike Murphy, 51.

New Paltz medalist Rich Siegal outpaced the field with a 37, followed by teammates Todd Krieg at 44, John Ferrante and John Schulte, each with a 48. Fallsburgh scores: Martin Billig, 56; Aaron Salovin, 58; Barry Diginsky, 74; Cath Dill, 79.

In a match at Stony Ford, Pine Bush suffered a 195-205 loss at the hands of visiting Red Hook. For Red Hook, Bob Skelly fired a 46, Gary Saltas a 49, William Abela a 50, and Tom Skelly a 50.

Pine Bush was led by Mark Swenson with 49. Dennis Fries had a 51, Greg Wasiluk a 52, and Wayne Mosher a 53.

Red Hook is 2-3, Pine Bush is 1-4.

Superdome Executive Director Resigns

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Superdome executive director Ben Levy resigned Saturday, saying constant criticism of his management of the $163.5 million arena made his job less than enjoyable the past two years.

The resignation followed by two weeks a study published by the Arthur D. Little consulting firm strongly attacking management of the debt-ridden and problem-plagued facility. The Little study called management inexperienced and indecisive.

"The atmosphere that has permeated this employment for the past two years has been considerably less than enjoyable," said Levy, who began work at the dome in 1971 as director of construction and administration.

What does a Rolls Royce have in common with a Paddock Gunite Pool?

Several things. Beginning with superb craftsmanship. Both are built to last a lifetime. In fact, we guarantee the structural soundness of any Paddock Gunite Pool for as long as you own it, and we have 55 years of corporate reliability to back up that guarantee.

As with the Rolls, in the world of motor cars, integrity, experience and impeccable workmanship have made Paddock the most respected name in the swimming pool industry. In addition to the construction of more than 70,000 residential swimming pools, Paddock's list of commercial installations reads like a Who's Who of universities, colleges, high schools, hotels, motels, apartment complexes, municipalities and military facilities.

Any individual who enjoys the classic lines of a Rolls, is sure to appreciate the elegant beauty of a swimming pool by Paddock. There is, however, one point which we do not share in common with the world-famous Rolls Royce. Because of the versatility of the Gunite process, your Paddock Pool is custom designed and site-engineered for you. The exact size, shape and depth of your Paddock Pool is determined by the terrain of the swimming pool's location, your family's needs, and your own personal taste.

What does a Rolls Royce have in common with a Paddock Gunite Pool? In a word—excellence.

Thurmond Can Expect Long Day

BOSTON (UPI) — Nate Thurmond can expect a long, tiring afternoon Sunday when the Boston Celtics plan to take their attack down the middle in the second game of the NBA Eastern Conference championships against the Cleveland Cavaliers.

The Celtics, 111-99 winners in the first game of the series, won't say what they have in store for the Thurmond, the 34-year-old Cavs' center. Yet, they did less driving and more perimeter shooting in the opener.

"We still can make Thurmond work harder on defense," said Boston Coach Tom Heinsohn. "But if he's going to be playing Dave Cowens, you can be sure he'll have to work every minute he's out there."

"We're not going to just let him stand there in the middle and play defense. We'll make him work, the same way we made Kareem Abdul-Jabbar work two years ago," Cowens grinned.

In 1974, Boston wore down Abdul-Jabbar and the Milwaukee Bucks to take the NBA title in seven games.

Abdul-Jabbar just had turned 27 when the Bucks met Boston. Thurmond is nearly eight years older. The 6-foot-11 Thurmond is starting because front-liner Jim Chones is sidelined for the playoffs with a broken baby toe on his right foot.

Thurmond still thinks the Cavaliers can win. "It's not a matter of confidence; we have that," said the former San Francisco Warrior and Chicago Bulls center. "The important thing is we're a good team — we're in the final four. With Chones we'd probably win this series in five games."

The Cavs still could win the series in five games, but they must start with a victory Sunday.

Cleveland Coach Bill Fitch intends to play Thurmond less than the 39 minutes the veteran toiled Thursday night. Backup centers John Lambert and Luke Witte are expected to see more action.

The Cavs also plan to run more than they did in the opener and the quicker pace suits the younger centers more than Thurmond.

The Celtics, meanwhile, could be a step slower today because of three nagging injuries. Cowens suffered his second back spasm of the week on Friday, John Havlicek reported he was running "at about 80 per cent of my normal speed" because of a lingering foot injury and Jo Jo White is slowed by a bruised right knee.

One of the healthier Celtics, forward Paul Silas, said Boston would have to concentrate harder than it did Thursday when the Celtics frittered a 16-point lead before roaring to victory in the final period.

"We're going to have to put more pressure on them," said Silas, the first game hero with 21 points.

"I don't know if we thought we'd have it easy because Chones wasn't playing or whether we would have played it much differently if he was in there.

Quite a Catch!

In DCSL Baseball

Sawyers Edge Beacon

SAUGERTIES—Saugerties High clung to an early baseball lead Friday afternoon and rode it out to a 4-3 victory against visiting Beacon.

The win extends the Sawyers' diamond record to 9-1 this season and the evenly spread batting strength against Beacon sustained Saugerties in its bid to retain the lead in the Dutchess County Scholastic League.

Kingston High's scheduled game against Poughkeepsie was rained out and slated for next Tuesday in other DCSL action. The Sawyers broke the deadlock Friday in the second inning as Joe Maines tripled to drive in one run, Rick Olson tripled to drive in another, and winning pitcher John Mauro singled for the third run batted in. They added the clincher in the fifth on an RBI single by Jeff Levine.

Mauro fanned five and walked two, giving up six hits and hit two batters. For Beacon, Ferrone pitched the first two innings and took a rest while Musacchio hurled two, then returned to the mound in the fifth inning to take the loss.

Saugerties visits John Jay Monday.

Questions Dot NBA West

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Neither coach Al Attles of Golden State nor John MacLeod of Phoenix is sure what to expect in this afternoon's fourth game of the NBA Western Conference finals.

Phoenix played terribly and lost by 25 points in the opening game, Golden State let down and lost the second by seven and neither coach was particularly impressed with his team's play in the third game, won by the Warriors 99-91.

"We played a quarter and a half of basketball," Attles said after his defending champions took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven series Friday night. "We finally got things going in the middle of the third quarter after six quarters-plus of not playing well. But all we've done is regain the home court advantage that we started with and lost in the split of the first two games."

MacLeod, whose team suffered its first home loss in 15 games Friday, admitted the Suns lost their composure after a 53-48 halftime lead, but praised Golden State's defense.

"Give their defense credit," he said. "We tried to force the ball inside more than we should have and made some mistakes at a crucial time, but their defense was doing a terrific job."

Attles promised the Warriors were going to work on their rebounding after getting beaten on the boards 52-39, with both centers — Clifford Ray and George Johnson — getting shut out the first half.

"When you get beat on the boards, especially by that margin, you usually lose the game. We were very fortunate to win. Rebounding is something we're going to have to work on," said Attles.

Another question today is whether the Warriors' Rick Barry will regain his hot hand. The veteran forward got 38 and 44 points in the first two games, but managed only 12 points in the third game on six of 17 field goal attempts.

After today's game, the series returns to Oakland Wednesday night.

Wallkill Turns Tables on Dukes

KINGSTON — After suffering through a couple of frustrating losses, Wallkill High's baseball team turned the tables around Friday to nip UCAL foe Marlboro, 9-8 in a come from behind, extra inning thriller.

In other UCAL action, Rondout topped Liberty, 6-2, Onteora beat Ellenville, 7-3, Pine Bush stopped Fallsburgh, 5-0

Highland's game at Red Hook was rained out and was reset for Tuesday. Also postponed was Coleman-New Paltz.

Marlboro coach Neil Fino tells his tale of woe: "We were ahead 8-5 going into the seventh, and we had two outs. (Bob) Egan then hit a grounder to third. That should have been the third out, but the throw was bad."

Wallkill's Scott Wilson then worked reliever Randy Baglieri for a walk, and Guy Jollie followed with a three-run homer that tied the game.

The Panthers weren't about to let this one slip away. They held the Dukes in the bottom of the seventh and scored the winner in the eighth on Steve Caswell's double and Greg Palen's RBI single.

Marlboro had a chance to force another inning, putting a runner on third with only one out in the last of the eighth. He died there, however, as winner Bob Lee stopped the contest with two big strikeouts.

Wallkill had taken a 4-1 lead after three innings, but the Dukes were just getting started. They knocked Panther Harry Collier around for five runs in the fourth with the big blow a three-run homer by Dave Onusko.

Neither Rondout nor Liberty had much of a day at the plate — there were only seven singles in the game — but the Ganders didn't care. They scored three times in the first with the help of only one hit, and that was all Paris Perry needed to top the Redskins.

A hit batsman, a walk and an infield out put Ganders on second and third. They both scored when Jeff Debrosky's roller in front of the plate was cision as the pair combined for a four-hitter.

Bushman Bob Foote fired a one-hitter at Fallsburgh and that topped a three-hitter by

Ellies Upset Coleman Golfers

ELLENVILLE—Ellenville High golfers were six strokes better than the top four from Coleman Friday to topple the Kingston team from the ranks of the undefeated in UCAL play.

The 172-178 win at Shawangunk Country Club placed both teams' records at 4-1 thus far. New Paltz advanced to a 3-1 record Friday with an easy 177-267 win against Fallsburgh at Huguenot Manor.

Leading a consistent Ellenville field was J.B. Gillette's 40, followed by three 44's by Rob Deutsch, Bruce Tennenbaum, and Mayer Scher. Howard Shambo had a 40 for Coleman, followed by Brian Smith, 43; Brian Crosswell, 44; and Mike Murphy, 51.

Superdome Executive Director Resigns

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Superdome executive director Ben Levy resigned Saturday, saying constant criticism of his management of the $163.5 million arena made his job less than enjoyable the past two years.

The resignation followed by two weeks a study published by the Arthur D. Little consulting firm strongly attacking management of the debt-ridden and problem-plagued facility. The Little study called management inexperienced and indecisive.

"The atmosphere that has pervaded this employment for the past two years has been considerably less than enjoyable," said Levy, who began work at the dome in 1971 as director of construction and administration.

Suzy Chaffee's Free-Style Life Style

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Listen, a female jock like Suzy Chaffee doesn't live by sport alone.

She's involved in all these other things like yoga and modeling and astrology and, heh, heh, body consciousness. And all your sciences of the mind.

Then there's broadcasting, specifically CBS television's Challenge of the Sexes, a 10-week series that just ended where female athletes slugged it out against male athletes because, you know, "competing with men is more fun, like doing business with men." Suzy was the co-moderator with Vin Scully.

She's really something. A long, lovely body topped with blonde hair and a mind that just keeps chugging away.

Right there in the middle of this interview that took place in the upper reaches of CBS' dark gray monolith in Manhattan, she said, "The only cure for cancer is sports and nutrition."

It came up while Suzy was talking about how important sports are to the body. Like any good athlete, she has great respect for hers and that was one of the reasons she posed nude on skis for a spread Town and Country did on her awhile back.

"It was my idea," she says. "This country is behind Europe in raising the consciousness about the body. We have a kind of Victorian outlook. Now your body reflects on your nutrition and the way you think of yourself and you know," and here she laughed the way they do on the Tonight Show, "you have to take your clothes off and look at it because if you camouflage it, you're kind of lying to yourself."

At this point, the door of the small cluttered office opened and what must have been a CBS employee came in. A nice young man, obviously taken with Suzy, and they got to making jokes about the picture which Suzy told him about and the importance of body consciousness and such.

Finally, he left and Suzy said she had taken up modeling in 1968 "to prove that female jocks can be feminine."

She'd been a competitive skier since the age of six. She was reared in Vermont and her mother had been an Olympic skier, so it seemed logical, as she says, that "at twenty-one, I was one of the best downhillers in the world."

That, too, was in 1968 and she went to the Olympics as captain of America's ski team. But the damndest thing, she didn't win a medal. "You have to put wax on the bottom of the skis and the Europeans spent hours researching this, but the American coaches just guessed, I didn't win a medal because my skis weren't correctly waxed."

But, you know out of bad oftentimes comes good. "As a result of not winning a medal," she says, "I still had the fire in me so I invented this free-style thing that I'm still competing in."

As a matter of fact, a segment of Challenge of the Sexes featured Suzy competing against Robert Young (not the actor) in free-style which is kind of like acrobatics and ballet all together. She didn't win there either, but it wasn't her fault.

"Free style is only five years old and the judging is still to be developed. In skating you have enlightened political judges, but we have sincerely unenlightened judges."

You can count on Suzy to be outspoken and daring. But then she believes in taking risks, she says, because "high risk sports I think make you much more in harmony with yourself and nature. Until you face death and risk, you don't use all of your potential."

The way she trains for those sports, besides working on the trampoline and skiing four or five times a week, is through "mind development and yoga."

Now, for those of you who think mind development has something to do with meditation, Suzy says it doesn't. She says, "I've had different gurus along the way. The guy who ran Mount Snow got me into mind development which is studying the most advanced teachings of the mind. Like in the est (Erhard Seminar Training) program, you have your Buddhism and your scientology. It's like taking the best of the gurus."

That's quite a lot to digest, to be sure, so if she doesn't come right out and say what all she has gotten out of these teachings, it's understandable. Actually, what she said was, "One of the basic things is disciplining yourself to be positive. I was a very positive person originally. I just had to develop myself and keep on developing."

Who can argue with that? She's just going to go on arguing for equality in sports, and the importance of good nutrition and fresh fruit and, heh, heh, body consciousness, and she and a partner are going to come out with these T-shirts that have Suzy's calligraphy on the bottom and that nude picture of her on skis on top.

"I think beauty, of course, comes from the inside, but your looks are a manifestation of your outlook on life," she says in conclusion. "My brother and I used to look like twins. I had more of an open philosophy of life than he did and we ended up looking quite different."

See, and you thought all female jocks knew about was sports.

Bold Forbes vs. Honest Pleasure, Part II

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure continue their duel next Saturday in the 101st running of the Preakness and they will have the Pimlico track almost to themselves.

The head-to-head duel down the stretch at Churchill Downs convinced most owners and trainers to allow E. Rodriguez Tizio's Bold Forbes and Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure to fight their war in private.

The only certain addition to the field is Harbor View Farm's Life's Hope, who is trained by Laz Barrera and thus will run as an entry with Bold Forbes.

Other possible starters are Eugene Cashman's Elocutionist, who finished third in the Derby, and Entremont's Cojak, the sixth-place finisher.

The winner of the Withers, staged Saturday at Belmont Park, also may get a shot at the Preakness. The leading contenders in the Withers were Sonkisser, Full Out and Dance Spell, who would have to be supplemented to run in the $160,000-added Preakness.

Jockey Angel Cordero took Bold Forbes, his Puerto Rican Rolls Royce, right to the front in the Derby and then held off a challenge by Braulio Baeza and 2-5 favorite Honest Pleasure to win the Derby by a length, with the rest of the field of nine never in contention.

The ability of the 3-year-old son of Irish Castle-Comely Nell to endure the 1 1/4-mile Derby distance indicates the 1 3/4

16thmile Preakness will be a wire-to-wire match race between Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure.

Although trainer LeRoy Jolley and Baeza did not get along like lifelong buddies prior to the Derby, the Panamanian again will have the mount on Honest Pleasure, who was the first odd-on Derby favorite since Native Dancer in 1953 and met with a similar lack of success.

Life's Hope, second in the Hollywood Park Derby, won the Illinois Derby at Sportsman's Park by 5 1/2 lengths on the same day as the Kentucky Derby as Barrera enjoyed possibly the most successful day in racing history, also sending out Due Diligence to win the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct. Life's Hope will be ridden in the Preakness by Sandy Hawley.

Elocutionist's trainer Paul Adwell said last Sunday his Arkansas Derby winner would run in the Preakness, but owner and trainer are now considering the Hawthorne Derby or the Jersey Derby as more practical targets.

Cojak's trainer Sonny Hine was not particularly enthused about tangling with Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure again, but the 3-year-old colt is stable at Pimlico and may be drawn into the Preakness by the small field.

The last time as few as six horses ran in the Preakness was in 1973 as Secretariat convinced his competition to look elsewhere for purse money.

In Citation's Triple Crown year of 1948, only four horses went to the post in the Preakness.

Suzy Chaffee's Free-Style Life Style

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Listen, a female jock like Suzy Chaffee doesn't live by sport alone.

She's involved in all these other things like yoga and modeling and astrology and, heh, heh, body consciousness. And all your sciences of the mind.

Then there's broadcasting, specifically CBS television's Challenge of the Sexes, a 10-week series that just ended where female athletes slugged it out against male athletes because, you know, "competing with men is more fun, like doing business with men." Suzy was the co-moderator with Vin Scully.

She's really something. A long, lovely body topped with blonde hair and a mind that just keeps chugging away. Right there in the middle of this interview that took place in the upper reaches of CBS' dark gray monolith in Manhattan, she said, "The only cure for cancer is sports and nutrition."

It came up while Suzy was talking about how important sports are to the body. Like any good athlete, she has great respect for hers and that was one of the reasons she posed nude on skis for a spread Town and Country did on her awhile back.

"It was my idea," she says. "This country is behind Europe in raising the consciousness about the body. We have a kind of Victorian outlook. Now your body reflects on your nutrition and the way you think of yourself and you know," and here she laughed the way they do on the Tonight Show, "you have to take your clothes off and look at it because if you camouflage it, you're kind of lying to yourself."

At this point, the door of the small cluttered office opened and what must have been a CBS employee came in. A nice young man, obviously taken with Suzy, and they got to making jokes about the picture which Suzy told him about and the importance of body consciousness and such.

Finally, he left and Suzy said she had taken up modeling in 1968 "to prove that female jocks can be feminine."

That, too, was in 1968 and she went to the Olympics as captain of America's ski team. But the darndest thing, she didn't win a medal. "You have to put wax on the bottom of the skis and the Europeans spent hours researching this, but the American coaches just guessed. I didn't win a medal

But, you know out of bad oft-times comes good. "As a result of not winning a medal," she says, "I still had the fire in me so I invented this free-style thing that I'm still competing in."

As a matter of fact, a segment of Challenge of the Sexes featured Suzy competing against Robert Young (not the actor) in free-style which is kind of like acrobatics and ballet all together. She didn't win there either, but it wasn't her fault.

"Free style is only five years old and the judging is still to be developed. In skating you have enlightened political judges, but we have sincerely unenlightened judges."

You can count on Suzy to be outspoken and daring. But then she believes in taking risks, she says, because "high risk sports I think make you much more in harmony with yourself and nature. Until you face death and risk, you don't use all of your potential."

The way she trains for those sports, besides working on the trampoline and skiing four or five times a week, is through "mind development and yoga."

Now, for those of you who think mind development has something to do with meditation, Suzy says it doesn't. She says, "I've had different gurus along the way. The guy who ran Mount Snow got me into mind development which is studying the most advanced teachings of the mind. Like in the est (Erhard Seminar Training) program, you have your Buddhism and your scientology. It's like taking the best of the gurus."

That's quite a lot to digest, to be sure, so if she doesn't come right out and say what all she has gotten out of these teachings, it's understandable. Actually, what she said was, "One of the basic things is disciplining yourself to be positive. I was a very positive person originally. I just had to develop myself and keep on developing."

Who can argue with that? She's just going to go on arguing for equality in sports, and the importance of good nutrition and fresh fruit and, heh, heh, body consciousness, and she and a partner are going to come out with these T-shirts that have Suzy's calligraphy on the bottom and that nude picture of her on skis on top.

"I think beauty, of course, comes from the inside, but your looks are a manifestation of your outlook on life," she says in conclusion. "My brother and I used to look like twins. I had more of an open philosophy of life than he did and we ended up looking quite different."

See, and you thought all female jocks knew about was sports.

Bold Forbes vs. Honest Pleasure, Part II

NEW YORK (UPI) — Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure continue their duel next Saturday in the 101st running of the Preakness and they will have the Pimlico track almost to themselves.

The head-to-head duel down the stretch at Churchill Downs convinced most owners and trainers to allow E. Rodriguez Tizol's Bold Forbes and Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure to fight their war in private.

The only certain addition to the field is Harbor View Farm's Life's Hope, who is trained by Laz Barrera and thus will run as an entry with Bold Forbes.

Other possible starters are Eugene Cashman's Elocutionist, who finished third in the Derby, and Entremont's Cojak, the sixth-place finisher.

The winner of the Withers, staged Saturday at Belmont Park, also may get a shot at the Preakness. The leading contenders in the Withers were Sonkisser, Full Out and Dance Spell, who would have to be supplemented to run in the $150,000-added Preakness.

Jockey Angel Cordero took Bold Forbes, his Puerto Rican Rolls Royce, right to the front in the Derby and then held off a challenge by Braulio Baeza and 2-5 favorite Honest Pleasure to win the Derby by a length, with the rest of the field of nine never in contention.

The ability of the 3-year-old son of Irish Castle-Comely Nell to endure the 1-1/4-mile Derby distance indicates the 1 3-

16thmile Preakness will be a wire-to-wire match race between Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure.

Although trainer LeRoy Jolley and Baeza did not get along like lifelong buddies prior to the Derby, the Panamanian giant will have the mount on Honest Pleasure, who was the first oddson Derby favorite since Native Dancer in 1953 and met with a similar lack of success.

Life's Hope, second in the Hollywood Park Derby, won the Illinois Derby at Sportsman's Park by 5-1/2 lengths on the same day as the Kentucky Derby as Barrera enjoyed possibly the most successful day in racing history, also sending out Due Diligence to win the Carter Handicap at Aqueduct. Life's Hope will be ridden in the Preakness by Sandy Hawley.

Elocutionist's trainer Paul Adwell said last Sunday his Arkansas Derby winner would run in the Preakness, but owner and trainer are now considering the Hawthorne Derby or the Jersey Derby as more practical targets.

Cojak's trainer Sonny Hine was not particularly enthused about tangling with Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure again, but the 3-year-old colt is stabled at Pimlico and may be drawn into the Preakness by the small field.

The last time as few as six horses ran in the Preakness was in 1973 as Secretariat convinced his competition to look elsewhere for purse money.

In Citation's Triple Crown year of 1948, only four horses went to the post in the Preakness.

New Paltz Netmen Blank Bard

NEW PALTZ — The New Paltz State tennis team upped its record to 7-2 Thursday with a 9-0 whitewash of visiting Bard College.

The Hawks swept through the singles losing only one set in six matches. Ray Coopersmith topped Jeff Vahanian, 6-2, 6-1, Mark Chace whipped Nelson Anthoine, 6-3, 6-3, Ron Kleinberg defeated Dan Joseph, 6-0, 7-5, Ken McGrady downed John Sypek, 5-7, 6-3, 6-2, Dave Brenner defeated Dave Segarnick, 6-1, 7-5 and Scott Rosmarin blanked Aladio Abieu, 6-0, 6-0.

"We had it won in the singles so we had a chance to give our rookies some work in the doubles," said NPS coach Bob Durkin.

The rookies, Bob Finklestein, Mike Benowicz, Mike McQuade and Jim Dullaghan, pulled out three set wins in second and third doubles. Finklestein and Benowicz beat Joseph and Sypek, 1-6, 6-4, 6-4, and McQuade and Dullaghan downed Segarnick and Abieu, 3-6, 6-3, 6-2.

In the first doubles, Coopersmith and Kleinberg were 6-0, 6-2 winners over Vahanian and Anthoine.

The Hawks were rained out of their Friday contest with Nyack. New Paltz will attempt to make that up along with previous postponements with Oneonta St. and East Stroudsburg sometime this week.

Saugerties Outlasts Spackenkill, 3-2

SPACKENKILL—A 3-2 tennis win Friday against Spackenkill hinged on the results of an elongated doubles match for Saugerties that was won by Bob Carpenter and Paul Martin 16-14.

The Kingston-Lourdes match slated for Friday was postponed to May 18; the Tigers had dropped a 5-4 non-league squeaker to Newburgh Thursday, and are preparing to tangle with tough Hudson High, the pride of the Capital District, Tuesday.

At Spackenkill, the score was knotted at 2-2 with the home team taking two of three singles and the Sawyers one doubles and a singles match as Bob Carpenter and Paul Martin built up an 8-3 lead that dwindled to a 13-12 deficit, then came back to defeat Mark Emerick and Kate Blumberg 16-14.

Other scores: Daryl Johnson lost to Lee Jacobsen 12-10; Bob Vogel lost to Laura Carter 10-6; Ken Rumble beat Laura's twin sister Mary Carter 10-8; and Vince Lucenti and Pat Sheehan downed Stu Jacobsen and Jackie Corrigan 10-5.

Saugerties is 3-3 in the DCSL and 7-3 overall in tennis. Kingston is now 7-2.

Scores from Kingston's Thursday 5-4 loss to Newburgh: (K first)—Dan Ingalsbe lost to Bill Bouton 10-4; Kevin Boyd lost to Joel Finklestein 10-2; Joe Argulewicz beat Tony Sylvester 10-9; Jim Contino defeated Wes McWilliams 10-8; Rich Smith lost to Pete Leff 10-8; Matt Klein beat Bob McAndy 10-4; Boyd and Argulewicz lost to Sylvester and Finklestein 10-5; Contino and Garth Galyon lost to Bouton and McWilliams 10-6; and Smith and Klein defeated Mike Golden and Rene Venuti 10-1.

Saugerties also moved to a 3-3 league record, and is 6-3 overall on the links. Results, with Saugerties listed first: Steve Van Tassel 43, John Fine 40; Warren Yetter 43, John Hall 45; Jim Dalmadge 42, Scott Horowitz 48; Mark Negich 52, Phil Mylod 56; Jerry Mackey 45, Lenny Friedman 49; Pat Harder 52, Dave Graudeau 52.

Monday, Kingston is at Ketcham and Saugerties is at Jay.

Golf Wins for Kingston, Sawyer Teams

KINGSTON—High school golfers from both Kingston and Saugerties posted wins on home courses Friday, and both Ulster clubs in the DCSL evened their league records with the efforts.

Kingston "squeezed one through" against Arlington, said coach Floyd McCormick, winning 5 1/2 to 4 1/2; the Sawyers took a 7-3 decision at Sawyercrest CC, defeating Poughkeepsie.

A short but furious rain storm at Wiltwyck did not deter Kingston High golfers from outpointing Arlington 3 1/2 match points to 2 1/2 while each had two medal points.

The results, with Kingston scores first: Bob Allen 40, Jim Osborne 44; Todd Wonderly

46, Tim Lapin 47; John Antonetta 48, Jeff Buley 47; Gary LeConteur 45, Tony DeStefano 44; Jeff Schaller 51, Don Hicks 52; Greg Cherny 50, Rich Vale 47.

Saugerties also moved to a 3-3 league record, and is 6-3 overall on the links. Results, with Saugerties listed first: Steve Van Tassel 43, John Fine 40; Warren Yetter 43, John Hall 45; Jim Dalmadge 42, Scott Horowitz 48; Mark Negich 52, Phil Mylod 56; Jerry Mackey 45, Lenny Friedman 49; Pat Harder 52, Dave Graudeau 52.

Monday, Kingston is at Ketcham and Saugerties is at Jay.

Two Girls Crack RVLL Barrier

By Bea Havranek
Special Correspondent

ROSENDALE — Rondout Valley Little League, celebrating its 20th anniversary in this the nation's Bicentennial year, has marked its 1976 season by the inclusion of its first two female players in the previously all-male league.

The two girls making Rondout Valley history are Liisa Koola and Dawn McLean.

Ms. Koola, an arresting 12-year-old, was chosen by the Yankees in the first round of the player draft — that means she was manager Ed Garland's first pick from all the girls and boys in the player pool.

Liisa, says manager Garland, is a good hitter and consistent pitcher. When asked what made her tryout for "boys' league" instead of one exclusively for girls she says merely, "I just wanted to."

Dawn McLean is a nine-year-old right fielder for the Cubs. The control and ease she exercises over the ball gives one the impression that she is a "natural born" player.

One difference between Dawn and Liisa is the former's reason for trying out for the RVLL. Dawn became interested because her brother was on the Cubs' team.

What do the young men who play with and against the girls think? That question was best answered by a teammate of Liisa's who, nodding at her admiringly, said, "Watch her. Wouldn't you rather have her on your team than the team you're playing?"

One thing for sure: the organizers, supporters, managers and Littleleaguers at Rondout Valley are not only learning about baseball...but also about the true meaning of sportsmanship...or should that be sportspersonship?

Area Bowling Roundup

Balash, Carriage House Lead

KINGSTON — Carriage House won the championship of the Bowlerama Women's Major League with a 74-31 record. Second was Ulster Tool and Die Corporation, a distance seven and a half games behind.

Ulster Tool and Die did have the top team scores of the year with 594-1587.

Sis Balsh was the league's No. 1 kegler, averaging 172.32 for 79 games. Nosed out was Perla Bollin, who racked up a 171.25 average for 105 games. Perla had the high single for the season, a 235, while Sis' 613 was the best triple.

The City Minor title was won by Russano's Barber Shop by one game over Flamingo Restaurant. The champs posted a 67-38 record.

Jerry recorded — and get this — a 191.28431 average. That beat Ernie Cozza, who rolled at a 191.20202 pace. Whew.

Elsewhere, Keith Hamilton racked up a 658 triple in the Sunday Nited Mixed (Gold) Leagues off lines of 242-203-213. Jim DeCicco pressed him with a 200-217-223-640, and Joe Schrowang wasn't far behind with a 611.

Jerry Bruck showed his City Minor title wasn't a fluke by hitting a 648 three-bagger in the Catholic AA League. Skip Demand cracked a 656 Tavern Association triple as the Handlebar clinched that league's title with a four game bulge over Schryers.

Paul Trice had a 188 average in that league to capture seasonal honors.

The scores:

'Golf Pros Must Never Cease to Learn'

ALBANY — To the average golf club member, the home pro is all-knowing, a walking encyclopedia of information and a human computer with vast knowledge of the game stored in his memory bank.

It doesn't always turn out that way, said the National PGA's most prominent authority on the subject. He is William Strausbaugh, Jr., a national PGA vice president and head pro at Columbia Country Club near Washington, D.C.

In a hard hitting speech before the Northeastern New York PGA Section, Strausbaugh, a former Pro of the Year, warned the area pros that "he who dares to teach never ceases to learn."

"Sometimes we are not organized enough to impart knowledge to the player," Strausbaugh warned. "We must never cease to learn and being a professional is more than being a good will ambassador to every member. I frankly think we should throw the word pro out the window."

"In order to achieve excellence as a teacher, the golf professional must have three gifts," said Strausbaugh. He listed them as motivation, communication and coaching. "The pro must be a psychiatrist, language expert, doctor of muscles. He must avoid verbosity in communicating with the pupil and instill confidence in the player, then he can learn. "Playing golf is a skill, teaching golf is an art," said the former Horton Smith Award winner. "Golf can be an integral part of life, besides faith, family and position. How much enjoyment the member gets out of golf depends on how well we teach. We are the golf doctor."

The biggest credential a pro has is that he never uses too many words in presenting what Strausbaugh describes as the teaching triangle. He said there is not enough emphasis on the "methodology of the swing."

"Good players have gotten better over the years," he said, "but the rank and file has not shown much improvement. The most crucial point of the swing is the stretch toward the target, the aim and alignment."

Ninety-eight percent of the world's golfers play behind the club, said Strausbaugh. "The other two percent who have natural talent influence the club from the front during the swing. The untalented push rather than pull the club."

"Golf is the toughest game in the world," Strausbaugh concluded. "The fact that it is places greater responsibility on those of us who expect to teach it."

A 'Walk-on' Can Make It

WEST POINT — In an era of high pressure salesmanship for the "blue chip" athlete in football recruiting, Army defensive tackle Duane Fuller is proving a "walk-on" candidate can also find a spot when given the opportunity.

The 18-year-old plebe from Carlisle Barracks, Pa., finds himself in the thick of the battle for a starting berth this fall on Army's defensive unit. Just being considered for a starting spot certainly demonstrates a good deal of progress for a young man who played only one year of high school football, and that came in Germany.

When he first entered the Academy for summer training last July, Fuller felt he would give basketball or track a try since he had much more experience in those sports. He played basketball as a center for two years in high school and competed in track for three years in the 400 meters, hurdles, the high jump, shot put and discus events. At 6-foot-6 he had good size for both sports, but after two-week trials in those sports he switched to football. For Army coach Homer Smith, it may be a blessing in disguise.

"When I came to the Academy I wanted to go out for varsity sports to make sure I would get enough to eat," says Fuller with a smile. "When I began playing football I was only 200 pounds and I got pushed around a lot on the defensive line. But the coaches said I could gain a lot of weight, and I figured as long as I was having fun I would keep playing."

Fuller has now packed 230 pounds around his 6-6 frame and no longer concerns himself about being pushed around. He worked all during the winter on a weight training program and improved dramatically, bench pressing 285 pounds after starting at 200. Before the 1976 season begins, Fuller feels he will break 300 pounds in the bench press.

"Duane has all the tools to be an outstanding defensive lineman," says defensive line coach K.C. Scull. "What he has to learn is to react quicker and read his keys, but that will come with more experience."

Fuller saw limited duty at defensive tackle during the 1975 season. He made his initial appearance against Pittsburgh, trying to corral the fleet Tony Dorsett. He then played in the final three games against Boston College, Vanderbilt and Navy, turning in perhaps his best effort against Vanderbilt.

"I really didn't think I would be playing as much as I am," says the young defensive lineman. "I am trying to learn things and apply it at the same time, and trying to beat offensive linemen with five or six years of experience is a little frustrating at times."

Fuller's father, Lt. Col. Thomas Fuller, is presently at the U.S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks. He is a career officer with more than 29 years of service. He was completing a tour in Germany when his son first decided to play football at Wurzburg American High School. Fuller was a defensive tackle and tight end at Wurzburg, but has been used primarily on defense since coming to West Point.

An excellent student, Fuller is expected to do a little more concentrating on football from now on at West Point, and his unlimited potential certainly will be tested when Army opens its challenging 11-game schedule this fall.

Jordan May Return to Pats

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — If things go right for Shelby Jordan, the New England Patriots' offensive tackle now serving a federal prison term might be back in the lineup next fall.

He was sent to prison this week for selling cocaine to an undercover agent. But Chief Judge Raymond J. Pettine of U.S. District Court Friday set July 30 for review of a motion to reduce the sentence.

By that date, Jordan—the first pro football player sent to prison on a drug charge—will have served three months.

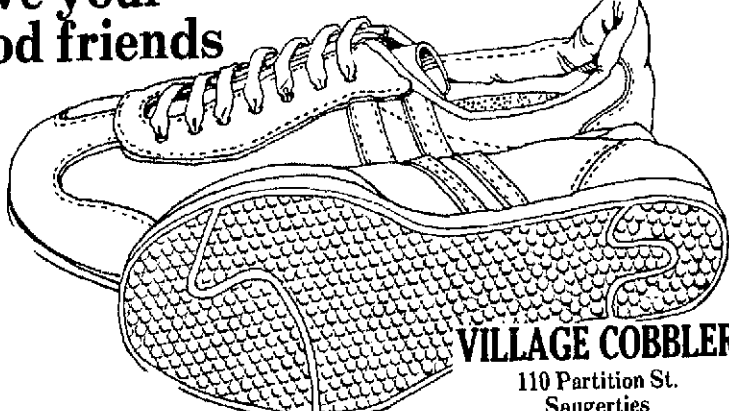

Jordan, 6-feet-7 and 280 pounds, was sentenced Monday to two years in prison. Pettine changed it Friday to a four-year "indeterminate" term under the Youth Corrections Act, saying the act requires a sentence of up to four years in jail.

Jordan, 23, can be released at any time on probation with the record of conviction automatically expunged. The act applies to selected persons between ages 18 and 25. It is aimed at erasing a criminal conviction which could otherwise endanger employment.

Liisa Koola

Dawn McLean

Two Girls Crack RVLL Barrier

By Bea Havranek
Special Correspondent

ROSENDALE — Rondout Valley Little League, celebrating its 20th anniversary in this the nation's Bicentennial year, has marked its 1976 season by the inclusion of its first two female players in the previously all-male league.

The two girls making Rondout Valley history are Liisa Koola and Dawn McLean.

Ms. Koola, an arresting 12-year-old, was chosen by the Yankees in the first round of the player draft — that means she was manager Ed Garland's first pick from all the girls and boys in the player pool.

Liisa, says manager Garland, is a good hitter and constant pitcher. When asked what made her tryout for "boys' league" instead of one exclusively for girls she says merely, "I just wanted to."

Dawn McLean is a nine-year-old right fielder for the Cubs. The control and ease she exercises over the ball gives one the impression that she is a "natural born" player.

One difference between Dawn and Liisa is the former's reason for trying out for the RVLL. Dawn became interested because her brother was on the Cubs' team.

What do the young men who play with and against the girls think? That question was best answered by a teammate of Liisa's who, nodding at her admiringly, said, "Watch her. Wouldn't you rather have her on your team than the the team you're playing?"

One thing for sure: the organizers, supporters, managers and Little Leagueers at Rondout Valley are not only learning about baseball...but also about the true meaning of sportsmanship...or should that be sportspersonship?

Area Bowling Roundup

Balash, Carriage House Lead

KINGSTON — Carriage House won the championship of the Bowlerama Women's Major League with a 74-31 record. Second was Ulster Tool and Die Corporation, a distance seven and a half games behind.

Ulster Tool and Die did have the top team scores of the year with 594-1587.

Sis Balash was the league's No. 1 kegger, averaging 172.32 for 79 games. Nosed out was Perla Bollin, who racked up a 171.25 average for 105 games. Perla had the high single for the season, a 235, while Sis' 613 was the best triple.

The City Minor title was won by Russano's Barber Shop by one game over Flamingo Restaurant. The champs posted a 67-38 record.

High average in the league belonged to Jerry Bruck, but he didn't exactly breeze to the honor.

Jerry recorded — and get this — a 191.28431 average. That beat Ernie Cozza, who rolled at a 191.20202 pace. Whew!

Elsewhere, Keith Hamilton racked up a 658 triple in the Sunday Nited Mixed (Gold) Leagues off lines of 242-203-213. Jim DeCicco pressed him with a 200-217-223-640, and Joe Schrowang wasn't far behind with a 611.

Jerry Bruck showed his City Minor title wasn't a fluke by hitting a 648 three-bagger in the Catholic AA League. Skip Demand cracked a 656 Tavern Association triple as the Handlebar clinched that league's title with a four game bulge over Schryers.

Paul Trice had a 188 average in that league to capture seasonal honors.

The scores:

Kingston Trust's Donald Reis and Joseph Tremper check out the Bank Key.

Bank Key: Electric Money

KINGSTON — The Kingston Trust Co., a member of First Commercial Banks Inc., will unveil its "Bank Key" in an exhibit at the Kingston Lions Exposition, which begins May 11.

This service has already been installed at about 50 merchants in the upstate area by First Commercial through its member banks in Syracuse and Albany.

William J. Stevens, president of Kingston Trust, said his bank had requested permission from the State Banking Department to install the system, known as an Electronic Funds Transfer System or EFTS, at a terminal in the Shop Rite Supermarket in Kingston. Stevens said Friday he thought the approval and subsequent installation would be forthcoming soon.

According to Stevens, the Bank Key service will operate through electronic terminals at store locations connected to the Upstate Computer Center in Utica. Bank Key customers will be able to make deposits or withdrawals from their checking accounts and pay for goods without writing checks.

The Bank Key will eliminate the need for stores to verify the customers' identification, thus saving both the store and customer inconvenience and delays. All Bank Key transactions are guaranteed to the store by The Bank.

Stevens said deposits can be made in the form of cash, checks, or a combination of the two.

Here, according to Stevens, is how the system works:

The Bank Key customer fills out a form describing what he wants — cash, payment of a purchase, or a deposit. He then gives this slip to the terminal attendant, who inserts the slip and a plastic Bank Key card into the banking terminal.

The attendant then instructs the customer to enter his password on a palm-sized electronic pad, looking like the keyboard of a touch-tone telephone. Only when the customer enters his correct, secret password does the transaction take place.

When the password is entered, the transaction takes place instantly, according to Stevens. The customer's checking account is charged or credited. The card and a receipt are given back, and the customer receives cash if that is what he wanted.

As a safeguard to privacy, the balance of the checking account is not available to the store clerk.

Hyatt (r) and Ms. Snowde

Hyatt Realtor of the Year

KINGSTON — Kenneth E. Hyatt, local Realtor was chosen by his organization as "Realtor of the Year" at a luncheon held recently at the Colonnade Restaurant. The award is given yearly to one who the Board of Realtors considers has been active and outstanding in contributing to the activities of the Real Estate Board and has been active in both the State and National Associations.

Hyatt has served on many committees of the local board, was president of the Multiple Listing Service for five years and has been Executive Officer for both organizations for the last three years. In presenting the award, Sylvia Snowden, recipient of the award last year, lauded the service rendered by Hyatt and wished him much success in the future.

Campers' Barn Opens

More Jobs From Pooling Technology

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Washington thought the greatest technological change the American economy needed was mules to replace draft horses; so he bred jackasses to sire mules.

Benjamin Franklin experimented a lot with electricity but his most practical technical achievement was a stove that got more heat out of wood.

Thomas Jefferson, who constantly preached intellectual enlightenment, also developed the first successful American-made oil lamp.

But the technological horizons of the young nation were narrow, indeed, and they didn't begin to expand until Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin and Robert Fulton built the first successful American steamboat.

The foregoing information comes from Dr. Arthur M. Bueche, General Electric's

vice-president for research, who recalled these facts in a speech dedicating the new laboratory for laser energetics at the University of Rochester.

About the same time, Chairman William C. Norris of Control Data Corp., Minneapolis, was addressing a news conference in Paris on the necessity for broadening the exchange of technology until it encompasses every nation and all kinds of companies, educational and scientific institutions and government agencies in a system of interlocking pools of data that can be retrieved instantaneously on computer terminals.

Norris said millions of new jobs can be created around the world by such a massive pooling of technology.

He said his company now has had some years of experience with a technology pool and recently has begun marketing one which it calls Technotec. "More than 50 organizations have contributed to the data stored in our computer or have searched the Technotec data base," he said.

Norris said there are at least one million computer terminals or teletype machines connected to computers in the world that can provide quick access to technological information stored in computers and pooled on national or global basis. "It isn't necessary to sell a lot of new equipment," he said.

The most important single goal, he said, should be to get small businesses involved in such pools "because history shows that small companies are better innovators than big companies."

Norris said his idea is needed now because "unemployment and underemployment pervade virtually every piece of the earth. . . . The most urgent need in the world today is more jobs."

But Norris said no country in the world, not even the United States and the Soviet Union, has sufficient resources to solve the problems on which the creation of jobs depends — energy, food, education, health care, transportation and raw materials.

The only solution, Norris

said, will be found in international pooling of technology and vertical pooling of technology from top to bottom in industry, government and the educational and scientific world.

He said it probably will come as a surprise to most Americans that there is relatively little transfer of technology from one industry to another or from government laboratories to industry in the modern world.

He said this must be changed if technology is to be used efficiently to create the jobs society must have.

Williams Lake In Mobil Guide

ROSENDALE — Williams Lake Hotel of Rosendale has been listed in the 1976 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide, one of the finest travel guidebooks available. This announcement was made today by Walter G. Williams, owner of the popular vacation resort.

Over 20,000 restaurants, hotels, motels and resorts are listed and rated on a one-to-five-star basis in the seven volume Mobil Travel Guide, which has been compared by travel experts to the famed Guide-Michelin.

To be listed in the Mobil Travel Guide, the establishment must be personally inspected by an impartial, trained inspector, who is employed by a completely independent organization. The inspector's findings are reported to an editorial board of the organization, which has instituted a set of standards for listings and ratings.

Each of the seven regional editions provides valuable information on local history, sightseeing, amusements, sports, and recreation facilities in addition to the star-rated food and lodging listings. Also included are regional road atlases and detailed maps of major cities, special auto-tour routes, and helpful advice to travelers.

The 1976 Mobil Travel Guide books are available at Mobil service stations, bookstores, magazine outlets, and other places where books and magazines are sold.

Medical Bills

While Americans are spending more on personal health care, they are getting increasing help in paying their bills. Medical spending leaped from $10.4 billion in 1950 to $103.2 billion in 1975. But between 1966 and 1975, the individual's share of the bill declined from a half to a third. The Conference Board notes. Taking up the slack were private insurance, which covered 25 per cent of total medical expenditures last year, and public funds, which accounted for 40 per cent.

Avis Backs Walker The Wizard

KINGSTON — The Kingston Lions Club Home and Sport show to be held May 14 at the Kingston Armory will feature a new Hudson Valley magic act. The new act features Walker - the Wizard of Avis, named after the now-famous "Wizard of Avis," a computer system developed for Avis-Rent-A-Car, and reported to be the most effective computer in use in the car rental field.

Peter Walker, Jr., a well known Hudson Valley Magician, who has had numerous stage and T.V. appearances, bases his act on tricks that are designed to baffle both adults and children alike.

Under the auspices of Avis, Walker the Wizard of Avis will be presenting magic shows to groups and for fund raising activities throughout the Hudson Valley.

COMMUNITY CONCERTS 1976-77 SERIES

to put music in your life!

BY POPULAR DEMAND!

So many subscribers begged for a return engagement of "THE YOUNG AMERICANS" . . .

So here they are back to do "THE MUSIC MAN" — one of the most joyous musicals to ever come out of Broadway!

It is funny, sentimental, nostalgic and filled with a tuneful, gay Meredith Wilson score.

Marianna Christos — SECOND PRIZE WINNER of the 1975 Met Auditions, this lovely young soprano is a Kingston resident and makes us doubly proud to present her in concert "One of the most sheerly lovely vocal sounds to be heard anywhere."

Under the patronage of their Serene Highnesses, Prince Rainier III and Princess Grace of Monaco, The Monte Carlo National Orchestra is called the "ARTISTIC AMBASSADOR OF THE PRINCIPALITY" after many tours of Europe and the U.S. and ecstatic critical acclaim. Andre-Michel Schub is their piano soloist.

KINGSTON — Kenneth E. Hyatt, local Realtor, was chosen by his organization as "Realtor of the Year" at a luncheon held recently at the Colonnade Restaurant. The award is given yearly to one who the Board of Realtors considers has been active and outstanding in contributing to the activities of the Real Estate Board and has been active in both the State and National Associations.

Hyatt has served on many committees of the local board, was president of the Multiple Listing Service for five years and has been Executive Officer for both organizations for the last three years. In presenting the award, Sylvia Snowden, recipient of the award last year, lauded the service rendered by Hyatt and wished him much success in the future.

Campers' Barn Opens

Ribbon cutting ceremonies for the Grand Opening of Campers' Barn of Kingston, at Routes 28 and 209, was held recently, with County Legislature Chairman Peter J. Savago doing the honors. Savago is flanked by Paul H. Johnson on his left, the vice president of Campers' Barn, and Ulster Town Supervisor Carmine Sabino, with Ross W. Johnson, Campers' Barn president and Thomas H. ## More Jobs From Pooling Technology

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Washington thought the greatest technological change the American economy needed was mules to replace draft horses; so he bred jackasses to sire mules.

Benjamin Franklin experimented a lot with electricity but his most practical technical achievement was a stove that got more heat out of wood.

Thomas Jefferson, who constantly preached intellectual enlightenment, also developed the first successful American-made oil lamp.

But the technological horizons of the young nation were narrow, indeed, and they didn't begin to expand until Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin and Robert Fulton built the first successful American steamboat.

The foregoing information comes from Dr. Arthur M. Bueche, General Electric's

vice-president for research, who recalled these facts in a speech dedicating the new laboratory for laser energetics at the University of Rochester.

About the same time, Chairman William C. Norris of Control Data Corp., Minneapolis, was addressing a news conference in Paris on the necessity for broadening the exchange of technology until it encompasses every nation and all kinds of companies, educational and scientific institutions and government agencies in a system of interlocking pools of data that can be retrieved instantaneously on computer terminals.

Norris said millions of new jobs can be created around the world by such a massive pooling of technology.

He said his company now has had some years of experience with a technology pool and recently has begun marketing one which it calls Technotec. "More than 50 organizations have contributed to the data stored in our computer or have searched the Technotec data base," he said.

Norris said there are at least one million computer terminals or teletype machines connected to computers in the world that can provide quick access to technological information stored in computers and pooled on national or global basis. "It isn't necessary to sell a lot of new equipment," he said.

The most important single goal, he said, should be to get small businesses involved in such pools "because history shows that small companies are better innovators than big companies."

Norris said his idea is needed now because "unemployment and underemployment pervade virtually every piece of the earth. . . . The most urgent need in the world today is more jobs."

But Norris said no country in the world, not even the United States and the Soviet Union, has sufficient resources to solve the problems on which the creation of jobs depends — energy, food, education, health care, transportation and raw materials.

The only solution, Norris

said, will be found in international pooling of technology and vertical pooling of technology from top to bottom in industry, government and the educational and scientific world.

He said it probably will come as a surprise to most Americans that there is relatively little transfer of technology from one industry to another or from government laboratories to industry in the modern world.

He said this must be changed if technology is to be used efficiently to create the jobs society must have.

Williams Lake In Mobil Guide

ROSENDALE — Williams Lake Hotel of Rosendale has been listed in the 1976 edition of the Mobil Travel Guide, one of the finest travel guidebooks available. This announcement was made today by Walter G. Williams, owner of the popular vacation resort.

Over 20,000 restaurants, hotels, motels and resorts are listed and rated on a one-to-five-star basis in the seven volume Mobil Travel Guide, which has been compared by travel experts to the famed Guide-Michelin.

To be listed in the Mobil Travel Guide, the establishment must be personally inspected by an impartial, trained inspector, who is employed by a completely independent organization. The inspector's findings are reported to an editorial board of the organization, which has instituted a set of standards for listings and ratings.

Each of the seven regional editions provides valuable information on local history, sightseeing, amusements, sports, and recreation facilities' in addition to the star-rated food and lodging listings. Also included are regional road atlases and detailed maps of major cities, special auto-tour routes, and helpful advice to travelers.

The 1976 Mobil Travel Guide books are available at Mobil service stations, bookstores, magazine outlets, and other places where books and magazines are sold.

Avis Backs Walker The Wizard

KINGSTON — The Kingston Lions Club Home and Sport show to be held May 14 at the Kingston Armory will feature a new Hudson Valley magic act. The new act features Walker - the Wizard of Avis, named after the now-famous "Wizard of Avis," a computer system developed for Avis-Rent-A-Car, and reported to be the most effective computer in use in the car rental field.

Peter Walker, Jr., a well known Hudson Valley Magician, who has had numerous stage and T.V. appearances, bases his act on tricks that are designed to baffle both adults and children alike.

Under the auspices of Avis, Walker the Wizard of Avis will be presenting magic shows to groups and for fund raising activities throughout the Hudson Valley.

MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my Mother
Mary Elizabeth Kolts

Wife of Frank Wm. Parslow, Sr.
On Mother's Day 1976

Dear Mom:
We had the best of times, We had the worst of times, I can't believe three years have passed since you went through Heaven's gate. Even though you suffered so much in life, I know within my heart that you found the peace and happiness you so richly deserved. Angels took your hand and led you to a little country cottage surrounded by gardens of roses you liked so well. There your blessed soul rests in eternal splendor and contentment. Pray for us who need guidance, that we may see the light. As I pursue life's goals, I find it's just not the same anymore. Your absence leaves a great void in those who knew and loved you well. Peace be with you.

All my love,
Daughter Ruth

Aldrin, Mills, Others Make Alcoholism Known

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former astronaut Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. acknowledged publicly Saturday that he became an alcoholic after his historic 1969 flight to the moon, and finally stopped drinking only last August.

Aldrin was among 52 public figures who appeared at a remarkable, emotion-filled news conference sponsored by the National Council on Alcoholism and identified themselves as recovered alcoholics.

Most of them — like Aldrin — stepped forward after months or years of anonymity. Their purpose, they said, was to help remove the stigma of alcoholism and show other victims — the NCA estimates them at 10 million Americans — that alcoholism is a treatable disease.

Others massed on three rows of flood lit bleacher seats in a Shoreham-American Hotel ballroom represented the spectrum of American society. They included Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., novelist Adela Rogers St. Johns, Edward "Moose" Krause, athletic director of Notre Dame University, Thomas J. Swafford, CBS television network vice president, and insurance firm president James S. Kemper Jr. of Chicago.

There were show business personalities — Garry Moore, Tom Ewell, Mercedes McCambridge, Dana Andrews, Guy Mitchell — business executives, a labor unionist, generals, clergymen, doctors, lawyers and an Indian chief — Sylvester J. Tinker of the Ojawa nation.

Aldrin, who joined Neil Armstrong as the first man to walk on the moon in July, 1969, during the Apollo 11 lunar mission, previously disclosed his post-flight battle against mental depression in a book, "Down to Earth."

But not until Saturday had Aldrin acknowledged the depression, which began in 1971, was accompanied by a drinking problem. He left the space program in June that year, and resigned as an Air Force colonel nine months later.

In an interview with UPI, Aldrin said he still had not realized when he wrote the book in 1973 that he was an alcoholic. He said his drinking became progressively worse until he was hospitalized Aug. 7, 1975, for four weeks of treatment. He said he hasn't taken a drink since that day.

Aldrin, 46, now is a research and engineering consultant living in Los Angeles with his second wife, Beverly whom he married in January.

"I have always been self-centered," he said. "I still am — more than I want to be. This is a danger."

Aldrin said alcoholism, like depression, "is disabling, it hurts, but it can be treated. Some day all this will come out publicly, and we can remove the stigma. Then we can say 'it's okay to be sick, so what can we do about it?'"

Carmakers' Big Push

DETROIT (UPI) — Domestic automakers will push production to a 30 month high in June and record assembles for the July September quarter will mean new jobs and continued overtime, the trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports says.

Barring a shutdown caused by the continuing United Rubber Workers strike against four major tire companies, the four U.S. automakers plan to build 864,000 cars in June as they close out the 1976 model year. That tops any month since November 1973, just as the Arab oil embargo was triggering a two year slump.

With General Motors, Ford and Chrysler already eliminating spare tires from many of the cars and light trucks they're shipping from as assembly plants the auto companies claim they'll be able to operate into June despite the URW strike, now almost three weeks old.

Higher third quarter plans for 1,823,000 cars finally will provide new jobs and a sharp slash in the number of workers still on layoff. From a high of 212,000 indefinitely idled workers in March, 1975, automakers have recalled all but 47,000 workers — still 6 percent of the blue collar labor force.

The July September production will be 10 percent above 1975 when automakers were gearing up for the 1976 model year that pulled them out of their two year slump and tying the record 1973 level.

Many of the additional workers will be needed by Chrysler, which Ward's said

Gov. Carey Takes Look At Old Sod

DUBLIN, Ireland (UPI) — New York Gov. Hugh Carey and 12 other American governors on a four-day bicentennial goodwill visit to the Irish Republic took a tourists' look at the ancient city of Dublin Friday.

The governors, representing the 13 states which broke with Britain 200 years ago, were invited by Premier Liam Cosgrave during his official visit to Washington last March. This year Ireland is celebrating the 60th anniversary of the Easter Rebellion against British rule.

Cosgrave hosted an official banquet for the governors Friday in the ornate dining room of Dublin Castle, once the nerve center of British rule in Ireland.

He reminded his American visitors of the debt the Irish people felt toward America.

"When the Irish people asserted their demand for nationhood and independence, they were given support and inspiration by the great state across the Atlantic," he said.

Cosgrave, in his toast, said the United States had always been a haven for the Irish.

"Through the darkest periods of Irish history, the American nation afforded comfort, shelter and a chance for a new life to millions of Irish," he said.

MIDAS

In looking at your future, take a look at our past.

In our 20-year history, we have grown to the largest and most successful chain of muffler shops in the country. Since 1960, our average shop retail volume has better than tripled to the present day $224,000. Between now and 1980 we expect volume to grow another 50%.

In order to maintain this outstanding growth trend and respond to our increasing share of today's automotive aftermarket we will expand even more vigorously in 1976. From 321 shops in 1960, we expanded to over 800 shops in 1975 and plan 100 more in 1976.

Aldrin, Mills, Others Make Alcoholism Known

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former astronaut Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. acknowledged publicly Saturday that he became an alcoholic after his historic 1969 flight to the moon, and finally stopped drinking only last August.

Aldrin was among 52 public figures who appeared at a remarkable, emotion-filled news conference sponsored by the National Council on Alcoholism and identified themselves as recovered alcoholics.

Most of them — like Aldrin — stepped forward after months or years of anonymity. Their purpose, they said, was to help remove the stigma of alcoholism and show other victims — the NCA estimates that at 10 million Americans — that alcoholism is a treatable disease.

Others massed on three rows of flood-lit bleacher seats in a Shoreham-Americana Hotel ballroom represented the spectrum of American society. They included Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark.; novelist Adela Rogers St. Johns; Edward "Moore" Krause, athletic director of Notre Dame University; Thomas J. Swafford, CBS television network vice president, and insurance firm president James S. Kemper Jr. of Chicago.

There were show business personalities — Garry Moore, Tom Ewell, Mercedes McCambridge, Dana An-draws, Guy Mitchell — business executives, a labor unionist, generals, clergymen, doctors, lawyers and an Indian chief — Sylvester J. Tinker of the Osage nation.

Aldrin, who joined Neil Armstrong as the first man to walk on the moon in July, 1969, during the Apollo 11 lunar mission, previously disclosed his post-flight battle against mental depression in a book, "Down to Earth."

But not until Saturday had Aldrin acknowledged the depression, which began in 1971, was accompanied by a drinking problem. He left the space program in June that year, and resigned as an Air Force colonel nine months later.

In an interview with UPI, Aldrin said he still had not realized when he wrote the book in 1973 that he was an alcoholic. He said his drinking became progressively worse until he was hospitalized Aug. 7, 1975, for four weeks of treatment. He said he hasn't taken a drink since that day.

Aldrin, 46, now is a research and engineering consultant living in Los Angeles with his second wife, Beverly, whom he married in January.

"I have always been self-centered," he said. "I still am — more than I want to be. This is a danger ... Aldrin said alcoholism, like depression, "is disabling, it hurts, but it can be treated. Some day all this will come out publicly, and we can remove the stigma. Then we can say 'it's okay to be sick, so what can we do about it?'"

(April 21, 1976)

Public notice was given on June 7, 1973, and August 21, 1973, with respect to an application for a major license pursuant to the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a - 825r) filed on March 30, 1973 and revised July 24, 1973 by Power Authority of the State of New York (Correspondence to: Mr. George T. Berry, General Manager and Chief Engineer, Power Authority of the State of New York, 10 Columbus Circle, New York, New York 10019 and to John C. Masto, Esquire, Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 1800 M Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20036) for the proposed Breakabeen Pumped Storage Project No. 2729 which would be located on Schoharie Creek, a tributary of the Mohawk River in Schoharie County, New York, near the Towns of Blenheim, Fulton and Gilboa. The proposed project would affect the interests of interstate or foreign commerce.

Further public notice is hereby given that a supplemental hearing on July 24, 1973 revised application was filed on October 31, 1975 by Applicant, a municipality within the meaning of Section 3 (7) of the Federal Power Act. The supplemental provides environmental and cost data with respect to an additional pumped storage site as a possible alternative to the proposed Breakabeen Project. The additional alternative is known as Prattville and is located in the Towns of Prattville in Greene County, New York, near the Towns of Blenheim, Fulton and Gilboa. The proposed project would affect the interests of interstate or foreign commerce.

Small Claims Revisions Speed Up Court Action

KINGSTON — In the case of The People vs. The People, it is now possible to sue for up to $1,000 in City Court and $500 in Town Justice Court and have the claim handled readily and quickly without the aid or expense of an attorney. Revisions in the Small Claims Court act, recently enacted by the New York State Legislature, now makes such action possible. The change, says Ulster County District Attorney Francis J. Vogt, is only one of a number of important consumer related revisions in the Small Claims Court laws enabling expeditious handling of minor claims at a minimal cost to the complainant. Persons believing themselves to be aggrieved may file suit in Small Claims Court for money damages, Vogt notes, providing they are at least 18 years of age and do not represent a corporation, partnership or association.

What kind of claims does he foresee making up the bulk of cases? "Actions for monies owed," he says. "For example, an inadequate car repair job for which a complainant wants his money back." Mostly, says Vogt, the actions will probably involve sums of money—possibly even automobile accidents where the money is not over $1,000 or $500. The relatively simple procedure in filing a Small Claims suit begins with the complainant appearing before a City Court Clerk or a Town Justice and relating their complaint, or so-called "statement of fact." The jurisdiction of the court in which the case is to be tried is dependent upon the defendant's residence, office or regular place of employment—any of which must be within Ulster County. Upon payment of a $2 filing fee, plus registered mail costs, a registered letter is forwarded to the defendant describing the nature of the claim being brought up against him or her, as well as the hearing date. The hearing, held before a magistrate without a jury is kept as simple as possible. The proceedings are not bound by the general rules of evidence, so the conflicting parties will not require an attorney. After the plaintiff presents his or her side of the story, the defendant is permitted an opportunity to rebut. If red tape and legal snafus are not always avoidable, says Vogt, the complainant can generally expect to have his or her day in court within 10 to 14 days of the original filing date. And, more often than not, the presiding judge will render a decision during the first hearing. If the plaintiff prevails, the judge's decision is reduced to judgement and enforced like any other judgement would be. Not every case appearing before a Small Claims Court justice will be adjudicated, however, Vogt cautions. "Certain problematic areas such as jurisdictional disputes and cases involving counterclaims oftentimes cannot be resolved in Small Claims Court," he says. Where necessary, he notes, the presiding judge may transfer the claim to another court more suitable for disposing of that particular type of dispute. Even so, the plaintiff may continue to represent him or herself, but may find it advisable to hire an attorney. Vogt hails the revision as a "needed reform" that will resolve actions quickly. Previously, individuals often had to wait several years even though they had enlisted the services of an attorney. He also sees it as relieving the case loads of higher courts, along with their backlog burdens. "If you look at the verdicts in Ulster County courts over the years," he says, "you'll see involved sums of money under $1,000 and under $500."

Planting a Liberty Tree

"A Liberty Tree" was donated recently by the Marletown Beautification Committee to the Marletown Elementary School in celebration of the Bicentennial year. Perry Cobb, a member of the committee, who is shown planting the tree, spoke about the tree, an elm, and efforts underway to save it from extinction.

Candidate Pledges Trust

BOICEVILLE—Dexter Olsen, a candidate for the Ontario Board of Education, pledges himself to the restoration of "common sense, cooperation and trust." "I feel that while the type of charges brought against the superintendent of schools may be grounds for not extending his contract, they are not sufficient for prematurely terminating it," Olsen said. "In this emotionalism generated in this district this winter and spring, many people have come to believe that this end justifies the means." "Since the case is currently under review by the Commissioner of Education and his staff, who will presumably render a judgment on the legal merits of the case and free from emotionalism, we should accept the decision and live with it. "If the commissioner decides the superintendent should be reinstated, we need people on the board who are willing and able to cooperate and restore a sense of harmony to the district. The taxpayers should not be subjected to any additional expense with further legal pursuit of the matter. "A major task facing the new board will be that of selecting a successor to Dr. Marlow, since he has stated he would not seek an extension to his contract even if reinstated by the commissioner."

MAC DAVIS

The first songs Mac Davis wrote were titled 'Mau-Mau Mary' 'I Got a Flea on Me' and 'I Don't mess Around with Sally Brown Anymore'. The first song he sold was 'The Phantom Strikes Again' for which Sam the Sham's producer paid $2.42. His price has gone up but his philosophy hasn't changed. The star of the NBC Television Network variety series 'The Mac Davis Show' seen Thursdays at 8:00 PM (E S T) said 'I don't think most people like music with hidden meanings. They don't want to ponder the songs. I just come out and say what I have to say as simply as possible'. Mac's reasoning must be right because it works for him. In addition to writing hit songs for himself, he has written many songs that have become hits for other performers. 'I get a lot of my ideas from catchy phrases people feed me then I draw on my personal experiences when I write lyrics. I never know when I'm going to get an idea but I know when I hear one'. Once at a cocktail party people were milling about with glasses in their hands making small talk when someone asked him, 'What do you believe in'. Disliking philosophical questions and hating even more to seriously consider an answer, Mac came up with the fastest answer he could. 'I believe in music'. Immediately he realized it was a good song and went off to a corner and began to write, 'I Believe in Music'.

The star of the NBC Television Network variety series, 'The Mac Davis Show' seen Thursdays at 8:00 PM (E.S.T.) said: 'I don't think most people like music with hidden meanings. They don't want to ponder the songs. I just come out and say what I have to say as simply as possible.' Mac's reasoning must be right because it works for him. In addition to writing hit songs for himself, he has written many songs that have become hits for other performers. 'I get a lot of my ideas from catchy phrases people feed me, then I draw on my personal experiences when I write lyrics. I never know when I'm going to get an idea but I know when I hear one.' Once at a cocktail party, people were milling about with glasses in their hands making small talk when someone asked him, 'What do you believe in.' Disliking philosophical questions and hating even more to seriously consider an answer, Mac came up with the fastest answer he could, 'I believe in music.' Immediately, he realized it was a good song and went off to a corner and began to write, 'I Believe in Music.'

Don't miss the quilts!

any events have been held at UCCC's Stone Ridge campus over the years. Some have been great and others - well, perhaps it's better left unsaid.

But this past Sunday (May 2) UCCC's Art Gallery opened an exhibit that will be remembered for many years to come.

The Ulster County Bicentennial Quilt 1976 was officially displayed along with some 87 other handmade quilts.

The turnout for this special event was impressive and between the ooh's and ah's such adjectives as stupendous, beautiful and fantastic could be overheard throughout the gallery.

"I had no idea it was going to be this nice," exclaimed one visitor. And nice it is.

The 42 block quilt depicts a person, place or event of historic or scenic interest within Ulster County.

Ruth Culver, Kingston, supervised and coordinated the entire project which she reported, "took exactly one year to the day to complete".

Somehow she managed to coordinate 42 women, many total strangers, into undertaking this magnificent project. The women met in groups either at Mrs. Culver's home or at each others homes.

Ruth Culver said she cannot fully explain the feeling of closeness that the group soon began to feel for each other and this project.

There were, along with the 42 women who each designed and researched their own block, many others who became involved in this project. It soon turned into a family and community affair. According to Ruth Culver, there were over 200 members from the quilters families, 100 community members involved in research and the numerous members of the UCCC staff, Bicentennial Committee and the Visual Arts Gallery who finally put it all together and made it possible. Over 100 hours of time was spent on each block and over 6,000 hours spent to complete the entire project. "It was a lot of planning, work and dedication that we all shared," explained Mrs. Culver. The time was on a volunteer basis; the project received no funding making it indicative of true community dedication. This community feeling was indeed present at the opening exhibit - families, friends and even some tourists turned out in large numbers to view what is indeed an "historic event in Ulster County." Many of the 42 women were present and remembrances of the last year could be overheard as you tried to view the quilt through the large crowds. It was also evident that their quilting spirit didn't end when the quilt went on exhibit. The quilters who were present were dressed in either Bicentennial costumes or quilt costumes. Rosemarie Raymond brightened the scene in her "quilt" dress which was a quilt made by her grandmother some 90 years ago. It was basted so that it could easily be returned to its original form. Marie Hrouda, was costumed in an 1890's dress while others wore similar costumes, adding color everywhere. Mrs. Winifred West, who quilted Overlook Mountain, expressed an emotion that many of the other women also shared, "everyone put so much into this quilt, but we also had a great devotion to Ruth". They all agreed that Mrs. Culver's great enthusiasm to this project was an inspiration to each of them. The beauty of the quilt is the perfectionism that you can view. Each block individually and the quilt as an entire artform shows the carefully detailed work that was stitched with love. It was professionally done, or so you would think. But, explained Mrs. Culver, many of the women knew basic quilting techniques but were by no means professional. Hildebrand Pleva is evidence of this - she completed her own first quilt, "Schoolhouse," while learning and working on the Bicentennial quilt. Everyone was awed and impressed. Both Bob Brown, president of UCCC and Pete Savago, chairman of the Ulster County Legislature, seemed at a loss for words. They admitted they had no idea of the intricacy of the quilt and both felt proud when they viewed it. They agreed that this quilt is a tribute to Ulster County and its residents. Mayor Koenig also praised the women and was also impressed with the fine detail and color throughout the quilt. The Ulster County Bicentennial Quilt highlights the show, Image of the American Quilt; but there are other very impressive and important quilts on display along with it. Some of them include a Centennial Quilt made in Ulster County of U.S. flags, its dated 1876; the Empire State, a quilt of New York State marking the various counties; Birds of the New Paltz area depicting chickadees, goldfinch, red-winged and other area birds; and Ohio Star Presentation Quilt made by 20 Stockaders, ages 13 to 17, which will be quilted by the visitors during this exhibition. The quilts included are patchwork, applique and crazy quilts which were made during the Centennial of the U.S., World War I and the Depression along with some made recently. Image of the American Quilt will be exhibited at the UCCC Visual Arts Gallery at the Stone Ridge campus through May 28. It will be permanently displayed in Ulster County after a one-year tour. Plans are incomplete at this time. Ulster County Bicentennial Quilt is, explains Mrs. Culver, "a birthday present to the Bicentennial" and this quilt is dedicated to the people of Ulster County in the hope that by looking at their past, they will find inspiration for the future". What better reason to view this truly remarkable exhibit?

The Gallery is open daily Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on selected weekends.

The Home of Fred J. Johnston

Fred J. Johnston has had a love affair with Kingston from as far back as he can remember. His four-story home at 63 Main Street, with its many beautifully furnished rooms and 11 fireplaces, is a testimonial of his unrelenting determination to restore, recreate, beautify Kingston.

Right after the depression, at a time when people just didn't seem to care anymore, when property was going to ruin, historical heritage ignored, beautiful stone houses were being torn down at random, a very young Fred Johnston had an "impossible dream." Seeing this sad state of slow decay, his boyhood dream was to bring the area back to its original handsome appearance.

It was 1938 when the building at 63 Main Street was scheduled to be torn down to make room for a gas station. The neighborhood had begun to deteriorate. There was no Landmarks Commission then, no feeling of restoration among the inhabitants. Equipped with the courage of youth and bent on his obsession to salvage the city, he bought the property to keep it from being torn down. From the moment he crossed the threshold, he knew he was home.

The four-story frame structure was built in the latter part of the 18th century by John Sudam. Sudam had impressive personal friends, including Washington Irving and President Van Buren, whom he entertained at his home. The Sudam family resided in the residence until 1855. At that time, a gentleman by the name of Van Leuven bought the place and called it Van Leuven Mansion, a name by which it is still known today....through an agreement with the former owners and Mr. Johnston. It's interesting to note that over a period of about 150 years, only two families had lived in that house.

Johnston has carefully restored the landmark to practically its entire original conception. It was a labor of love. There are elaborate furnishings, irreplaceable antiques, period chandeliers, fabulous paintings, exquisite china, fascinating rugs — the one in the drawing room where we talked had belonged to Robert Fulton. The summer dining room in the basement is one of the few in the Hudson Valley. The gardens have been restored to their original splendor. Everything echoes authenticity.

Today, as head of the City Beautification Committee, Fred Johnston continues his efforts to make Kingstonians conscious of their beautiful old homes. He feels his initial attempt back in 1938 to save the historic house at 63 Main Street launched a series of restoration projects which helped bring a whole neighborhood back to its original handsome appearance.

It's obvious that Fred J. Johnston enjoys being surrounded by beauty. His home is one of the great Federal houses of New York State, but to Fred J. Johnston, first and foremost, it's HOME.

The Monitor, Our Underwater Treasure

In the waters, some 17 miles off the coast of Cape Hatteras, North Carolina, there is a very special spot. The spot is so unusual that the government has named it our country's first Marine Sanctuary (a sanctuary is a protected place).

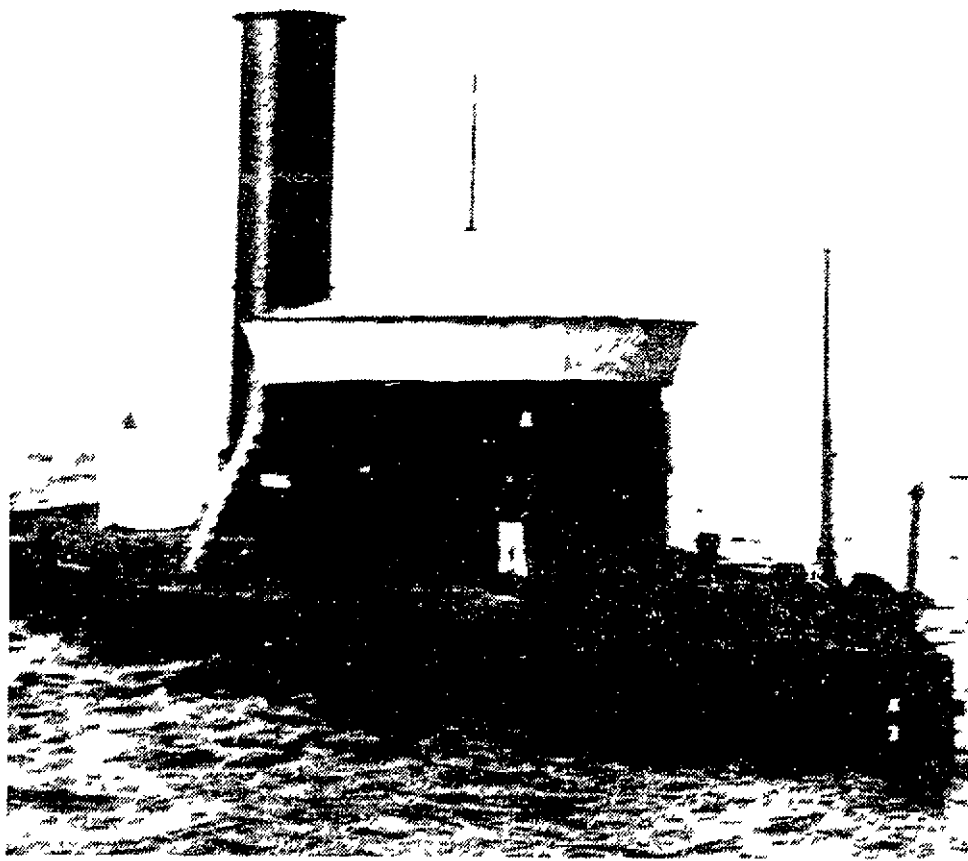

The government took this action to stop looters, treasure hunters or just curious people from disturbing what lies 220 feet below the surface, the famous ironclad Union gunboat, the Monitor.

The Monitor was important because it marked the switch from wood to iron construction and sail to steam power. Future war vessels were patterned after this Civil War ship.

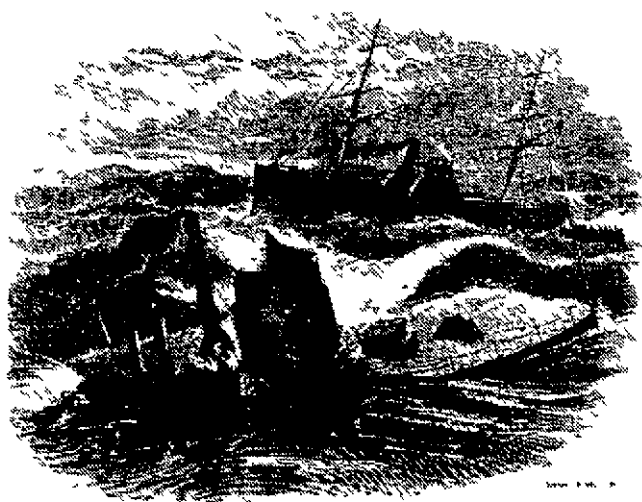

Underwater archaeologists (archaeologists are people who study the remains of past human activities) have been looking for the Monitor for years. The ship did not sink in battle. She went down in rough seas in December of 1862. It was so hard to find the wreck because it sank in what is known as "The Graveyard of the Atlantic," a spot where many ships have gone down.

After the archaeologists discovered the Monitor in 1973, they lowered cameras to take pictures. They did not want to touch it because it is so fragile. It has been underwater for over 110 years.

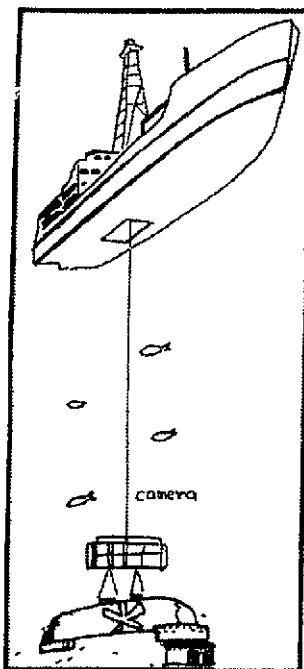

Some people would like to try to bring up the Monitor. Others say it would not be a good idea since the ship would most likely break into pieces. Scientists want to study it more. They want to find out what secrets this famous old ship has locked inside.

The Monitor was called a "cheesebox on a raft." She was the first ship built of iron. (Photos courtesy the State Department of Archives and History in Raleigh, North Carolina.)

The ship Rhode Island stands by without being able to help as the Monitor begins to sink in rough waters on December 31, 1862.

Scientists lower cameras to take pictures of the fragile Monitor.

Edith McSpirit's

a trouble-shooter

ave you always thought of trouble shooting as basically a he-man profession? Wrong! Edith McSpirit is one of a growing number of successful women in this wide-open field where the work is absorbing, schedules varied and average pay for women equal to that of men.

To watch Edie at work as a trouble-shooting toll switchman for the New York Telephone Company is to admire her energy, success and talent at her job. To the layman, the innermost recesses of the telephone building on Broadway is a jungle of tangled wires and a maze of switchboards and electronic circuits. To Edie and the men she works alongside, it is simply a place where a job must be done.

And that job is to make sure the special services purchased by private line customers in Kingston and numerous other areas is working for them 24 hours a day. Those customers include local businesses, newspapers, banks, State Police, radio stations, fire departments, government agencies and teletype services.

And when emergencies happen, the work is anything but quiet. It means shooting troubles indoors and out.

And it often means being awakened in the middle of the night, grabbing screw drivers, cutters and other normally masculine accoutrements, jumping in a truck and heading for the trouble scene to work out all the bugs as quickly as possible.

Still, Edie likes the work even though it's highly technical and requires a thorough understanding of very sophisticated electronics equipment.

She and her boss, Central Office Foreman Joe Font, admit it's hard to explain their trouble shooting work on toll circuits to outsiders. People in general have a total misconception of telephone companies, they feel.

Says Joe, "Most people visualize telephone workers as men who install phones in houses or hang off a pole fixing wires, or as girls who are operators." Adds Edie, "Much, much more takes places behind the scenes."

She started working behind the scenes four years ago after five years with the telephone company on a clerical job. When she heard that women were being tested for craft jobs such as the one she now holds, she took the test and passed with flying colors.

She has since taken various formalized training courses to learn the uses of new carrier systems and other types of equipment. They were courses far more advanced in the fields of technical knowledge than any she took at Kingston High School, from which she graduated, or at the Poughkeepsie business school she attended.

How do male switchmen react to the competition of a lone woman? Always gallantly, according to both Edie and Joe.

Explains Edie, "This wasn't considered a woman's job when I first began working here. But that was because women themselves never came into the field. The company never had any objections against women doing the job if they were qualified."

Edie, who says she's very happy doing what she's doing, scurries up and down tall extension ladders, handles a soldering iron with expertise, talks a jargon spiced with references to circuits, message boards, metallic cable, trunk services, horizontal and vertical sides and digital carrier systems to distant cities. She can wire in a whole system and test it all out, an accomplishment that seems incredibly involved when she explains that it's possible to put 24 circuits on one pair of wires.

"There's a lot of close connecting involved to build up a circuit desired by the customer," she says, "and constant maintenance." On call 24 hours a day, she sometimes runs the whole place by herself on a weekend. To the innocent abroad in the electronic engineering maze she runs, that seems equivalent to handling a moon shot single handed.

There have been times when she's had to jump out of bed twice in one night. That's because she's "qualified in every aspect of the job," says Joe Font. "Whatever any of the men do, she also does—no matter how complicated."

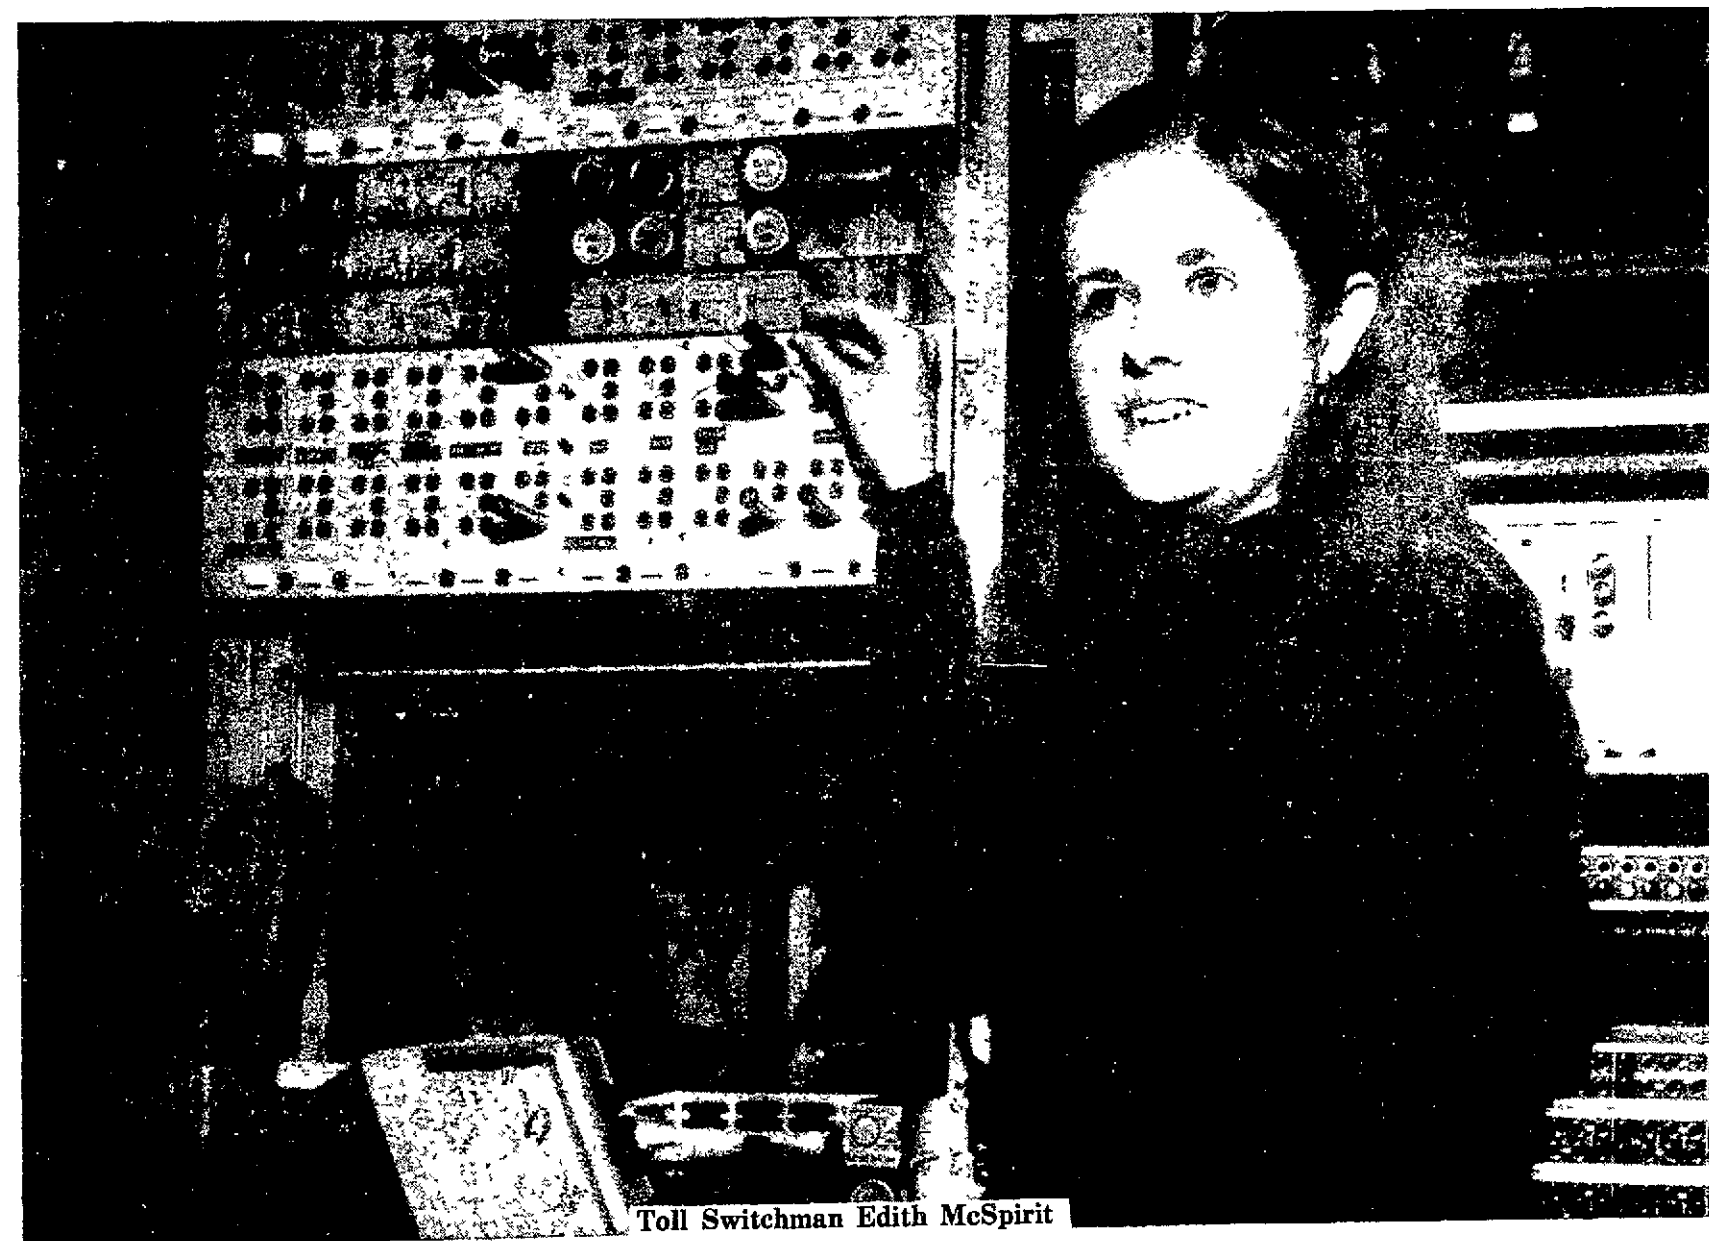

But when she's not working, she chooses to emphasize her femininity by sewing and doing handicrafts. She also likes to travel; has been to Europe several times.

But it is her work that's most important to her: "It's incredibly interesting," she says, "and it's something I'll never know everything about."

And what about marriage? Sighs Edie, "You almost have to be single if you're going to have to jump out of bed in the middle of the night."

Until that's resolved, she'll continue her constant training and retraining since electronics is in a constant state of advancement.

As far as Edie is concerned, hers is not a "masculine" job. "Everybody has a chance to get a job like this," she says, "if they are interested and can meet the qualifications of the job." Tobie Geertsema

As far as Edie is concerned, hers is not a "masculine" job. "Everybody has a chance to get a job like this," she says, "if they are interested and can meet the qualifications of the job." Tobie Geertsema

The Paper on the Wall Trick

"I can make this paper stick to the wall without using nails, glue or sticky tape."

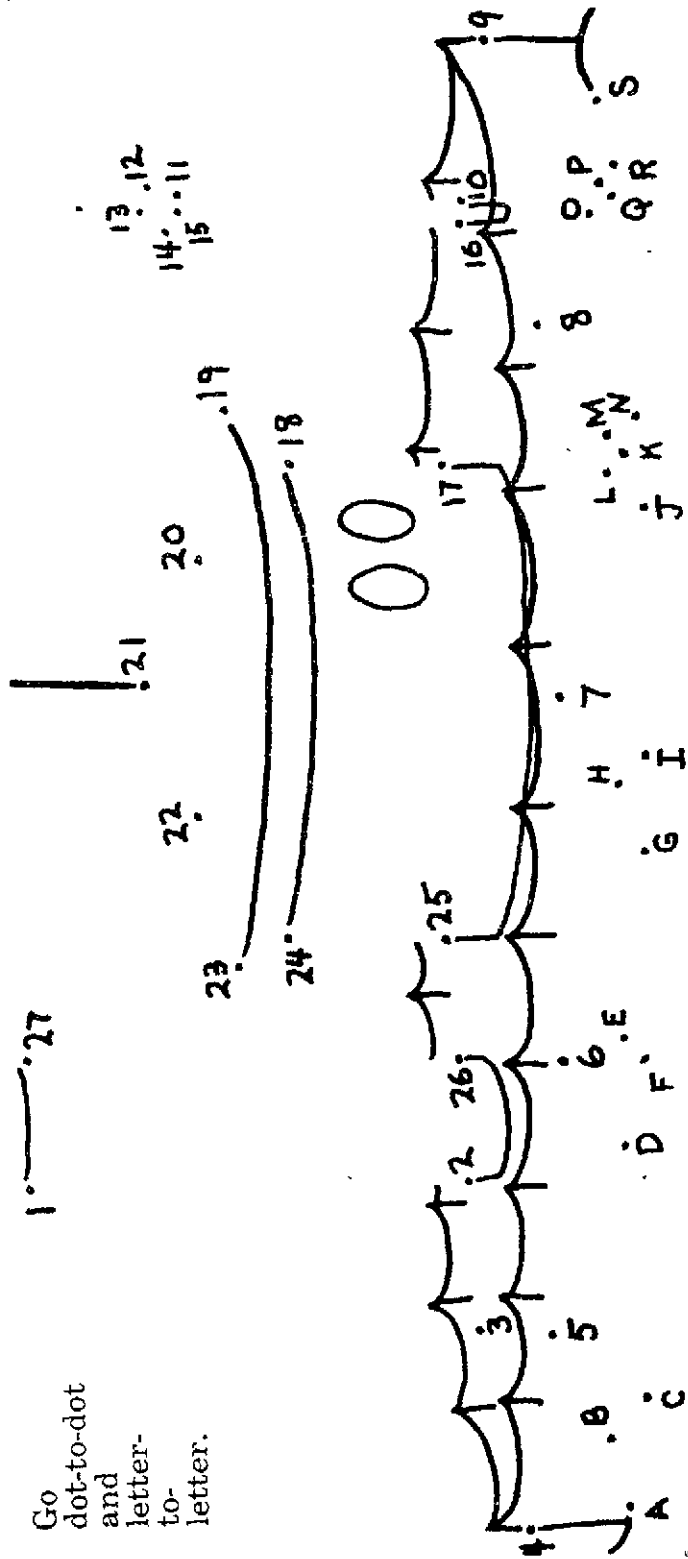

What to do:

Hold a piece of paper against a flat wall. Size 8½x11 will do fine. Rub the side of a pencil rapidly against it while you count to 120 slowly (about 2 minutes). Now take your pencil away and let go. You might want to have a contest with several friends to see whose paper stays the longest.

FROM GARBAGE TO GARDEN BECAUSE ENOUGH PEOPLE CARED.

A dump transformed into a paradise. Impossible? Not when enough people in a community get together and work.

You can help by becoming a community volunteer in your area. We'd like to send you the name of the Keep America Beautiful group nearest you.

—BY JOEY SASSO—

INSIDE THE TUBE The saga of Cher Bono is shaping up as a major Hollywood tragedy The 30-year old superstar the darling of TV only two short years ago, is on a downward spiral which if not checked soon could make her a has been Her TV show is in trouble Her personal life is a series of disasters Her standing with the American public is declining The sultry entertainer is in danger of losing everything to the cruel crunch of the Hollywood glitter machine If something isn't done fast said a source close to the Idaho-born star, Cher could end up on show business skid row, so to speak There is talk she will be off TV by next season unless her ratings take an unexpected jump What a pity! She is so talented and lovely and so pushed around by everyone who claims to be looking out for her best interests She can't seem to get her personal life together that hurts with the public who came to see her as a symbol of hip purity when she was married to Sonny Sonny Bono recently agreed to rejoin his ex-wife on her TV show in an effort to stop the downward spiral of her ratings The play worked but only to an extent The ratings perked a little But the figures make it clear that Cher is not nearly as popular with the public as she was in the glory days of 1972-73 There are rumors the show may not be renewed Freddie Prinze proudly announced (a) the birth of his son and (b) the fact that he's 21 and allowed to drink Teacher's Scotch When the hospital intercom calls for Dr Steve Kiley next fall, James Brolin probably won't be there to answer The handsome actor finally has brought suit to get out of his Universal Studios contract for MARCUS WELBY MD at the end of the current season Brolin who has been trying to get out of the popular TV series for two years complains the producers don't take him seriously as an actor Robert Young, star of the show presumably will assume Brolin's patient load if the latter wins his suit We saw Faye Dunaway in the Rainbow Room sipping Hennessy the soothing way to conclude a dinner

TV OFF BEAT Talk about the high price of liquor Dean Martin had a scotch and water that cost him $6500 He bet wife Kathy a fur coat that he was off the sauce so when he couldn't hold out and ordered a drink Kathy ran all the way to Beverly Hills furrier Abe Lipsey and bought a sable David Janssen and Jean Seberg enjoyed PADDY Irish Whiskey before a line dinner at the Rainbow Grill They capped the evening with METAXA Brandy Liqueur and left arm-in-arm looking pleased Lovely TV movie actress Goldie Hawn is happy and pregnant And she is still legally married to Gus Trikonis—who is not the father of her child The new daddy is Bill Hudson, of the Hudson Brothers show group Goldie is making a deal with her husband to pay him $75,000 in cash as an out of court settlement so that he doesn't hold up her divorce As of now her divorce should become final in June Goldie and her new husband to be plan to celebrate her independence by tying the knot on or before the July 4th weekend The baby is due about four weeks later At the moment she is looking forward to settling all her marital uncertainties before the baby arrives It's going to be close but Goldie's confident She told me Love is a many splendored thing for me and Bill

POUNDING THE TV BEAT According to DAYTIME TV MAGAZINE's June issue there's news that Janice Lynde, who plays Leslie Eliot in ANOTHER WORLD has made a pilot for the Norman Lear Company, in which she plays the title role ROXY

A LOOK INSIDE TV For glamorous good vision says Bernadette Peters, get yourself fitted with Easywear Cosmetic Contact Lenses from Vent Air Optics Steve Forrest seems to have little in common with Lt Hondo Harrelson the tough but cool cop in charge of the Special Weapons and Tactics Team (S.W.A.T.) that he portrays on the tube Rather than surrounding building with snipers or roaring directions to his men through a bullhorn Forrest can be found picking his guitar and playing some old down home country songs from his native Texas One of his fellow cast members paid him this tribute The respect we give him on the show reflects the way we feel about him as an actor and as a man Are you a smoker who enjoys good taste in cigarettes and thinks about tar and nicotine too? Then you're a smoker for NOW the new low tar low-nicotine cigarette that satisfies Could Entertainment has now placed THE PRESIDENTS in 55 markets The mini series from Post Newsweek and Scripps Howard debuts nationally April 25th as a monthly prime time hour and stars James Garner

FROM GARBAGE TO GARDEN BECAUSE ENOUGH PEOPLE CARED.

A dump transformed into a paradise. Impossible? Not when enough people in a community get together and work.

through channels

—BY JOEY SASSO—

INSIDE THE TUBE: The saga of Cher Bono is shaping up as a major Hollywood tragedy. The 30-year-old superstar, the darling of TV only two short years ago, is on a downward spiral which, if not checked soon, could make her a has-been. Her TV show is in trouble. Her personal life is a series of disasters. Her standing with the American public is declining. The sultry entertainer is in danger of losing everything to the cruel crunch of the Hollywood glitter machine. 'If something isn't done fast,' said a source close to the Idaho-born star, 'Cher could end up on show business' skid row, so to speak. There is talk she will be off TV by next season unless her ratings take an unexpected jump. What a pity! She is so talented and lovely - and so pushed around by everyone who claims to be looking out for her best interests. She can't seem to get her personal life together - that hurts with the public, who came to see her as a symbol of 'hip purity,' when she was married to Sonny. Sonny Bono recently agreed to rejoin his ex-wife on her TV show in an effort to stop the downward spiral of her ratings. The ploy worked - but only to an extent. The ratings perked a little. But the figures make it clear that Cher is not nearly as popular with the public as she was in the glory days of 1972-73. There are rumors the show may not be renewed... Freddie Prinze proudly announced (a) the birth of his son, and (b) the fact that he's 21 and allowed to drink Teacher's Scotch... When the hospital intercom calls for Dr. Steve Kiley next fall, James Brolin probably won't be there to answer. The handsome actor finally has brought suit to get out of his Universal Studios contract for 'MARCUS WELBY MD,' at the end of the current season. Brolin, who has been trying to get out of the popular TV series for two years, complains the producers don't take him seriously as an actor. Robert Young, star of the show, presumably will assume Brolin's patient load if the latter wins his suit... We saw Faye Dunaway in the Rainbow Room, sipping Hennessy, the soothing way to conclude a dinner...

TV OFF BEAT: Talk about the high price of liquor, Dean Martin had a scotch-and-water that cost him $6,500. He bet wife Kathy a fur coat that he was off the sauce; so when he couldn't hold out and ordered a drink, Kathy ran all the way to Beverly Hills furrier Abe Lipsey and bought a sable... David Janssen and Jean Seberg enjoyed PADDY Irish Whiskey before a fine dinner at the Rainbow Grill. They capped the evening with METAXA Brandy Liqueur, and left arm-in-arm, looking pleased... Lovely TV-movie actress Goldie Hawn is happy and pregnant. And she is still legally married to Gus Trikonis - who is not the father of her child. The new daddy is Bill Hudson, of the Hudson Brothers show group. Goldie is making a deal with her husband to pay him $75,000 in cash as an out of court settlement, so that he doesn't hold up their divorce. As of now, her divorce should become final in June. Goldie and her new husband-to-be plan to celebrate her independence by tying the knot on or before the July 4th weekend. The baby is due about four weeks later. At the moment, she is looking forward to settling all her marital uncertainties before the baby arrives. It's going to be close, but Goldie's confident. She told me, 'Love is a many splendored thing for me and Bill.'...

A LOOK INSIDE TV: For glamorous good vision, says Bernadette Peters, get yourself fitted with Easywear Cosmetic Contact Lenses, from Vent-AIR Optics... Steve Forrest seems to have little in common with Lt. Hondo Harrelson, the tough but cool cop in charge of the Special Weapons and Tactics Team (S.W.A.T.), that he portrays on the tube. Rather than surrounding building with snipers, or roaring directions to his men through a bullhorn, Forrest can be found picking his guitar and playing some old 'down home' country songs from his native Texas. One of his fellow cast-members paid him this tribute: 'The respect we give him on the show reflects the way we feel about him as an actor and as a man.'... Are you a smoker who enjoys good taste in cigarettes, and thinks about tar and nicotine, too? Then you're a smoker for NOW, - the new low-tar, low-nicotine cigarette that satisfies... Gould Entertainment has now placed 'THE PRESIDENTS' in 55 markets. The mini-series from Post-Newsweek and Scripps Howard debuts nationally April 25th as a monthly prime-time hour, and stars James Garner...
